"You may be sure of it," he said. "I have given up my efforts in this direction. But at the end of the month I hope to have ready an inert gas, which in war time can be dropped over cities and extinguish the whole population painlessly. It will, if it succeeds, provide a wonderful method of waging a war. If you care to, I would like to have you come over when I turn loose the first cloud of it from the top of that mountain over there."

I don't know what became of him or his experiment. It couldn't have worked, for he'd either have passed on or been in jail by this time. But I took no chances. We closed up the house and moved three hundred miles away the next day, without leaving any mailing address.

Longest City in World

The city of Honolulu is 2,260 miles long, the longest in the world. Maps made by the Hydrographic office of the Navy department assign this unusual length to it. But most of the city's area is water. Honolulu city and the county of Honolulu are coterminous, both embracing the 40-mile-long island of Oahu.

Thomas Edmondson of Lancaster, England, invented the railroad ticket. He was a station master and booking clerk on the Newcastle and Carlisle railway. He also invented a ticket case which remained in use without improvement until the invention of an American ticket case in 1874.

Sessions of Congress

Article XX of the United States Constitution, section 2, reads: "The congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall begin at noon on the third day of January, unless they shall by law appoint a different day." No certain date is set for adjournment.

TYPE OF DRESS ALWAYS CORRECT

PATTERN 2029

Here is a dress with real character. Its nice simple lines are made interesting by an original jabot, or in one with the soft shoulders. Gathers relieve any tendency toward severity while vertical seams, released into pleats below the knees, define the skirt and give an illusion of slenderness. It's the type of dress you can wear and wear—every place. Use for a smart spring season, select matelasse crepe—or one with definite surface interest, of which the shops are full—and choose a lovely new color. Gray and greige are important now, as are navy blues and shades of brown. Sleeves may be made long.

Pattern 2029 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 4⅛ yards 39-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address, and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

Desperate Plight of the Share-Croppers

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

HALF of all the farming in the United States is done by tenant farmers. Most of them are in the southern states, and te their numbers—there are some 000 of them, mostly cotton farm- 10 of these states—they have of come to be regarded as the "for- men" of the New Deal's agricul- experimenting.

Then began to fall. The machine, had been steadily growing as a became a competitor real and helming. obably the first really comprehen- nalysis of the situation was that ly made public by the committee nority groups in economic recov- eaded by Dr. E. R. Embree of o, president of the Julius B. wald fund. As might be supposed Doctor Embree's presence (for e Mr. Rosenwald was far famed sympathy with the black race), inal purpose of the commit- rvey was to investigate the of the agricultural negro in th. Practically all of the in- the number of tenant-farmers is accounted for by whites, ately 200,000 of them, who to keep a hold on their A good share of the tenant and others have been released world with no means of sup- port until millions who should be getting a living from southern soil are now on the relief rolls. Last year one family in every four was on relief.

Chances Are Slim.

According to the report, the tenant farmer's chances of recovery are slim under a credit system which enables the landowner to borrow money at 4½ to 6½ per cent interest while "the tenant farmer cannot secure this cheap credit unless the landowner waives his first lien on the crop." The landowner can seldom afford to do this.

"If he refuses to release the crop lien to the governmental agency, the Federal Farm Credit administration, the landlord may then secure the loan for all his tenant farmers at 4½ to 6½ per cent, and then advance supplies and furnishings to his tenants at customary prices—20 to 30 per cent above cash prices.

"Here again the tenant bears the brunt of the risk. If he can repay, his surplus is wiped out by the extortionate credit charges; if he cannot repay, he loses his crop and whatever work stock he may possess," says the report.

"So far the various debt reconciliation commissions have made no attempt to have the landlords scale down the debts owed them from previous seasons by croppers and share tenants. Such proposals would be resented, no doubt, by landowners who had just had their debts scaled down by creditors."

Doctor Embree's committee says that the United States must "reorganize the system of land tenure in the South." The negro problem has long been an obstacle to such a program, but the committee is of the opinion that the country has "seriously overestimated the importance of the negro farmers numerically as competitors, since tenancy in the South has come to be essentially a problem of white farmers."

The committee distinctly frowned upon continuing indefinitely to encourage landlords to cut down their production. It advised the raising of crops other than cotton in the Southeast, "with foreign competition in cotton growing increasing and Texas and Oklahoma able to furnish all the cotton needed for the national market at cheaper cost of production." Yet it admits an advantage in the fact that the government, having cut down cotton growing by some 8,000,000 acres, is in a position to force a balanced agriculture on farmers who can't get cotton off their minds.

No money crops and no crops to be sold can be raised on these 8,000,000 acres. Rather, crops for home use are encouraged, as well as crops which tend to improve the soil and prevent erosion and leaching.

"In the course of time the government might find the outright purchasing of certain farming lands less expensive than the payments of rents. Such payments rightly expended would serve to start worthy tenants in land ownership and remunerate large and absentee owners for portions of their excessive holdings," the committee says.

Would Need Help.

Of course such farmers turned loose upon their own land, but restrained from raising the only crop with which most of them are familiar or experienced would need helpful supervision, but their properties—small subsistence homesteads—might bid fair to approach the economic state of some of the most prosperous peasant-owned farms in Europe, the committee believes.

Such a program would certainly meet with approval from the thousands of homeless share-croppers who have hit the southern roads without food or chattels, bound in most cases for the cities, there to seek what relief they can from the proper agencies. Some of them write to the President in pitiful, hardly readable letters, imploring him to aid them. Some of them have formed the Southern Tenant Farmers' union, whose allegedly radical members have been said to be the instigators of violence in some instances.

Designed to give these tenant farmers land of their own, after the manner of European land-owning peasants, is the Bankhead bill, proposed by Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama, father of the glamorous Tallulah Bankhead, the stage and screen star, and a member of a family which has represented Alabama for many years in the government. It is quite in accord with the suggestions of the committee under Doctor Embree.

The Bankhead bill, which at this writing had gained a unanimously favorable report from a house committee, would provide legislation patterned after that which has allowed the tenant farmer of Ireland, Denmark, Finland and Germany to become a landowner. What has been done for owners of mortgaged homes, it plans to do for the share-cropper—make federal credit available to lift him out of the financial morass.

Senator Bankhead contends that the administration's crop reduction and tax on processing were measures adopted in defense of the farmers, protecting them from curtailed production by industries and manufacturers after the crash. In sharp opposition to him has been Senator Millard F. Tydings of Maryland, who claims that the only result of the whole Roosevelt "economics of scarcity" program has been to reduce the total wealth of the nation. He demands the end of crop curtailment by the AAA.

Bankhead Explains.

Senator Bankhead points out that the United States at the start of 1933 was faced with the biggest cotton surplus on record, a full year's crop of 13,000,000 bales, the effect of which was to cause a tremendous drop in cotton prices. Cotton was 19½ cents a pound in 1929, but by 1932 it had fallen off to 5½ cents a pound, he pointed out, explaining that the processing tax was designed to give the farmers the same "scarcity" which manufacturers had effected to maintain their prices.

"The more money you put into people's hands, the more they can buy," was Senator Tydings' answer. "The higher the price, the less they can buy. If the cost of goods is increased, then consumption is reduced. The higher the price of cotton, then the less you can sell."

Doctor Embree's committee was more interested in Senator Bankhead's proposals to enable the tenant farmer to gain independence.

"Life in the rural South is capable of being lived to the fullest," said its report. "In our modern scheme of things it has proved much easier to produce a steady flow of goods than to produce a steady income with which to purchase those goods or their equivalent. Of all the laborers and craftsmen, the general or all-round farmer is the only one able to produce the type and variety of goods suitable for his own consumption.

Fundamental Changes.

"In the South we have lost much of this immunity to the fluctuations of the price system by an almost insane devotion to an export cash crop whose price fluctuations have become proverbial. This is due, no doubt, to the historical conjunction of slavery, the plantation and the cotton plant.

"Theoretically, the area saw slavery abolished. Actually, it changed the plantation pattern to tenancy and incorporated a white peasantry which finally came to outnumber the negro tenants in cotton culture.

"The plantation is not interested in feeding its lower-level denizens with the vegetables, milk, meats and fruits of a beneficent soil and clime, but only wants its cash crop of cotton.

"Meanwhile, the system supplies its laborers with a meager diet of fatback, corn pone and molasses under as extortionate a credit system as can be found in the world's agriculture."

Tenant farmers will undoubtedly find the bluebird singing for them once more, possibly in trees on a farm of their own, when the administration gets around to spending the much-talked-about $4,800,000,000.

For much of this is going to make rural America all over again, principally by moving broken farmers to new and fertile fields where they can start all over again, on land described in deeds made out in their own names. Mr. Rexford Guy Tugwell will superintend the rural remaking.

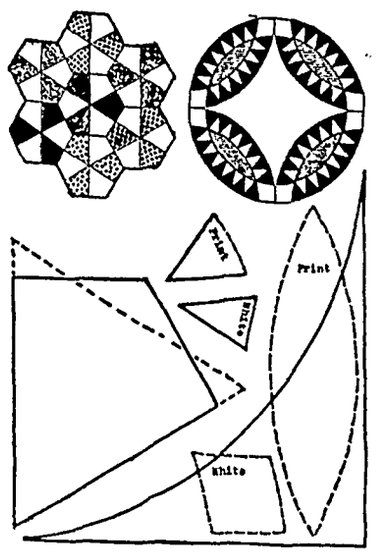
CORRECT GUIDES TO QUILT MAKING

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



The cutting diagrams for Colonial quilt No. 97B and Indian Wedding Ring No. 90B are offered to quilt makers who are particular to have the patches cut out right. These cutouts include the seam allowance. It is necessary to cut the patches out right if you want neat results. The Indian Wedding Ring has five different pieces to be cut out and the Colonial Garden only one. The triangle shown is sometimes used when the Colonial quilt is set together, leaving a running vine between units. The Indian Wedding Ring is identical with the Double Wedding Ring, only more patches are used to produce the effect.

Send 10 cents to our quilt department and we will mail both of these cutout sets postpaid.

Should Be Ideal Abode for the Work Dodger

The ideal house for the lazy man—or lazy woman—has been placed on exhibition at Chicago. The house, which is the brain child of a group of scientists headed by Mr. Charles G. Kettering, the well-known motor engineer, stands in a sunken garden and to all appearance is quite normal.

But it is completely air-conditioned, has an automatic weather-control system, and teems with labor-saving devices. If the sun comes out suddenly from behind the clouds the awnings of the house are lowered automatically by electric motors. When the sun disappears, they are automatically drawn up. If a sudden storm arises there is no need to worry about windows left open; a sensitive recorder on each window acts as a watchdog, and a concealed mechanism immediately shuts the window in case of need.

The temperature inside the house can be controlled by pressing a button, and with the same minimum of effort furniture can be shifted into any desired position.—London Tit-Bits.

CUT LAWNS HIGH IN SUMMER

It is important to have the lawn grass rather long durng the hot, dry weather of summer and to let the lawn go into the winter in this same condition, asserts V. T. Stoutmeyer, ofi the Department of Rorticulture at Iowa State College.

Grass is often injured by improper mowing and abrupt shortening of the lawn at these two periods will result in severe damage. The height ofi the grass should be changed gradually in order to allow it to adjust itself to new conditions. As a general rule, healthier turf will result if cutting is rather high, although more work is required to keep the lawn in attractive condition. There will usually be less trouble with weeds with a high cut One and one-half inches is about the minimum for the healthiest growth ofi grass in summer.

ALL-IOWA MEMORIAL SERVICE TO BE BROADCAST OVER WOI

Memorial Day services, sponsored jointly by Iowa State College and the city of Ames, will be broadcast Memorial Day from 9:45 until 11:15 a. m. over WOI.

Various towns and communities in the state which have not felt able to prepare their own memorial services have indicated that they plan to pick up the WOI service. The program is being planned especially so that it will be appropriate for listening groups throughout the state.

The services will open with pipe organ music from one of the Ames churches. Appropriate music will be given by various patriotic organzations. The memorial address will be delivered by the Rev. E. A. Elliot o. the United Brethren Church, Des Moines.

WATCH CATTLE FOR BLOAT

If your cattle bloat when running on legume pasture, Dr. K. W. Stoutter, extension veterinarian, advises these measures which will tend to prevent the trouble.

Keep cattle off damp or wet pastures. Never allow hungry or starved cattle to fill up on legume pasture. Be sure cattle running on legume pasture have access to water at all times. Provide a mineral mixture of salt, lime and sulfur. Allow the cattle to become accustomed to legume pastures by pasturing them for an hour or two at a time.

Peas Put Starch in You

IF you feel a little limp, these first warm days, perhaps you need starch. You can freshen up your spring meals by adding green peas to many dishes, and at the same time provide yourself with the necessary starch content which is apt to be lacking when you begin to cut down on bread, potatoes and the heavier starch-containing foods.

Let us see what interesting and appetizing things we can do with these invaluable peas. Here are some suggestions.

Healthful and Appetizing

Jellied Cheese and Vegetable Salad: Dissolve one package of lemon gelatin in boiling water and add one tablespoon vinegar and a few grains of salt. Cool. Take one-half cup of the gelatin and stir into one cup of cottage cheese, then pour in the bottoms of eight individual molds which have been wet with cold water. Set in the refrigerator to stiffen. When the rest of the gelatin is beginning to thicken, add one cup of drained canned peas and carrots and three-fourths cup of shredded cabbage. Pour into the molds, chill, and unmold. Serve on lettuce hearts with mayonnaise.

Potage Longchamps: Add two tablespoons chopped parsley and the contents of one No. 2 can of peas which have been strained (and the liquor reserved), to two tablespoons butter in a large skillet. Cook gently for five minutes. Press through a sieve. Make a roux of two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour and add slowly the pea liquor combined with enough milk to make two cups. Add one chicken bouillon cube and the pea pulp, cooking until smooth and creamy. Add one-half cup of rich cream and season well with salt and pepper. Serve with a spoonful of slightly salted whipped cream on top. This serves five persons.

WEED ERADICATION PROGRAM SHOULD START AT ONCE

Farmers with large areas of perennial weeds should begin an intensive eradication program not later than the last of May or early June if favorable results are to be expected, according to Dr. R. H. Porter, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State College.

Wherever a program of summer fallow and cropping is to be followed, the first plowing should be done almost immediately in this section of the country. Abundant moisture and warm weather will give the weeds considerable start unless they are checked soon.

After the weed infested area has been plowed, it should be cultivated at least once a week, depending upon the growing conditions, until August or September. In the case of Canada thistle, the areas then may be seeded to alfalfa, providing the soil characteristics are favorable to such a plan. Leave the alfalfa on the land as long as it will remain seeded.

If an attempt is made to eradicate such weeds as perennial pepper grass, leafy spurge and European morning glory, winter rye will prove a better crop for late summer and early fall seeding than alfalfa. This crop will produce late fall and early spring pasture. The second year the program should be repeated.

MORE OF CORN-HOG PACT WORK DONE THIS YEAR

Progress of the corn-hog program in the state may seem slower this year, but it is quite likely that the program will be completed sooner and a higher percentage of the signers receive their checks earlier than last year, says Ben V. Grebe, chairman of the county allotment committee.

The fact that much of the work done with the contract in Washington. D. C., last year by the Corn-Hog Section of the AAA is being done in Iowa this year by the State Corn-Hog Board of Review explains why things don't seem to be moving as fast in the state this year.

The 1934 contracts were sent by the County Allotment Committee direct to Washington, but this year all the checking and final approving of the contracts is being done in Des Moines by the State Board, thus eliminating much of voluminous correspondence the county committee had to carry on with the Corn-Hog Section regarding errors in contracts.

The program this year moves along practically the same as last till the actual signing of the contract, except for a more accurate checking ofi the listing sheets and a thorough checking of the contracts for accuracy and completeness before they are forwarded to Washington.

Since such a high percentage of the work on the 1935 program has been done in the state, the state board has had to carry on extensive correspondence with county allotment committees and the Corn-Hog Section for the purpose ofi correcting record forms which were issued by the Corn-Hog Section for 1935 program.

"By and Large"

"By and large," like "getting under way" and "taken aback," is one of the many vivid phrases which the sea gave the language in the days of sail. Its nautical definition is "alternately close-hauled and free," and this, in turn, means sailing "off" the wind and "on" it, at intervals. Since the result of proceeding in this fashion is to describe a course in a general direction, the expression on shore has come to mean "broadly," or "generally."

Sorghum-Molasses

Strictly speaking, sorghum is the name of the cereal grass that is cultivated for its saccharin content. The juice of this grass is prepared into a molasses. But we have other molasses obtained from sugar-cane, from sugar-beet, and from the sugar-maple, which may properly be identified as sugar-cane molasses, sugar-beet molasses, and sugar-maple molasses. Similarly, that from sorghum may be called sorghum molasses.—Literary Digest.

Famous Herb Garden

Lying on the Thames embankment, London, England, but walled from prying eyes, is Chelsea's Garden of Herbs, founded by that famous old doctor, Hans Sloane, says Pathfinder Magazine. Thousands pass it daily without realizing that here lies a link with every corner of the globe, for in this walled plot grow little-known herbs culled from gleaming coral islands, far-off jungles, and the sides of precipitous tropical ranges. Eminent scholars journey to London to study the lore of such plants, and shoots and seeds are packed with care and exported to innumerable medical centers. Every plant that is tended there has some curative value. Immediately a new medicinal herb is discovered a specimen is sent to Chelsea, where it is nurtured. Experiments are made with seeds, roots, and bark, and its species is determined and catalogued.

For Our Heroes

SOUND the taps softly
For heroes asleep.
Strew flowers richly,
Our loyalty keep.

Sing their songs bravely—
"We're Tenting Tonight,"
"Marching Through Georgia,"
And "Justice and Right."

Songs for the Riders
Who took San Juan hill,
"A Hot Time" and "Dolly"
We're singing them still.

Songs of the laddies
Who marched "Over There"
"Keep the Fires Burning,"
And "Pack Up Your Care."

Songs for our heroes,
Sweet flowers for them, too.
Soldiers in khaki
And brave boys in blue.

Banners wave o'er them,
And tears for them shed,
From Shiloh to Flanders,
Our loved, honored dead.

Johnson, the President of the United States, by his cabinet, by the dignitaries of our own and other nations, and by an innumerable throng of private citizens. In the columns marched the veterans of the army of the Potomac, the army of the James, the army of the Tennessee, and the cavalry of the indomitable Phil Sheridan, though Sheridan himself was far away on duty in Mexico. On the 23rd of May the army of the Potomac and on the 24th the division of the Mississippi swept through the streets of the capital for hours, while hundreds of bands made the air ring with patriotic music.

But the scene cannot be fitly depicted in the cold words of more than seventy years after. Let us recall the glowing words of eye-witnesses, Poore and others:

"The night before the grand review of the army of the Potomac was wet and dreary enough, but as day dawned the clouds disappeared and the scene in Maryland avenue, between the Long bridge and the Capitol, and the large plain east of that building, was warlike and interesting. Brigades marched at route steps; bivouac fires, around which groups were eating their breakfast; orderly sergeants insisting in very naughty but impressive language on the use of sandpaper on muskets already bright; musicians rehearsing some new march; little boys bracing up drums half as high as themselves; important adjutants riding to and fro to hurry up the formation of their respective regiments; elegantly attired aids de camp galloping like mad and endeavoring to avoid mud puddles; batteries thundering along. A few words from one man reduced confusion to order. When General Meade gave the order, 'Forward,' the apparent snarl of humanity and horses began to be unraveled in a single, unbroken line, and the columns moved from the Capitol toward the reviewing stands along Pennsylvania avenue."

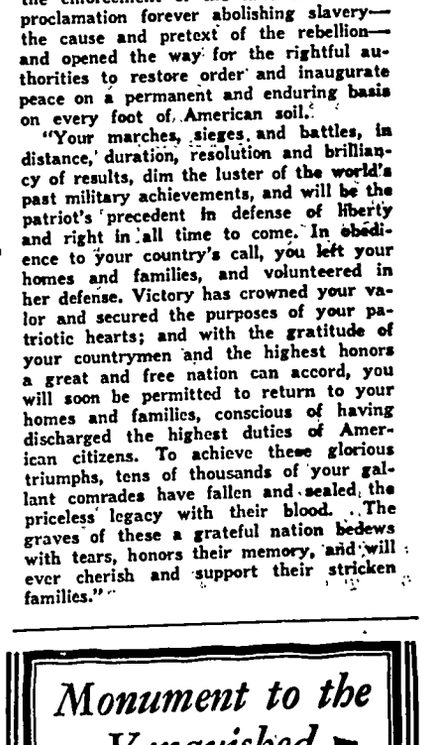
Few of those that marched in that great parade of veterans and first day of war memories are alive today. To most of us the names of those, captains and colonels and commanders, so glowingly mentioned by that old chronicler, mean but little. Other days, other wars and other heroes of wars. But it was a national thrill—an epochal thrill—that last review of the armies of the Union. For five years the nation had been divided, millions had been under arms, hundreds of thousands slain and as many more disabled for life. For the first time the armies marched in peaceful review, glorying in the end, mindful of their battles and of those who fell in them. A month afterward, the general order disbanding the armies was given by Lieutenant General Grant. On June 1, 1865, the movement of disbandment began and from then on until the autumn of that year 786,000 officers and men were mustered out of service and returned to peaceful pursuits.

Grant's address to the army was a memorable one, Napoleonic in its eloquence and fervor. He said:

"Soldiers of the Army of the United States: By your patriotic devotion to your country in the hour of danger and alarm, your magnificent fighting, bravery and endurance, you have maintained the supremacy of the Union and the Constitution, overthrown all armed opposition to the enforcement of the laws and of the proclamation forever abolishing slavery—the cause and pretext of the rebellion—and opened the way for the rightful authorities to restore order and inaugurate peace on a permanent and enduring basis on every foot of American soil.

"Your marches, sieges and battles, in distance, duration, resolution and brilliancy of results, dim the luster of the world's past military achievements, and will be the patriot's precedent in defense of liberty and right in all time to come. In obedience to your country's call, you left your homes and families, and volunteered in her defense. Victory has crowned your valor and secured the purposes of your patriotic hearts; and with the gratitude of your countrymen and the highest honors a great and free nation can accord, you will soon be permitted to return to your homes and families, conscious of having discharged the highest duties of American citizens. To achieve these glorious triumphs, tens of thousands of your gallant comrades have fallen and sealed the priceless legacy with their blood. The graves of these a grateful nation bedews with tears, honors their memory, and will ever cherish and support their stricken families."

Monument to the Vanquished



The United States government erected this monument to the memory of 3,384 Confederate soldiers and sailors who died while prisoners of war at Point Lookout, Md. An undetermined number of the unidentified dead prisoners are buried here. The bodies of others were shipped to their home states following the Civil war. The monument is located about four miles from Point Lookout, where, backed by evergreen trees, one may see beyond to the Potomac river.

PROTECT YOUR LIFE AND THE LIVES OF OTHERS

THERE are three questions you should ask yourself about the tires you buy

1—"Will the non-skid tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

Answer No. 1—Harvey S. Firestone early realized the value of tire traction and safety and was the first to design an All Rubber Non-Skid Tire. Through the years Firestone has led the way in the design and development of tires with most effective non-skid treads.

Firestone does not depend solely on traction and non-skid tests made by its own engineers—it employs a leading University to make impartial tests for non-skid efficiency of its tires, and their most recent report shows that Firestone High Speed Tires stop the car 15% quicker than the best of all popular makes of tires.

Answer No. 2—Blowout protection must be built into a tire. Friction and heat within the tire is the greatest cause of blowouts. Firestone protects its tires from friction and heat by a patented process which soaks every cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber. This is an additional process known as Gum-Dipping, by which every 100 pounds of cotton cord absorb eight pounds of rubber. This extra process costs more and is not used in any other make of tire.

Leading race drivers investigate the inbuilt quality of the tires they use, because their very lives depend upon their tires, and they always select Firestone Tires for their daring speed runs. In fact, Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the gruelling Indianapolis 500-mile race for fifteen consecutive years, and they were on the 5,000-pound car that Ab Jenkins drove 3,000 miles in 23½ hours on the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, without tire trouble of any kind. These amazing performance records are proof of the greatest blowout protection ever known.

Answer No. 3—Thousands of car owners reporting mileage records of 40,000 to 75,000 miles, is proof of the long mileage and greater economy by equipping with Firestone High Speed Tires. Let these unequaled performance records be your buying guide.

Go to the Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Firestone Tire Dealer and let him equip your car with Firestone Tires, the safest and most economical tires built.

A sound mind in a sound body isn't the work of chance.

When an individual becomes a partisan his reason is, in part, impaired.

Children are the best assets of any community; why not develop them fully.

Men begin conversations with, "did you hear, etc?" and ladies begin, "she's a nice girl, but—"

Fact of the matter is that the young ladies of Klemme are getting prettier every spring.

Driving automobiles and drinking liquor are dangerous to others as well as the man in the car.

"You say your mning stocks are worth three times what they were when you bought them? Thats astonishing! How do you account for it?"

"Waste paper has trebled in value since I made the purchase."

"In the movie you went to did the hero marry the heroine at the end of all their troubles?"

"No—at the beginning."

"No wonder you like to fish," said the sweet young thing. "It make the little fish so happy to be caught."

"How do you know?" asked the boy friend.

"They're always wagging their tails when you pull them from the water."

Garden of Eden Located on the Praslin Island?

The Garden of Eden, according to tradition, was located on one of the Seychelles islands—Praslin. Everything helps to bear out this legend, says a correspondent in the Detroit News. It is one of the loveliest places in all the world, exceeding even the beauty of Ball. There are many foods here to appehl to the appetite and they are nearly all ready-to-eat foods. Clothing is not a necessity, the islands being close to the Equator.

A fact which helps substantiate the claim that this was the original home of Adam and Eve, the paradise from which they were driven, is found in the coco de mer, a large nut which grows here and which, according to local tradition, was the Forbidden Fruit of the Bible. The coco de mer tree grows plentifully, reaching an average height of 150 feet and bearing nuts weighing up to 20 pounds.

All knowledge of these islands was lost for many centuries. They lie almost in the center of the Indian ocean, 1,000 miles due east of Mombasa, Africa, and were discovered in 1505. Pirates found them a safe haven to retire to. The outlaws of the sea grew so numerous here that female slaves were imported from Africa to minister to their wants, the pirates marrying them. Their descendants are the natives of today and they are a good-looking well-behaved race of people. Practically all are Christians.

Sealyham Terrier Breed Fighter, Authority Says

Just where the first Sealyham terrier was produced is shrouded in mystery. It is generally agreed that the breed came by its name in Wales and that it was a product of Welsh crossing. Those who developed the Sealyham were looking for a dog that would go into the ground after the badger, and in the Sealyham they got one which would fight his weight in wildcats at a word from his master, asserts an authority in the New York Herald Tribune. For this work, the orlgina tors sought a dog with short legs for ground work, and thick, heavy coat both as protection from the weather and the teeth of his opponents.

The Sealyham terrier is essentially a game dog. He was produced to go to ground after animals more than twice his weight, and he is not afraid of any other four-footed thing. Naturally, he is a good digger. His short muscular legs fairly make the dirt fly when he is sent into a burrow after game. It is these legs of which he is most careful when he comes up to his prey. He realizes that they are not only an extremely valuable asset but that they are his most vulnerable point when facing an enemy. Accordingly, he doubles them back under him, gradually edging forward until his strong teeth clamp on the enemy.

In Early California

Bancroft says that dancing was a passion of the early Californians; fiestas, picnics and balls were frequent; the fadangos were especially popular at San Diego. Dramatic performances were given to some extent, but serenading was common. Most Californians could play the vihuela or guitar. There was much interest in racing and it was common practice to race to church with oxen-drawn wagons containing the family. The stakes were money, stock, or balls. Carrera del Gallo, or cock fighting was a popular sport, as was also corrida de toros, or coursing of bulls. Bull fights were held on frequent occasions by skilled and practiced toreadors. The tekersie was a favorite game of the Indians. Billiards were introduced at Monterey in 1828.

Colonial National Monument

The Colonial National monument is an historical reservation, established in 1930, and administered by the national park service of the Department of the Interior. Its boundaries include Jamestown island, parts of the city of Williamsburg, Va., and the Yorktown battlefield, as well as the highways connecting these areas. The monument was established to preserve the historic structures and to commemorate the contributions of this area in the colonization and development of America.

Maxim Was Wise

Maxim, who, more than any other man, developed the machine gun, was in early manhood interested in chemistry and the then infant science of electricity. Ambitious, energetic, he was told by a friend how to make a pile of money. "Invent something," said this friend to Maxim, "something which will enable these Europeans to cut each other's throats with greater facility"—this was said more than 50 years ago.

World's Largest Carillon

At Bournville, England, the carillon installed in the tower of the village school is the largest in the world. The bells originally numbered 22, but a local family of distinction made gifts of bells from time to time until the total has reached 48. The largest bell weighs over three tons, the smallest 12 pounds.

Old Cashmere Shawls

The wool which went into the fine old cashmere or India shawls was particularly fine and soft and taken from the changra or shawl goat, only about eight ounces being secured from a goat at a clip and from six to eight pounds required for the average shawl.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

TVA CHARGED WITH WASTEFUL AND IRREGULAR DOINGS—SMITH BOOM GROWS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
©, Western Newspaper Union.

SECRET hearings were opened by the house military affairs committee to investigate charges that the Tennessee Valley authority already has squandered $1,000,000 of government money in questionable awards of contracts for dynamite and powder and through other irregularities. Arthur E. Morgan, head of the TVA, and his two fellow directors, David Lilienthal and Harcourt A. Morgan, were summoned before the committee.

A. E. Morgan

The charges are contained in an audit of the TVA made by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl. Some of the irregularities he claims to have uncovered are:

The awarding without competitive bidding of a contract which obligated the government for an indefinite sum of money, estimated at $615,000.

Overpayments of an original contract by as much as 120 per cent.

Awarding of contracts, in contravention of law, to firms which were not the low bidders, with one contract going to a bidder who was seventh from low.

Failure to require one large contractor to post performance bond and at the same time the payment of fees to this contractor in advance, despite a legal prohibition against advance payments.

Solicitation of bids by telephone or circulars among a certain group of private business houses, or in other irregular ways.

The TVA directors were said to be prepared to disprove the worst of the charges, and to be ready to make some disclosures of their own, especially concerning the submission of uniform bids by nine munitions companies.

The inquiry came as the administration was trying to get the house committee to report favorably the bill, recently passed by the senate, providing more money for the TVA and enlarging its scope of operations.

HOUSE leaders were hurrying toward passage the administration's amendments to the AAA act, enlarging the powers of that organization, the demand of opponents for long debate being denied. It was certain this measure would arouse controversy in the senate. Jobbers and retailers of foodstuffs, of whom there are about 111,000 in the country, are much disturbed by these proposed amendments for the measure extends to them the processing taxes now imposed on food manufacturers, makes them subject to regulations not yet specified and requires that each one be licensed by the AAA.

FIRST of the list of projects to be undertaken under the works relief program is the Passamaquoddy tidal power scheme, and there is a lot of grumbling because it was placed at the head of the line by the President himself. This project was once turned down as uneconomic by Secretary Ickes, the assertion being that it would cost too much in comparison with the returns that might be expected, would take too long for completion and was in a region where so much work relief was not needed. But Mr. Roosevelt, whose Campobello summer cottage is near the location of the proposed dam site, is said to be personally interested in the project, believing it will bring new industries to the area. Another argument in its favor is that the old question of the practicability of harnessing the ocean tides may be settled by it.

Major Fleming

Anyhow, this big Maine project is to go ahead, and Maj. Philip B. Fleming of the army engineers corps has been chosen to take charge of the construction. Major Fleming has been serving in the PWA for some time but has been released for this Eastport work.

IN AN executive order the President established pay rates under the $4,880,000,000 work-relief measure, dividing the country into four sections in setting regional wages. Pay will range from $19 a month for unskilled laborers in the South to $94 a month for professional and technical workers in the East. The wages will be from 20 to 30 per cent below the prevailing wage rate structure throughout the country.

WHEN Dennis Chavez was brought into the senate to be sworn in as successor to the late Bronson Cutting of New Mexico, six "liberal" members silently walked out of the chamber in protest against the efforts that had been made to unseat Mr. Cutting. Those who participated in this unprecedented action were: Senators Hiram Johnson, California; William E. Borah, Idaho; George Norris, Nebraska; and Gerald P. Nye, North Dakota, Republican-Independents; and Robert M. LaFollette, Wisconsin Progressive; and Henrik Shipstead, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite.

CERTAIN Republicans, most of them business men and financiers, have started a movement for the nomination of Alfred E. Smith for President by the Republican convention. The idea seems rather fantastic but its sponsors profess to believe that such a fusion nomination would attract great numbers of conservatives and offer the best chance to defeat Mr. Roosevelt. Other Republicans are talking about making Lewis Douglas of Arizona, former director of the budget, their candidate; he also is a Democrat.

Charles C. Hellinger of New York is chairman of a Smith-for-President committee, a non-partisan organization, and he reports that the Smith boom is gaining headway and that national headquarters will be opened this summer. Membership in the committee, he asserts, has more than doubled in the last month, much of the enrollment being voluntary. Mr. Smith has neither assented to this boom nor discouraged it.

SENATOR WAGNER of New York and Representative Crosser of Ohio offered in the senate and house identical railroad labor pension bills drafted in a way to meet the objections of the Supreme court to the law it declared unconstitutional. Because of the "must" list of measures demanded by the President, this bill may not be acted on in this session.

As re-drafted, the Wagner-Crosser bill seeks to meet specifically the ruling of the majority of the Supreme court that congress had exceeded its authority by legislating for the welfare of the workers; by invading the field of intrastate commerce, and by imposing drastic pensions provisions.

FOUR thousand farmers, gathered from all parts of the country, invaded Washington and told President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace that they were enthusiastic believers in the efficiency of the AAA program and supporters of the amendments which the administration asks congress to make in the agricultural adjustment act. Mr. Roosevelt addressed, from the south portico of the White House, what he called a "surprise party," and prefaced his remarks with the statement that "a great many of the high and mighty" have been deliberately trying to mislead many people by "lying about the kind of a farm program under which this nation is operating." He went on to deny emphatically that the government has "wastefully destroyed food in any form."

Sen. Hastings

Next day many of the visiting farmers were in the senate gallery and heard Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, Republican, score the President for characterizing critics of the AAA program as liars.

Senator Hastings than introduced a resolution calling upon the secretary of agriculture to submit all correspondence between the department and the visiting farmers, together with any instructions sent out to county agents with a view of producing the "spontaneous" visitation. Mr. Hastings also demanded to know how the delegates were selected and what financial assistance "directly or indirectly" was extended to them by the agricultural officials.

Over in the house Representative Fish of New York started a lively debate on the same topic, and he was even more outspoken than Mr. Hastings.

Richberg has let it be known that he intends to retire from government work by July 1 and, after a long rest, to resume law practice. It is believed that W. Averill Harriman, NRA executive officer, and Sol Rosenblatt, head of the compliance section, also will resign.

RUSSIA'S immense airplane, the Maxim Gorky, largest land plane in the world, was destroyed when it collided with a small training plane over a Moscow suburb, collapsed at a height of 2,000 feet and fell in ruins. All on board, 48 in number, were killed, as was the pilot of the small plane. The victims were mostly engineers and workers of the Central Aerodynamic institute and members of their families who were being taken for a pleasure ride.

The Maxim Gorky was a show plane rather than a practical ship and was used for spreading Soviet propaganda. It was built by popular subscription in 1934 and was an all metal, eight-motored monoplane with a wing spread of 200 feet and a fuselage 100 feet long, and was most elaborately equipped. The Soviet government announced immediately after the disaster that it would build three more giant planes of the same type.

NEVER recovering consciousness after a motorcycle accident, Col. Thomas E. Lawrence—the glamorous "Lawrence of Arabia" of war days—died in a military hospital in Dorsetshire, England. Yet in his twenties when he organized the revolt of the Arabs against Turkey, Lawrence gained undying fame. When after the peace King George sought to reward him, he refused on the ground that injustice had been done to his friends the Arabs. He changed his name to T. E. Shaw and devoted himself to experimental work in aeronautics. His writings included a brilliant account of his experiences in Arabia and a translation of the Odyssey.

ITALY is willing to make peace with Ethiopia, agreeing to arbitrate their disputes and to cease from further military measures, but on terms that Emperor Haile Selassie probably will not accept. These terms, as reported to London by Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, are:

First—The integrity and independence of Ethiopia are to be respected.

Second—Ethiopia must accept a division of the country into three zones of influence. One-third of the country, the Anglo-Sudan frontier, would be in the British zone. It would include Lake Tsana, which is the source of the upper Blue Nile which flows into the Nile at Khartoum. Another third would be within the French zone of influence. It would cover the railway from Djibuti, French Somaliland, to Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia. The third zone, under Italian influence, would include all highlands, which are suitable for Italian immigration and which comprise the only fertile section.

One of Italy's complaints against Ethiopia has been that slavery was still in existence there. This has been rectified by an edict of the emperor setting free the serfs. He also has abolished ancient and unequal taxes on 60 per cent of the land, substituting a fixed and regular payment.

BISHOP John Fisher and Sir Thomas More, who lost their heads four hundred years ago for opposing the marriage of Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn, were canonized by Pope Pius in a magnificent ceremony in St. Peter's, Rome, and about 50,000 persons were in attendance. The chief interest in the proceedings was in the sermon delivered by the pope, in which he urged the audience to pray that England might return to the Roman Catholic faith. The Holy Father said:

"We desire that with your ardent prayers invoking patronage of the new saints you ask of the Lord that which is so dear to our heart—namely: that England, in the words of St. Paul, 'meditating the happy consummation which crowned the life' of two martyrs, may 'follow them in their faith' and return to the father's house 'in unity, faith and knowledge of the son of God.'

"Let those who are still separated from us consider attentively the ancient glories of their church, which were at once the reflection and the increment of the glories of the church of Rome."

BY ADOPTING the resolution of Senator Bennett C. Clark of Missouri, Democrat, the senate gave the NRA life only until April 1, 1936, and considerably curtailed its powers. The expressed wishes of the President and NRA chairman Donald Richberg for a two year extension with enlarged powers were ignored. The changes called for in the Clark resolution provide for prohibition inclusion of business firms engaged wholly in intrastate commerce under NRA codes or regulations; banning price fixing except in mineral resource industries, and directing the President to revise all codes within thirty days to conform to the provisions of the resolution. Majority leaders in the house were prepared to fight for the two year extension, but admitted the Clark resolution was likely to prevail there also. In that case, in the opinion of many observers, the NRA will be practically dead.

Senator Clark

While the senate was debating the matter, Mr. Richberg told a mass-meeting of NRA workers that the Clark resolution was "complete folly." This aroused the Missourian to wrath. He called it "the most brazen exhibition of impudence on the part of a bureaucratic official which has fallen under my observation during my lifetime," and next day, in a set speech, he told his fellow senators at length just what he thought of Mr. Richberg and "his ambition to be a Mussolini in the United States."

An organization called the industry and business committee for NRA extension was called into action, as were the farmers for AAA, and its head, Ward Cheney, silk manufacturer, announced that a meeting of delegations of industries would be held in Washington May 22.

SENATOR HUEY LONG'S resolution for an investigation of Postmaster General Farley was rejected by a vote of 62 to 20, the "Kingfish" being the only Democrat recorded in favor of it.

The senate then passed the Norris amendments to the Tennessee Valley Authority act, increasing the TVA's bonding authorization from fifty to one hundred million dollars and protecting its electric power activities from court interference.

Next on the senate program was the Wagner labor relations board bill which its author declared was "responsive to the ominous industrial disturbances of last summer when blood ran freely in the streets and martial law was in the offing."

After several amendments designed to limit the power the measure inferentially gives the American Federation of Labor had been rejected, the bill was shoved through by a vote of 63 to 12.

The death of Marshal Pilsudski, ruling power of Poland, takes from that country a great man and an able patriot. Remaining in the background, exercising power without display, Marshal Pilsudski was an absolute dictator, and his death is first among the dictators developed by the great war.

Arthur Brisbane

The world may learn from his going what to expect when other dictators depart, one by one. What will be the destiny of Poland, with her strongest man gone? What, at a later time, will happen in Italy, Germany, Russia, Turkey, as each loses the dictator that now takes the place of self-government and independent public thought?

Italy calls out her "fourth class" fighting reserves and has 950,000 men ready to crush the king of Ethiopia, if crushing becomes "necessary." Note Mussolini warns other countries not to meddle and not to help Ethiopia. That looks a little like war.

Warning to politicians and others: Don't stumble.

In California, Herman Zeigler was putting 18 tame lions through their paces. He cracked the whip; they obeyed, jumping up on stools, sitting up on their hind legs. "Mind over matter" was beautifully demonstrated. The lions acknowledged their master.

Then, unfortunately, the lion tamer, careless, stumbled over a stool, fell; instantly the lions were upon him, forgetting their fear of him. He had stumbled and fallen—that was enough.

There are among us today, on and off the radio, some lion tamers, making the American people sit up and jump through hoops. Let them take care not to stumble.

In China, a subterranean river flooded the Szechwan coal mine. Four hundred miners were drowned.

Old-fashioned Chinese used to forbid, and still abhor, any mine digging, "because it disturbs the earth dragon." They will think the old earth dragon flooded the mine, ordered the unseen river to enter.

This drowning news is less exciting to the average American than it would be to have the cook announce: "There were 400 mice drowned in the sink."

The sink is near home, China is far off.

Seventy-five fighting game cocks and 35 men were seized by state troopers in a barn 15 miles out of Hammonton, N. J. Brutality in men dies slowly, but sinks to lower levels with time.

Kings of England once sat delighted around the "cockpit," betting on their favorites, reveling in the extraordinary courage of the game birds. Now cock-fighters are driven to hiding in barns, police arrest them, magistrates fine them.

Perhaps some day civilization will feel about man-fights, on the battlefield, as it does now about cock-fights.

Hitler continues his program on the "If you do not like it, lump it," plan.

Washington protested feebly against Germany's discrimination in debt payments against this country. Germany tells us to take what is given and be grateful, or make trade arrangements to suit Hitler. He hopes to counteract that boycott against German goods established here.

The former kaiser, reported seriously ill, is confined to his bed, ordered to avoid all effort; a hard order for the "all highest."

How such names as Hitler, Stalin, Mussolini must grate on the nerves of the aging Hohenzollern! He can sympathize with England's Henry II, who, after defeat, turned his face to the wall, muttering "Shame on a beaten king," and died.

Mr. Morgenthau, secretary of the treasury, assures you that your American dollar is sound, which is comforting. Mr. Morgenthau knows a good deal about money.

The British do not agree with him, and some British experts consider the dollar worth about 50 cents now and expect it to go lower.

They will probably be disappointed. John D. Rockefeller's I. O. U. is as good as gold, and this country is the John D. Rockefeller among nations.

A New England gathering approves birth control and sterilization of the hopelessly insane and habitually criminal, with full dissemination of birth control information. The action was not taken by any "radicals," or other queer fauna but "by the New England Conference of Methodist Churches." That makes it news. The idea is gaining ground that the woman should have something to say about "another baby."

Old Timothy Stand Needs Fertilizing

Early Attention Is Necessary If Satisfactory Results Are Obtained.

Prepared by Ohio State University Agricultural Extension Service.—WNU Service.

It will pay to give the timothy sod some special attention this spring, in the opinion of agronomists at the Ohio State university, who are recommending a special top dressing with a nitrogenous fertilizer.

Because of the failure of many new seedings last year, it is expected that many meadows that ordinarily would be plowed this spring will be kept for another year.

The agronomists say that additional hay may be secured from these meadows, when they are largely or entirely timothy, by top dressing the field early with 150 to 200 pounds of sulfate of ammonia or nitrate of soda. If calcium cyanamid is used, the application should have been much earlier.

Ohio experiments indicate that, with normal rainfall in early spring, such an application will raise the yield of timothy 1,500 or 2,000 pounds an acre.

Nitrogenous fertilizers, however, should not be applied alone for more than one or two years for, say the agronomists, a stand of hay cannot be maintained unless phosphates and potash are also supplied. A 10-6-4 or similar analysis fertilizer is recommended if these top dressings are continued into the third year.

Nitrogenous top dressing may be expected to increase timothy seed yield one to two bushels an acre, should farmers with sufficient forage desire to produce seed.

Demand for timothy seed may be expected to continue to exceed the supply for at least another year, according to the university specialists. Timothy seed production in 1933 was only half normal; in 1934 it was one-seventh normal. Since many seedings failed last year, production in 1935 will probably be less than normal.

Wet Spots Cause of Farm Waste; Drainage Needed

The drainage of wet spots in otherwise good fields is probably the most worthy improvement that can be made on land today, says Prof. A. M. Goodman of the New York State College of Agriculture.

"These wet spots not only waste seed and fertilizer," he points out, "but they cause greater waste in plowing and harrowing. They cause planting trouble, they interfere with cultivation, and are a nuisance at harvest time.

Usually a few rods of small-sized drain tile, laid so that it is about two feet deep under the lowest part of these wet holes and with a slope of four to six inches to every 100 feet in length, is all that is needed to clear up such a hole.

The backfill over the tile is one of the most essential things to keep in mind. The land did not drain before because the water could not get through the subsoil. Do not put this impervious subsoil back directly over the tile. Place sod, surface soil, and stubble, at least one foot deep, directly over the tile; and put the subsoil, that has come out of the bottom of the ditch near the surface of the ground.

Butter Fat Content Varies

Carefully checked tests show that the butter fat content of the milk from the same herd of cows varies sharply from day to day. Errors in testing can account for only about two-tenths of 1 per cent, but the actual variation is often as much as 1 per cent from one day to another. Such variation results from a number of factors. Weather conditions have a marked effect as does the feed given the cattle. Some breeds show a greater variation than others, and the time between milkings and the completeness of the milkings also have their effects. Also tests of morning's milk are usually lower than those of night's milk.—Pathfinder Magazine.

WAR ON WILD BOARS

Hunting wild boars, a dangerous sport in any region, is a grim business to the ranchers of Neuquen territory in the Andean foothills, says the Montreal Herald. Wild boars by the hundreds are playing havoc with flocks of sheep and cattle. Ranchers have organized systematic hunts. Cornering the animals is a difficult business, however, because the wild pigs frequent the fastnesses of the foothills, not easy of access. Specially trained packs of hounds are used to trail the boars and bring them into the open to face the rifle fire of the massed ranchers. Added to the difficulties are the expenses of the hunt, casualties among the dogs run high. The area most affected is in the department of Los Lagos, the lake region on the Argentine side of the Andes, where great packs of hounds are constantly on patrol.

Chain-Letter Fad Doomed to Early Death

Denver Post Office Swamped by "Send-a-Dime" Letters; Right, Stella Onizuka, Los Angeles Japanese Girl Gets Chain-Letter in Japanese.

Fad Will Die Out.

Post Office department, how- no intention of attempting to arrest of everyone who con- to one of the chains. The reason seems to be that if were arrested, there would be nobody left to keep them in jail!

This latest and most fantastic of all the fantastic share-the-wealth ideas that have come to light in the last few months has, like all such schemes, its members who are more than willing to get the lion's share. It is these that the post office has gone after in earnest.

They are the smart operators who discovered that there was nothing—except the law—to keep them from sending out just as many letters as they pleased, all with their own names at the top! They have gone into their racket on a business basis, renting offices and hiring help. Three of them were arrested in Denver whose plans, if successful, would have netted them $750,000. Several more were apprehended in San Antonio, Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo. Authorities are dragging the net for others in other points of the country.

In recent weeks chains have been started with larger amounts as a unit, from 25 cents to $10. The most common unit in this upper bracket it $1. Most of the cheating occurred with the dollar letters.

Started in Denver.

Just who started the present chain letter craze is not known, but its origin seems to have been in Denver, and even today Denver is certainly the chain letter capital of the nation. Hundreds of extra employees have been added to handle the heavy increase in the mail, which in a city of about 300,000 inhabitants, is running approximately 500,000 pieces a day. The normal load is about 180,000.

In Detroit, which normally handles about 900,000 pieces of mail daily, the amount jumped by another 100,000. Mail carriers labored under heavy burdens in Los Angeles, Spokane, Seattle, Indianapolis and Washington. In Muskogee, Okla., the postmen were given a somewhat diverting aperitif for their days' labors when a wag started a letter instructing the recipient to send a kiss to the person whose name was at the top of the list and "surely he may find a true love among the 15,000-odd trading kisses."

Large increases in the daily mails were worrying the Cleveland post office, where authorities are searching for three promoters who are alleged to have mailed 30,000 of the letters with their names at the top. Two big printing shops there are working night and day to supply orders for printed chain letter forms. In virtually every city of any size a set of five chain letter forms can be purchased at any five-and-ten-cent store for a nickel. Post office officials pointed out that racketeers are more likely to use printed or mimeographed forms.

St. Louis has been a veritable hotbed of the "chain gangs." In a single day more than 330,000 chain letters went through the mails there; if all of them went through the five steps without the chains being broken, this single day's mail would grow to more than 5,000,000,000 letters. That would mean that the members would have to dig up $500,000,000 to pay their chain letter bills and another $100,000,000 for postage. Mail collections there were several hours late. William H. Noah, chief postal inspector at St. Louis, said that "it is like any other species of mass hysteria which will run its course as soon as the novelty wears off. With so many chains in circulation soon the market will be saturated and the thing will fall off of its own weight."

Chain Letter Wild.

But nowhere in the country has a community gone quite so chain-letter wild as in Springfield, Mo. The town simply became one grand clearing house for the schemes. And down in the Ozarks they don't fool around with trinkets so trivial as dimes, either. Exchanges have been opened which will handle nothing less than a dollar and which claim to "leave nothing to chance."

In Missouri the people have to be "shown," and they will pay their money and join the chains only when there is a notary public's seal on the letter. There were no less than ten exchanges in the town, all doing a land office business. Stenographers, for whom the depression had in many cases brought lean years, thought the millennium had arrived. Every available one had been pressed into service and was working overtime. Notaries were receiving 25 cents a letter. Typewriters, ordinarily rented for $5 for three months, were getting as much as $2.50 a day. Great lines of people were stampeding to gain entrance to the exchanges where they could lay down their hard-earned dough and promote some easy money. One account said nothing like it had happened since the Confederates rode into town in '61.

A typical exchange was one which called its letter the "Cream of the Crop." Ten names appeared on the list. To join the chain, one had to call at the exchange with his $3, put it in a letter addressed to the top man, and have the mailing and sealing attested to by the ever-present notary public. He was then given two blanks, each attested by the notary; he had to corral two others, bring them back to the exchange, get them to mail $3 each in notarized letters and then each start out after two others, and so on. The exchange told its buyers to expect a return of $3,072, the result of two being raised to the tenth power.

Of course the buyer had to help his customers sell two letters, and his customers' customers, and so on down the line, in order to get his name up at the top of the list. This left Springfield citizens with little time to do anything else. They wandered about the city with haunted looks in their eyes, dragging workers from offices, wives from ironing boards, school ma'ams from their classes. If there were flagpole sitters the inspired citizens would have fought to climb their poles. Real estate promoters would have frothed with envy at the spectacle of the most intense concentration of high-pressure salesmanship this much-solicited world has ever seen.

A brisk business was conducted for a time at the "Pot of Gold" chain exchange, where $5 was the entree. This beneficent organization promised an immediate return of the original investment. You paid $5, got two letters, then went out and sold them for $5 apiece, sending $5 on and keeping $5. Even people on relief were sinking their checks in this one.

Where the Catch Came.

The catch of course was that pretty soon everybody in Springfield and its environs within 40 or 50 miles had been "sold." As a matter of fact, strangers were virtually the toast of the town. Localities pounced upon them eagerly in almost undeniable efforts to sell them chain letters.

Down in Nashville, Tenn., a chain letter fan finally saw the light. He was Dr. C. R. Fountain of Peabody college, who began thinking hard and heavy about a dime letter that came to him in the morning mail. It said that he might get as many as 15,000 dimes. Doctor Fountain began to figure out just what would happen if everyone in Davidson county fell for the craze and played fair.

"If there were just one chain and it was confined to Davidson county, and if everyone was fair about it," he concluded, "everybody in the county would eventually get 15,000 dimes.

"But in order to bring that about the chain would have to keep spreading until it reached everyone 15,000 times when each person will have to give back all the dimes he takes in.

"Then we will all be back where we started—only each one will be out the money he spends on postage, or about $300."

That's not so bad, at that. Everybody has a lot of fun and excitement, and Uncle Sam winds up $300 to the good for every soul in Davidson county.

If you think it's not possible for practically everybody in one community, you simply don't realize the lengths to which this gag has gone, and don't try to tell your views to Postmaster Nelson of Denver. In fact don't try to tell anything to Postmaster Nelson. He isn't in a speaking mood.

A Los Angeles woman who had received some chain letters wrote to him recently asking him for an authentic list of the names of people who were members of the chains in Denver. He mailed her a copy of the city directory.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building — Washington, D. C.

Washington.—The senate has again indulged in its favorite pastime of straining at the gnats and swallowing the camels. Its latest camel that was swallowed at one gulp and with the same ease as the man on the flying trapeze was passage of the so-called Wagner labor disputes bill. The consensus seems to be that reformers in the senate reached the highwater mark when they capitulated to the labor lobby and put further insurmountable difficulties in the way of recovery for business.

Wagner Bill Dangerous

Of course, the Wagner bill still must run the gauntlet of house passage. It appears, however, that the labor lobby will drive it through there substantially in its present form unless smaller communities in the United States awaken to the dangers of such legislation. The probabilities are that house members will not hear from home in time to influence their votes and prevent passage of the legislation.

The bill, drafted by the German-born Senator Wagner (Dem., N. Y.) creates a national labor relations board. This body will have almost judicial powers in settling labor disputes and in connection with those powers the board can actually say to an employer of workers that he must not promote an organization among them other than of the type of their own choosing. In other words, a labor agitator representing the American Federation of Labor will be permitted to enter anybody's shop and organize the workers and the employer will be powerless to prevent it. If, however, he sought to have his workers organize themselves into a union not affiliated with organized labor, the proposed labor relations board can order it stopped. Actually, and there seems to be little dispute of this potentiality in the legislation, it is designed to establish the American Federation of Labor in this country as a class strong enough to control the management of commerce and industry.

Although the senate action in passage of the bill was overwhelming, it was not accomplished until the Democratic Senator Tydings of Maryland shouted over the din the warning that the measure would ruin chances of business recovery. The Maryland senator sought to amend the bill with a provision prohibiting coercion and intimidation of employees by "anyone whatsoever." Then Senator Tydings told the senate:

"If you do not accept this amendment, talk of freedom for labor is a farce."

Senator Hastings (Rep., Del.) was another opponent of the measure who fought vigorously until the bill was called for a vote. He declared it made him feel that the senate was passing legislation "to force every man in America to join a particular union whether he wants to or not." The amendment was killed.

The Wagner bill is an outgrowth of attempts to develop through the national industrial recovery act a policy compelling employers to bargain collectively with their employees. That is, the famed section 7-A was intended to make it impossible for employers to enter into an agreement with their employers except by dealing with a committee selected by a majority of the workers. It was the assumption when this provision was written two years ago that the American Federation of Labor would have a majority in all of the important industries. It developed, however, that company unions, not affiliated with any other organization, constituted a majority in scores of factories and plants. Thus, the A. F. of L. encountered an unexpected obstacle.

Claws for Blue Eagle

Now Senator Wagner, whose radical tendencies are well known, has attempted to give the Blue Eagle some claws by enactment of the labor disputes bill and the creation of a separate labor relations board.

The measure as it passed the senate makes it "unfair" for employers to do any of the following things:

1. To interfere with, or to coerce employees, in the exercise of collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing.
2. To dominate or to interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or to contribute financially or aid in the support of it.
3. To encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization by discrimination.
4. To discriminate against any employee for filing charges or giving testimony under the proposed act.
5. To refuse to bargain collectively with representatives of their employees.

No prohibitions against labor agitators are to be found in the legislation. From all of the debate and committee hearings which I have examined, it appeared that business interests were fighting the legislation not only because of the handicaps it places upon them but as much for the reason that it represents an entering wedge for labor agitators in all commercial lines. There seems to be no doubt that when an employer is prohibited from driving labor agitators away, he is handicapped in attempting to maintain industrial peace with his own workers on whatever terms they deem proper.

If the legislation creating the labor relations board is bad for big employers of labor, it seems likely to be worse in the smaller communities where employers of a small number of workers constitute the majority of industrial lines. I mean by that, there is usually more skilled labor available in larger industrial communities than in small towns or rural areas. That being true, the employer in a larger community has an opportunity to replace workers who are dissatisfied or who have yielded to the influence of labor agitators, whereas the small town employer of labor cannot always replace workers who would rather be idle than accept terms which paid labor leaders tell the workers are not proper.

Hits Small Employers

Further, the legislation will put organized labor deeper into politics than it has ever been. It will make elections depend largely instead of just partially on the attitude of a congressman or a senator toward labor questions. In addition, the discussion I hear indicates definite fear on the part of some political leaders that the paid organizers in labor circles will themselves become political as well as economic dictators.

In some quarters, there is doubt that the bill will do for organized labor all of the things the paid leaders claim.

It begins to appear that the farmers' march on Washington may bring a flareback on the administration. Certainly, opponents of the administration are not going to let President Roosevelt, Secretary Wallace, and Agricultural Administrator Davis forget very soon their feeling that the march was not of the spontaneous sort.

Ugly Rumor Spreads

No sooner had the farmers arrived here than an ugly rumor was spread around that the visit of the forty-five hundred was financed by the Agricultural Adjustment administration. The rumor spread so fast that it broke out in senate and house debate and demands were made for an investigation. In fact, a resolution to that effect was introduced in the senate. The Department of Agriculture and the Adjustment administration paid no attention to the rumor until the resolution was offered on the floor of the senate, whereupon a vigorous denial was forthcoming from Mr. Davis. He said that the farmers had expressed the desire to come to Washington as a demonstration of their approval of AAA policies and frankly stated that his organization was happy to see such an endorsement. But as to expenses. Mr. Davis said and repeated that none of the funds used for the trip came from the federal treasury.

On the other hand, observers and writers in Washington noted that the farmers were equipped with highly decorative badges; they were provided with a meeting place, a great auditorium which rents for considerable money, and when they went to the White House the President spoke from a prepared speech. They stopped at good hotels and the majority of them had traveled to Washington in pullman sleeping cars.

I do not assume that it is of world wide importance what the total cost was. I am reporting only the reaction which Washington had. Thus it can be mentioned that all of the badges worn by the delegates bore the large letters "AAA" and the names of the respective states represented. The hall, as I have said, rents for a substantial amount and the hotel bills are never small. Railroad fare from distant points costs enough that the depression conditions have cut down passenger traffic and the march on Washington was concluded with a banquet. So, naturally, those who were curious concerning the expenses of the trip freely stated that there are at least four thousand, five hundred farmers in the country who are not as destitute as professional friends of agriculture have been claiming.

Secretary Hull of the Department of State is being heaped with praises these days on his diplomatic accomplishments and is receiving at the same time vigorous criticism on the basis of results thus far accomplished on his reciprocal tariff policies.

Praise for Hull

With regard to the Secretary's diplomacy, I believe it can be said he has established better relations with South America than any secretary of state in recent years. As regards the reciprocal tariff policy which Mr. Hull fostered, the country is witnessing a sharp exodus of dollar capital into new investments in lines made profitable by tariff changes complete or pending.

The information I gather respecting the reciprocal tariff policies indicates, however, that the movement of capital into South American investments results partially from Agricultural Adjustment administration activities. But it seems that the agricultural crop reduction plans would not of themselves cause as large an outgo of dollars for industrial investment in South America as has taken place if they were operative alone.

ATTRACTIVE IN ITS SIMPLICITY

Here is a frock to make those numerous home chores pleasurable. Its nice simplicity applies not only to its making—which is easy in the extreme, as denoted by the sketch of the garment spread open—but also to the laundering problem. A run of the iron and it is again fresh and immaculate, doing its bit graciously to keep you in trim. Its lovely, freedom-giving design lends itself well to the new cottons in stripes, plaids, checks or floral prints—so well, in fact, that you'll likely repeat the pattern in many fabrics. The smart yoke which includes the sleeve effect is decidedly becoming.

Pattern 2201 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 36 takes 3¼ yards 35 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address, and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

The Conquering Spirit---

The true American spirit that will not be downed is what led us into those wars from which we came forth the victors. Because everything has a price, and victory perhaps the greatest of all, we lost thousands of men who fought our cause. It is to them that we go on Memorial day bearing flowers as a tribute. In honor of these men who have preserved our United States.

MISS MILDRED STILLE BECAME BRIDE OF MR. ERWIN PRIEBE

Were Married At Reformed Church Parsonage Saturday, June 1st

Miss Mildred Stille and Mr. Erwin Priebe were united in marrage Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the Klemme Reformed Church parsonage, wth Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch officiating.

The Bride wore a peach silk organdie, dress with white accessories to match and was attended by Miss Viola Thiemann. The Groom wore a suit of blue serge and he was attended by Mr. Joseph Baker.

The young couple are well known in and around Klemme and have a host of friends who extend best wishes for a long and happy married life. The young couple are on a honeymoon trip to South Dakota and will visit there for about a week.

Mr. Priebe is employed at the Northern Lumber Co. implement shop.

ARLENE GROSBECK, ARMOUR MULLIN MARRIED JANUARY 9

The secret is out, Miss Arlene Grosbeck and Armour Mullin were married January 9th, 1935, and have kept the ceremony a secret.

The Bride has been visiting with relatives at Boulder, Colorado. Friday Armour Mullin left for Boulder in his father's car, and the young couple returned to Klemme Monday evening and are staying at the Ben Mullin home.

Both are fine young people and have a host of friends who are indeed surprised to learn of this marriage.

NEIMAN-TERHUFEN

Margaret Neiman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Neiman, and Glen Terhufen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Terhufen, of Britt, were married at Fairmont, Minn., May 28, at the Methodist Episcopal parsonage.

Their attendant were Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Smith of Armstrong.

The bride was attired in white, with white accessories. The groom wore a dark suit.

Margaret is a graduate of the Kanawha high school with the class of '28 and later attended the State Teachers College at Cedar Falls. Since then she has taught successfully in the rural school near her home.

Mr. Terhufen attended the Klemme schools and is now engaged in farming near Britt.

The couple are enjoying a trip to the Twin Cities and lakes of Minnesota and will be home to their friends after June 10 on a farm near Britt—Kanawha Reporter.

AUTO DRIVERS MUST RENEW LICENSE AFTER JULY 5TH

New Law Makes Requirements For All Auto Drivers and Owners

New drivers' licenses will be required of all automobile drivers in Iowa after July 5, 1935, according to the requirements of legislation passed in the last session providing for a safety patrol system for Iowa highways. All drivers, including owners, must obtain licenses under the new law.

Drivers will be able to make application for new licenses after Monday when forms will be distributed by the State motor vehicle department in all county treasurer's and sheriff's offices and motor clubs. The new 25 cent license must be obtained by July 4 under a recent state law ordering present licenses invalid after June 30.

The present permits were issued for 1932 and 1933 and were extended by the legislature for 1934 and 1935.

BANK DEPOSITS AT GARNER WILL BE REPAID

With the sale of real estate amounting to a property value of $10,000 to Sheriff E. P. Hanson of Hancock county, almost the entire deposits of the Farmer's National Bank of Garner, which went in receivership during the national bank holiday in 1934, will have been recovered, it was announced Monday by W. R. Weir, receiver for the bank. Mr. Weir stated that within 30 days depositors of the closed bank will have been repaid in full.

Included in the property sold to Sheriff Hanson was the old First National Bank building which houses the post office, office room and the M. E. Smith shoe store. A one-half undivided interest in the Garner Opera house was also included in the transaction.

WEATHER FAVORS USE OF WEED-KILLING CHEMICALS

Chemical spray becauuse of the high moisture content of the soil over most of the state this spring, should be an especially effective means of controlling and eradicating small patches of perennial weed suggests R. H. Porter, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State College.

For such weeds as Canada thistle, creeping jenny, leafy spurge, perennial pepper grass and quack grass the spray should be applied during the first week in June, while horse nettle and devil's shoestring are most effectively checked when sprayed early in July.

In any instance, the spraying should be done when the plants are in the bud or early blossom stage and when soil moisture is abundant In order to avoid rapid evaporation, spraying should be done in the evening or in the morning or on cloudy days.

A special chlorate product known as "Atlacide" has proved one of the most effective sprays and is properly mixed at about 1 pound of the dry product to 1 gallon of water. The average rate of application is from 3 to 5 quarts per square rod depending upon the density of the foliage.

Ordinary sodium chlorate has also been used with good results, and as with all chlorates, should be used with some precaution as it is readily ignited when dry.

The second chemical treatment is usually most effective when applied in late August or early September, and with some weeds a third treatment in October or November may be necessary.

DR. SPOONER, (FORMER LOCAL DOCTOR, BURIED AT GARNER

Sold Practice Here 27 Years Ago To The Late Dr. Geo. Zinn

Funeral services for Dr. A. L. Spooner, 74, were held at LuVerne Monday afternoon at the Methodist Church and burial was made in the Garner Cemetery.

Dr. Spooner sold his practice here 27 years ago to the late Dr. George Zinn. Dr. Spooner moved with his family to LuVerne where he has since resided. He has been in ill health for the past year and died Saturday in a Fort Dodge hospital with pneumonia.

He is survived by his wife; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Marty, of Mason City; and three sons: Lloyd of Fort Dodge, Dr. Dwight of Milwaukee and Maynard of LuVerne; also four grandchildren.

A number of Klemme people drove to Garner to attend the services at the grave.

PRE-NUPTIAL SHOWER HELD FOR ETHEL WELLEMEYER

Mrs. Lee Anderson, of Charles City, and Miss Ruth Bailey entertained at a pre-nuptial shower in honor of Miss Ethel Wellemeyer on Friday evening, May 31st a t the Wm. Stille residence.

The evening was spent in playing games. A feature of the entertainment was a clever stunt which showed the troubles that honeymooners could expect to have with their car. It was then announced that all the girls had "chipped in" to buy the bride-to-be one present. A large wooden box was brought in which Ethel was instructed to open. She accomplished this with the aid of a hammer only to find that the box was filled with paper. After opening many balls of paper she came upon several packages of "goofy gifts." To atone for this she was later presented with many beautiful and useful gifts.

Refreshments were served at a late hour. The color scheme of yellow and green was carried out.

Auxiliary Meeting

The Auxiliary ladies will meet on Thursday, June 13th at 8 p. m. in the Royal Neighbor rooms in the First National Bank. Miss Marie Blank is the hostess.

DISTRICT TELEPHONE CONTEST WON BY CARL ANDERSON

Winning contests is getting to be a habit with Carl Anderson, manager of the Iowa Union Telephone Co. here. Carl again took first place in the district contest in which thirteen exchanges were entered to install new telephones..

The Klemme Exchange finished the race with a percentage of 250, to lead all others.

Since Mr. Anderson has been manager here he has lost but one contest. Last fall he lost first place by but a few points.

Mr. Anderson states that 202 new telephone users were added in this district as a result of the contest. Fifteen new telephone users were added here in the thirteen day period that Carl worked on the contest.

He says that in a close check he finds that in the Klemme territory that there are now only twenty-two farms without telephone service.

8000 LBS. POISON BRAN MASH FOR CUT WORMS

Hancock county has available 8000 lbs. of poison bran for distribution to the farmers and truck gardeners in areas infected by the cut worms or army worms. The mash is stored on several different farms and it can be secured on an order from the office of the county agent. A truck was secured to obtain the mash and there necessarily must be a small charge connected with each sack in order to pay the transportation charges. The bran itself is free and has been obtained from the Iowa State Department of Agriculture at Des Moines.

The cold wet weather that we have had in May has been conducive to an increase of cut worms. With a continuation of cool, wet weather they may do considerable damage. Cut worms and army worms are in the same family and the same method of control is used for both. Extremely hot weather and thorough cultivation will often eliminate cut worms as well as army worms.

Poison bran mash can be mixed by the individual by using the following formula: 20-25 lbs. of wheat bran, 1 lb. of Paris green, 2 qts. of cheap molasses and 2 gal. water. Mix the dry Paris green and bran thoroughly in a tub or large box, pour molasses into water and mix thoroughly, then moisten the poison bran with the sweetened water, use additional water if necessary, until the mixture is of a crumbly, not sloppy, consistancey. If the mixture holds loosely together when pressed in the hands it is properly prepared. The poison should be broadcast by hand as thinly as possible over the garden or field where the worm occurs. The poison is not attractive after it is dry and should be applied late in the afternoon or evening in order to be fresh when the caterpillars begin feeding soon after sundown. The most efficient method of spreading the poison bran is by hand. Last year there was a slight outbreak of web worms and army worms in the county and farmers should watch their fields closely, particularly rye fields and poison bran should be applied immediately.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington. — President Roosevelt announced a year ago that the Tennessee Valley authority and the experiment of government production of electric power on a huge scale was to serve as a yardstick on electric rates charged by private power companies.

Probing the TVA

Lately, J. R. McCarl, comptroller general of the United States, has had his bookkeeping sleuths at work on the records of the Tennessee Valley authority, it being a government corporation. Mr. McCarl was not concerned about the yardstick for power rates nor was he interested in experiments designed to prove the value of government ownership in the power field. His job was to determine what had happened to all of the money that had been taken from the treasury and spent in the effort to transform the Tennessee valley into a modern Garden of Eden.

It happened that Mr. McCarl's report on the audit of TVA affairs was made public coincidentally with a movement by the TVA directors for new legislation—amendments to their basic law which would give them additional authority. This circumstance resulted in the TVA and its yardstick being examined by a congressional committee under the strong lens of a magnifying glass. I believe it is generally agreed that TVA suffered in prestige, and government ownership advocates came off second best because disclosures before the committee were of such a nature as to convince most sound thinking observers that there is a colored gentleman in the TVA woodpile.

For instance, Mr. McCarl showed in his report that the federal government had expended a total of $132,792,000 in development of the power facilities, equipment and necessary appurtenances. This property was transferred by the federal government to the Tennessee Valley authority, a corporation, and is carried on the corporation books at $51,000,000. This is 38 per cent of the actual cost to the taxpayers of the property transferred.

Disclosures of this fact brought many charges in the course of the committee hearing and led to the conclusion by several house members that no electric rate based upon 38 per cent of the cost of the production facilities could be considered honest. In other words, the thought was that a yardstick based on such a method of calculating investment necessarily would have to be made of rubber.

Mr. McCarl told the committee also that he had found various haphazard and "trick" methods of bookkeeping and that he had found it necessary to disallow expenditures of something over two million dollars which he said were illegal. The comptroller general did not refer to these expenditures as having been fraudulently made but he told the committee it was his opinion that the law had to be stretched rather far by any spending agency to construe the payments as justifiable.

"Trick" Bookkeeping

The comptroller general took sharp exception to the bookkeeping methods used by the TVA. It is upon these records that the electric rate is based. Likewise it is upon the basis of these records that the TVA must show whether it has earned a profit.

"Despite the apparently excessive depreciated value at which the Muscle Shoals property was taken up on the books, the authority is not using the valuation basis for depreciation but instead is basing depreciation on the earnings from the sale of power by charging 10 per cent of the gross revenue to operations as depreciation and accumulating the amount of such charges as a reserve for depreciation.

"Assuming a very conservative rate of valuation consumption for example, 2 per cent, the amount of depreciation, based upon the value at which the properties in question were capitalized by the authority, would be approximately $1,000,000 per annum.

"A larger revenue will proportionately increase the reserve for depreciation at the present 10 per cent method of amortization, but to accumulate a reserve on the 10 per cent plan equivalent to the amount that would be charged to depreciation on a valuation basis at 2 per cent, the gross revenues would have to be more than ten times the present amount or about $10,000,000 per annum.

"There is very little basis for assuming that revenues will ever reach such a figure."

The comptroller's report touched on many other phases of TVA affairs which he found subject to criticism and it made mention of a factor that, it seems to me, ought to be of vital importance to communities throughout the country. That factor is taxation. It is to be remembered that government agencies, federal, national, state or local, pay no taxes into the treasury of its jurisdiction. Consequently, the government which fosters a municipally owned power plant simply must forget, for taxation purposes, that such property exists within its domain. Likewise, such a plant is not required to consider interests on the investment in the shape of dividends to the stockholders who, in turn, pay taxes on their income.

Much to Criticise

Doctor Morgan and other directors of the TVA were subjected to questioning of a type about as severe as any witnesses before a house committee in recent months. They had friends on the committee who attempted continuously to shield them from the fire of TVA opponents, but apparently Chairman McSwain was unable to choke off the attack by such men as Representative McLean of New Jersey and others who doubt the advisability of the federal government engaging in power production.

There appeared just no way at all in which friendly members of the house committee could justify the action of the TVA board in its attempts to block private power development. It was shown in the course of the hearing that the TVA had gone far away from its base of operations to buy two small parcels of land—one not much larger than a city block and the other only a few acres in extent. Under questioning, TVA directors admitted this land lay in the middle of a proposed reservoir planned by a private power corporation. In acquiring the parcels of land the TVA made it impossible for the private interests to proceed with their power development because the land in question would have been in the middle of the reservoir 300 feet under water. The private interests could not force the TVA to sell and without that land the whole reservoir program was destroyed.

The TVA probably will win and obtain the amendments its board of directors desire. There are public ownership advocates in sufficient strength to carry out the President's idea in going ahead with the TVA development. It is made to appear, nevertheless, that as a result of the disclosures before the house committee, TVA may not henceforth proceed in a manner quite so arrogant.

Politics is politics and apparently politicians will play the game always.

Playing the Game

If better proof be needed, it seems to me the demonstration over immediate payment of the cash bonus to war veterans will suffice. The bonus has been licked for this session of congress but all indications point to a belief that the country may not be so lucky in the next session of congress which is not far ahead of the 1936 elections.

An organized minority—the World war veterans—were very close to success in forcing congress to appropriate $2,000,000,000 and pay it over to them. They failed because President Roosevelt—like three Presidents before him—had to view the problem from the standpoint of the country's welfare and not the welfare of this minority. Credit is due the President for the stand he took just as credit was due Presidents Hoover, Coolidge and Harding. He will be criticized and attacked by this local minority just as the others were criticized and attacked. While a veto message is regarded by many as not being as strong as it might have been, nevertheless Mr. Roosevelt was firm and his firmness gave courage to enough senators to avoid the debacle of additional waste.

I am informed that the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and various and sundry other organizations of former soldiers, sailors and marines are prepared for a bitter fight next year against those representatives and senators who dared to oppose cash payment of the bonus now when it is not due until 1945. The soldiers' lobby is the greatest and most expensive lobby in Washington now. It knows its power and it does not hesitate to characterize opponents of the cash bonus as traitors. The lobbyists are certain to go into every state and congressional district next summer and seek to defeat those who dared to follow their own conscience and vote against this raid on the treasury.

As a result of the vote on the bonus and the subsequent Presidential veto some keen political observers have begun to calculate in their own minds what the view of the country is. It was pointed out, for example, that a maximum of four million would be entitled to a bonus. At the same time attention was called to the fact that new voters are arriving at the age of franchise at the rate of approximately two million a year or almost thirty-six million since the end of the World war. These observers contend that the new voters and those who are not entitled to the bonus constitute a majority. Thus, they seek to show that there is a great majority of the voters of the country unwilling to see such a sum of money voted to a minority, especially at a time when the government is taxing its citizens and borrowing in billions to give relief to all whether they fought for their country or not. The question is then whether the politicians will wake up in time to represent the majority or be fooled by the power of a highly organized minority.

Rebuilding Rural America

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

MOVING day is fast approaching for hundreds of thousands of America's most destitute farmers since President Roosevelt declared his intention of rebuilding rural America and moving poverty-stricken families into new homes where they may have a considerably better chance to make a living and find happiness. The moving bills will be paid out of Mr. Roosevelt's $4,800,000,000 work relief allotment, and the boss foreman of the movers will be Rexford Guy Tugwell, under secretary of agriculture and pride of Columbia university, who thinks he can lift pianos easier than the farmers can lift mortgages.

For the eight main types of relief work to be done there are some 00 federal departments and divisions already existing to administer the funds and three entirely new divisions are being created. The one which deals with the retracing of the agricultural map of the United States under Tugwell is the rural resettlement division. The recent exodus of 200 farm families of the north central states of Alaska, there to begin life anew with the slate wiped clean, was only a curtainraiser to the main bout against rural poverty and privation which Mr. Tugwell and his forces will conduct.

Single farm families who have conducted something of an isolated battle against overbearing odds of depression, drouth and poor land, will be moved into new and better lands and given a fresh start at Doctor Tugwell's discretion. By the same token, whole area groups of farm families who have collectively—and in many cases literally—bitten the dust will be gathered into Doctor Tugwell's moving van and rolled away to new homes where the land and the life will give them something more closely resembling an even break. Pale and underweight communities, suffering from economic pip in their industrial sections, may be moved to where change of climate and a few honest dollars will revive them; if they can't be moved, new and healthy industrial sections will be grafted (no double meaning intended—perish the thought!) into them.

Break for Slum Dwellers.

Citizens who have found the going a little bit too tough in the slum sections of the larger cities will be moved 20 or 30 miles out in the suburban, semi-rural territories, given small plots of land on which to raise three squares a day and found factory jobs where the hours are short and the remuneration adequate.

Officially known as the Resettlement administration, Doctor Tugwell's division has been allotted $10,000,000 by the President for administrative expenses. What further funds are necessary for each authorized project will be allotted at a later date.

President Roosevelt himself outlined the purposes of the resettlement by dividing them into three brackets:

First: To administer approved projects involving resettlement of destitute or low-income families from rural and urban areas, including the establishment, maintenance and operation, in such connection, of communities in rural and suburban areas.

Second: To initiate and administer a program of approved projects with respect to soil erosion, stream pollution, seacoast erosion, reforestation, forestation and flood control.

Third: To make loans as authorized under the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935 to finance, in whole or in part, the purchase of farm lands and necessary equipment by farmers, farm tenants, croppers or farm laborers.

In carrying out these threefold purposes, Mr. Tugwell was authorized by President Roosevelt to acquire in the name of the United States government any real property which he deems necessary. In the Resettlement administration are incorporated the entire personnel and funds of the land program of the Federal Emergency Relief administration. This land program has already been extended into 25 of the states and includes in its operations the movement of farmers and their families to the Matanuska valley of Alaska.

Never Tried Before.

No projects such as these have been carried out by any other nations, according to M. L. Wilson, assistant secretary of agriculture.

"This only nation-wide planning with the conscious idea of removing land too poor to farm from cultivation is being done in the United States," he asserted.

Commenting on the resettlement program, he said that there are approximately half a million farm families who are unable to produce anything to be exchanged. Their homes, which often average three persons to a room, are on the poorest grade of submarginal land.

"The land must be shifted to better uses. It has been tradition in this country to get land into ownership, but the land on which families are failing because of its poorness is partly cut-over timber land, areas in the semi-arid plains, land whose surface soil has been washed away by erosion, etc. It is largely land which is not adapted to private ownership. It is breaking its private owners. The thing to do is to bring it back into the hands of the government.

"The solution is the gradual transfer of people on it to what we have been calling rural-industrial communities."

Assistant Secretary Wilson estimated that three-fifths of the people on this kind of land have some idea in mind concerning what they would like to do about it and have a little money with which they might carry out their plans. The other two-fifths will require assistance from the Resettlement administration.

"Some families will be moved to better land," Mr. Wilson explained. "A richer farm may be cut up into smaller tracts. For instance, a 320-acre farm may be divided into 32 ten-acre farms. Such a move will be made only where it will not particularly increase agricultural production for sale.

"Then we'll try to get an industry located thereabouts. The people who have been relocated will find employment and will earn wages. The government will sell them land and houses. We can let them put their common labor in on the building of the houses. Farmers have their option. They make their own decisions whether to stay or go."

New Kind of Community.

Mr. Wilson even went so far as to say that there must be a great deal of shifting of population to maintain the democracy, adding that considerable economic planning would be required. He said that a new kind of community, the like of which this nation has not had, will be created.

"They will furnish a life akin to that of European villages where they raise their own food and work for wages," he declared. "It is a new type of industrial setup, in which industry to quite an extent is decentralized."

Mr. Wilson said that the economic system was developing more leisure time, and that some constructive use of it must be devised or we will degenerate.

"There are spiritual and ethical values which come from contact with the soil," he said. "I don't believe you can find anything to which everybody is adapted save gardening and flowers. Practically everybody is interested in growing things. There is value in this process of raising a garden. You produce something used by the family. If we develop in this direction, all the workers can be absorbed into industry at a five or six-hour day.

"This is not socialism. It goes counter to a great many elements of socialism. Most of the working people would own their own homes and plots of land in the readjustment outlined. As it develops and becomes widely known, it will become very important in the program of the liberal elements of society."

About 75,000,000 acres of poor submarginal land were recommended for retirement by the national resources board last winter. The inhabitants of this land were said to be "characterized by incredibly low standards of living."

Resettlement is hardly the answer to the nation's farm problem, in the opinion of the 150 delegates to the conference of agriculture, industry and science, which met at Dearborn, Mich., to honor Henry Ford for his contributions to "chemurgic" farming and to sign a "declaration of dependence upon the soil."

Principal speaker in the conclave in the town that Henry Ford built was Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange, who urged farmers to grow every plant and every product that can be grown in the United States. He said, "The American farmer hopes this conference will set in motion influences that will do more for rural life than the politician has ever been able to accomplish."

"Chemurgic" Farming.

What the conference, sponsored by Chemical Foundation, suggested as the remedy was, of course, "chemurgic" farming. This would shorten the distance between production and consumption by having the farmer once more assume more of the elemental services and processes, and claims that chemistry will drive man back to the farm, just as the machine age took him from it.

"Chemurgic" farmers would bend much of their efforts to raising farm products for purposes other than food. Farm production would need to be doubled if agricultural alcohol replaced petrol as a motor fuel, the conference concluded, and it would open up a new farm income of $5,000,000,000 a year. It was said that no unsolved technical problems stood in the way "although important improvements in processes can confidently be expected."

It was only a few days later when 4,000 farmers, mostly from the South, marched (for the larger part in railroad trains and automobiles) in a pilgrimage to Washington, to express their thanks personally to the President and the AAA for what the administration is trying to do for them. Thinking they smelled a rat, opponents of the New Deal, on the floor of the senate and elsewhere, openly charged that the "marchers" were hand-picked by the AAA officials for a stunt to arouse public sympathy for the program, and that the farmers' traveling expenses were paid by the government.

At any rate the 4,000 farmers cheered the President wildly when he denounced to them the "liars" who criticized the operations of the AAA. They expressed themselves to a man as being heartily in favor of the proposed AAA amendments, some of which even propose to make it necessary for every manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer of food products to obtain a license from the Department of Agriculture. Such amendments would put in the hands of that department the prescribing of rules governing business practices, advertising and the general regulation of the manufacturers' and merchants' business. They aim at control of every step in the process of distribution of food, including the advertising—under Tugwell, who has declared advertising to be "an economic waste."

There are 110,000 food manufacturers, 62,500 wholesale and 911,000 retail dealers in food products who, no matter how small and insignificant they might be, would be subject to penalties of from $50 to $500 a day for violation of any rule made by the Department of Agriculture.

Tree That Catches Birds.

"Those who have had experience with poison-ivy do not need to be reminded of the venom lurking unsuspected in innocent-looking plants. From the strophanthus vine of the Tropics comes strophanthin, one of the most powerful poisons known. Natives of West Africa use it to tip their deadly arrows. Juice from oleander shrubs is so poisonous that even eating the harmless-looking pink or white blossoms may kill a person. In the western United States grow powerful herbs, locoweeds, which have a weird effect on animals. Cattle, sheep, and horses that eat them soon lose their muscular co-ordination. They stagger drunkenly around and may eventually die. They lose all sense of proportion and act as if crazy, rearing up to jump over small sticks as if they were log barriers.

"A tree which grows in Sumatra has an effect on birds equally disastrous. Not poison, but a glue-like gum covering its fruits, is the cause. When small birds alight near the fruits, their wings become so glued together that they cannot fly and fall to the ground.

"There are many odd plants among those that man eats with impunity. In some sections of Ceylon, the large ivory-white blossoms of the agati tree are eaten as vegetables. Aristocrat among the plant products used in modern western cooking is vanilla, derived from an orchid. One of the strangest fruits encountered is the so-called miraculous fruit. After eating one, everything, even a lemon tastes sweet. It causes this effect by temporarily paralyzing some of the papillae of the tongue."

Four Million Cars Listed in Storage

Atlantic City.—Out of the 26,000,000 motor vehicles in the United States, between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 are in storage. But by the end of 1935 improving conditions will bring 1,500,000 of them back into service.

Edward P. Chalfant, of Detroit, president of the American Trade association executives, gave that forecast. He added that the end of 1935 also will see 2,500,000 new cars and trucks produced and sold, and 1,500,000 old autos junked.

Chic Triple Sheer Print's the Thing

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE perfect costume for all-around practical daytime wear has arrived! See it pictured herewith. It's the dress with a jacket that is fashioned of the now-so-stylish triple sheer print. The smartest, the neatest, the most sensible and serviceable, the most attractive and best looking are befitting words when it comes to describing these jacket outfits.

There is not the slightest doubt about the wisdom of including one of the new ingeniously designed jacketed costumes in one's spring and summer wardrobe. It will prove an ever faithful standby ready for every daytime occasion. In the illustration we are showing three particularly good-looking models. They are types that women can live in from morning to night and always look well groomed.

These brand new jacket styles are in that famous fabric, triple sheer of bemberg, which is expensive in looks but not in cost. The material is pure dye, cool, washable, or dry-cleans perfectly, if you so prefer. Furthermore, it may be pressed with a hot iron without fear of pulling or slipping at the seams. And, oh, joy of joys, it is practically wrinkle proof and resistant to perspiration.

The extremely good-looking jacket suit to the right in the group is the sort that is ready to go places at a moment's notice. White pique spaghetti cordings and fastenings effectively trim the navy-with-white (other color combinations are available) sheer of bemberg material. Bandings of self-fabric are stitched row-and-row on a net foundation for the sleeves, the same also effectively used in the yoke of the dress. This treatment which has to do with appliques and stitched bandings and folds of the dress print on net backgrounds is one which is being played up by designers throughout current styling.

A flattering jacket costume in a new flower-patterned triple sheer with collar of organdie applique on a foundation of mousseline de sole is pictured to the left. Shirring accents shoulders, sleeves, and pockets. Shirring is very popular just now. It is the fashion to wear flowers, too, which is why this charming young woman has pinned a cluster of dainty posies at her throat.

What's more, fashion goes so far as to suggest "sets" of flowers. That is to say, a gardenia on one's hat is matched with a boutonniere of gardenias. More flower news is to the effect that the floral motif is to be changed to tune in with the mood and the color scheme of the costume. Pin violets on your hat today, wearing matching flowers on your coat lapel or on the bodice of your frock. Perhaps bright field flowers is choice for the day following, or if you would flaunt the favorite flower of the moment, it's the carnation.

As you can see, looking at the costume centered in the picture, a block print in triple sheer of bemberg has a heap o' swank about it. The brief jacket is styled in cape effect, and the yoke of the slim frock alternates narrow stripes of self-material spaced with the net foundation to which they are stitched. Her lovely summery chapeau has gone very feminine what with its flowers and ribbons and a big floppy brim.

Color Dictionary Lists 220 Standarized Tints

A dictionary of colors has recently been published by the British Color council. It consists of two volumes—one containing 220 silk ribbons each distinctly colored, named and tabulated; and the other presenting a history of each color, including the names which have described it in the past, and giving the authority for the present standardization.

While the primary purpose of the dictionary is to supply industry with a standard reference for colors, the work is expected to give valuable aid to artists and writers through an appropriate and accurate vocabulary for the description of shades and tints.

Colors have been "scientifically measured" and graded, making possible the inclusion of new shades, should they be developed in the future, into a definite and orderly system. Imagery, history and industry have combined to find names, some of the words having a fascination and delight of their own. Taken at random from the pages are Cyclamen pink, nettle gray, battleship gray, bee-eater blue, Chartreuse green, buttercup and banana.

see Distinct American Type in Future

polis.—If gentlemen of the will still prefer blonds they e a difficult time to find them ited States. So believes Prof. . Jenks, anthropologist of the ty of Minnesota.

first group of immigrants in- British, Germans, and Scandi- —tall and blond," says Profes- s. "Our later arrivals includ- hort and more heavily pigment- s from southern Europe. These groups have intermarried and lt will be a typical American irly tall, dark haired, dark d darker skinned than the pres- age."

e, doubtless, will evolve a dis- merican type—a composite of several principal strains. Whether the eventual type will be as Professor Jenks predicts can be answered only by time. The history of other nations can be cited in support of the blending processes.

In the year 1776 the population of the United States was 2,500,000, mostly English, but with a smattering of other racial groups. In 1930 the population was 122,775,046. This growth was phenomenal, almost 50-fold in less than 200 years, with the biggest gain, 47,000,000, from 1900.

This meant immigration from countries other than the old contributors, and today, while the old solid, native American strains still predominate, the foreign groups are far from being a small minority. This is shown in the complexion of the nation's several thousand counties. Before 1870 they were almost 100 per cent homogeneous. Today they are only one-third homogeneous.

The 1930 census showed the largest foreign groups in this order: German, Italian, English, Scottish, Welsh and North Irish, Polish, Canadian, Free State Irish, Swedish, Slavish, Norwegian, Austrian, and Hungarian.

Year by year intermarriage among groups grows, pointing toward an eventual American type.

Fewer Farmers Fail in 1934 Despite Drouth

Washington.—Although the drouth cost farmers plenty, fewer were bankrupt in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934, than in the corresponding periods of 1933 and '34.

The bureau of agricultural economics reported a reduction of 20 per cent in the number of farm bankruptcies in the 1934 period. There were 4,716 bankrupt farmers last year, compared with 5,917 in 1933, and 4,849 in 1932.

Largest bankruptcy declines were noted in east north central and Pacific areas, while twelve states, mainly in the south Atlantic division, showed increases. Illinois led all states with 527 cases.

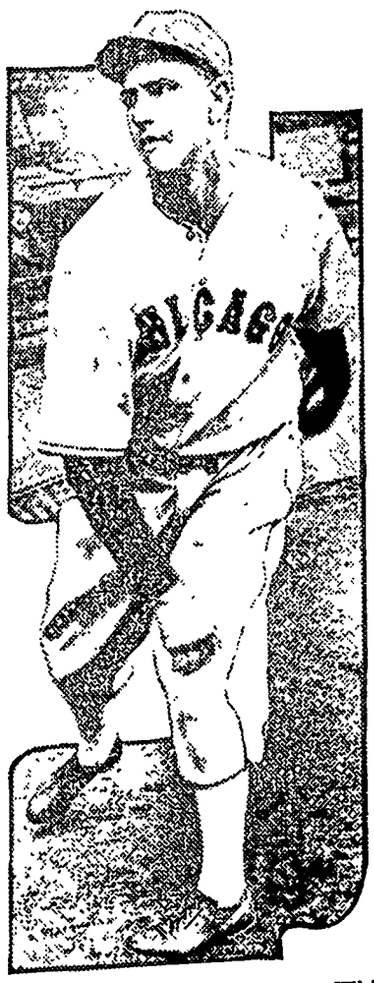
She recently demonstrated to a group of friends just how their grandmothers and great-grandmothers used to make the family's clothing.

Mrs. Davidson carded the wool on cards that showed the wear and tear of years of use. She displayed numerous articles she has made, including mittens, sox and wool-filled comforters.

SUCCESSFUL ROOKIE



Johnny Whitehead, Chicago White Sox pitcher, is one of the most successful of the rookies this year so far. Coming from the Dallas team of the Texas league, this is his first major league campaign and he is doing wonderfully well.

Texans Favor Farms

Fort Worth, Texas.—Tarrant county experienced a back-to-the-farm movement during the past four years. The farm census released here shows that on April 1, 1930, the county had 3,366 farms. Figures last January 1 listed 4,058, a gain of 692.

Calf Tops Records

Gloucester, Ohio.—A Holstein calf born on the dairy farm of D. M. Sawyer weighed 130 pounds, topping all records in the county and possibly in the state. The largest calf of record heretofore born weighed 105 pounds.

GLAMOR OF LACE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Lace has been shown in beautiful creations at every Paris collection this season. This very choice formal is of salmon pink lace, the full transparent skirt showing the slim, color-matched slip beneath. The sash of velvet ribbon is also in the identical salmon pink. Three strands of graduated pearls, a rhinestone bracelet and a pearl bracelet are the complementing jewelry notes.

PLEATED SKIRTS IN CHIFFON NEW STYLE

The tidal wave that has brought in more width for skirts has also brought in pleats. This type of fuller skirt is available in daytime and evening fashions, although the evening skirt version is being seen more often at present. It is a fashion that may be said to have come out of the emphasis on floating chiffon skirts, for most of the pleated styles so far are done in chiffon.

There is a particular genre in chiffon and pleats that goes with sunburst pleats, entire skirts and bodices also pleated—very Grecian, and reminiscent of the sunburst evening skirts which Mainbocher and Louiseboulanger offered in evening frocks at their openings.

But there are other interpretations of the pleated idea, in front fullness or back fullness, in those concentrated panel godets that are used often for adding width this season.

Coarse Novelty Straws Take Lead in Millinery

It is the way of hats to be anything and everything but ordinary. One of the new lines—it's impossible to designate any one type as the newest—is the hat with a brim which projects forward. Beret types are draped that way.

Coarse novelty straws, some shiny, some rough, are everywhere, but so, too, are Milans. There are any number of stitched taffeta hats and unusual felts.

The long threatened return of trimming has come. Milliners have followed the lead of the couturiere and are trimming with flowers.

Formal Swagger Coat

The formal swagger coat is a piquant newcomer. Done in woolens that vary from black to palest blue, with full sleeves and soft collars, they flare and swing above the most elegant of afternoon dresses.

The Klemme Times

Published every Wednesday at Klemme, Iowa. Entered at th Post Office at Klemme. Iowa a ssecond class matter.

Mrs. E. P. Sims and two children of Alamagordo, New Mexico; Mildred and LaMone Dulmes, Howard Rauwerdink and Elizabeth Huibregtse of Adell, Wis., visited with Dr. and Mrs. Dulmes Friday and Saturday.

Andrew Wellemeyer arrived in Klemme Monday morning from Springfield, Missouri, to be present at the wedding of his sister, Miss Ethel. "Jack" returned to Springfield Tuesday night. He is manager of one of the Lerner Stores at Springfield and likes both his job and the country there.

Dr. W. F. Missman drove to Iowa City Thursday and brought his son, Byrnes, and Dorance Day home for their summer vacation. Byrnes will be a Senior next fall and Dorance will enter his Junior year at the University.

Word has been received from a former Klemme resident, Chas Stiehl, now living at 1242 Wesley Drive, Long Beach, Calif., that he has an apartment ready for any friends who want to visit Long Beach or the Fair at San Diego this summer. Rent is free! The place has everything and is ready for cooking dinner.

Mrs. C. A. Arnold and Minnie Lenz drove to Springfield, Minnesota, Monday where they met Gayle Ridder who accompanied them home and who will work on the farm for Mrs. Arnold this summer. Gayle has spent many summers on the Arnold farm.

Conrad Quandt drove to Iowa City last Wednesday to bring his daughter, Gracka, home for the summer vacation. Miss Hazel Klovstadt, of Doon, Iowa, accompanied them to Klemme for a visit until Sunday when she went to her home in northwestern Iowa.

Miss Novella Bredbenner has finished a most successful term as a freshman at State Teachers College at Cedar Falls and is now at home to enjoy the summer vacation. Miss Mildred Johnson and Mrs. Bredbenner drove down to bring her home.

Mrs. C. A. Arnold and Minnie Lenz Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gibbs, Ronald and Isabelle, drove to Springfield, Minn., Monday and met a load of the Ridder relatives from Watertown, South Dakota. Duane Ridder came home with the Klemme relatives and will spend the summer here. At Springfield they visited at the Wm. Koerner home.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Arnold and Bruce and Mrs. C. A. Arnold drove to Charles City Sunday to hear Dr. A. H. Pruessner, a missionary of Sumatra and a former college mate of Mrs. Elmer Arnold, speak at the Central Methodist Church. They arrived in time for Sabbath School. A picnic dinner at Wildwood park was arranged for former college students. They also visited with the Bettin family while there.

Memorial Day Services in Klemme were well attended. The day was ideal for the outdoor service in the Park where Rev. Zabilka delivered the address. The Klemme Band, under the direction of Miss Mildred Johnson, made its first appearance this season. Following the Park services a parade was formed to go to the cemetery where short services were held by the Legion and Auxiliary.

SUPREME COURT INVALIDATES NRA AND FRAZIER-LEMKE FARM MORTGAGE ACT.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
©, Western Newspaper Union.

THREE unanimous decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States shook the New Deal to its very foundations. In the first and most important, read by Chief Justice Hughes the heart was cut out of the NRA, for the court ruled that the entire code structure of the act was invalid, the code making provisions being an unconstitutional delegation by congress of its authority to legislate to persons not connected with the government's legislative functions. By the ruling the exercise of congressional powers over commerce was definitely restricted to interstate commerce, or to such activities as have a provable direct connection with interstate commerce. The court held that no economic emergency could justify the breaking down of the limitations upon federal authority as prescribed by the Constitution or of those powers reserved to the state through the failure of the Constitution to place them elsewhere.

Next in importance was the decision read by Justice Brandeis, holding unconstitutional the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act: This law provided for a five year moratorium in the case of collapse of efforts to scale down a farmer's debts to a figure that would enable him to pay off his mortgage. The court held that under the Fifth amendment to the Constitution private property could not be taken without just compensation. There has been no previous instance, the court said, where a mortgage was forced to relinquish property to a mortgagor free of lien unless the debt was paid in full.

In the third decision President Roosevelt's dismissal of the late William E. Humphrey from the federal trade commission was held illegal because the President did not remove Mr. Humphrey for the statutory grounds of inefficiency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office, but, as the President stated, because their minds did not meet upon the policies or administration of the commission.

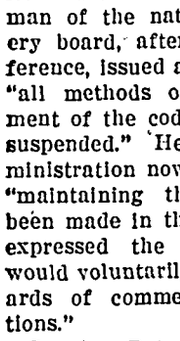
THERE was consternation and confusion among the administration forces in Washington, and no one could say immediately just how much the New Deal had been damaged or what could be done to repair the damage to its structure. Donald Richberg, chairman of the national industrial recovery board, after a White House conference, issued a statement saying that "all methods of compulsory enforcement of the codes will be immediately suspended." He added that the administration now faced the problem of "maintaining the gains which have been made in the last two years," and expressed the hope that employers would voluntarily maintain "fair standards of commercial and labor relations."

Senator Pat Harrison said he believed congress should proceed rapidly with the enactment of appropriate legislation to continue NRA in some form, and Senator Robinson thought it would not be difficult to provide for new codes to prevent unfair trade practices.

The question of the constitutionality of the Wagner labor disputes bill, passed by the senate, was raised by the NRA decision. The opinion was widely expressed that collective bargaining now cannot be enforced in any business enterprise by federal statute.

In the senate demands were voiced to recommit to the committee on agriculture the amendments strengthening the AAA. Senator W. E. Borah said that the NRA decision clearly raises the question of the validity of much AAA procedure.

FRANK C. WALKER'S present job as head of the division of allotments and information in connection with the work-relief program is not so important as had been expected, and probably by the end of the year or earlier he will be able to delegate his duties to others. Then, according to current rumors, he will enter the President's cabinet as postmaster general, to succeed Jim Farley.



Frank C. Walker

Mr. Farley has definitely decided to retire from the cabinet —voluntarily, it is said —so that he can devote all his time and energy to directing the campaign of Mr. Roosevelt for renomination and re-election. He expects to remain not only as chairman of the national Democratic committee but also as chairman of the New York state committee. In order that he may have an income he plans to make a business connection with an important organization that will not interfere with his political activities.

There has been a lot of talk about Mr. Farley's alleged ambition to be governor of New York. Melvin C. Eaton, Republican state chairman, dares him to run for that position. In a speech at Syracuse, Mr. Eaton said:

"For years, now, Mr. Farley has fancied himself as a candidate for governor of New York. He has repeatedly told his very close associates that he will 'run when the time is ripe.' I challenge Mr. Farley to be the Democratic candidate for governor in 1936. I challenge him to run on his record. I know a great many Democrats who are ready and willing to contribute lavishly to a Farley-for-governor campaign fund, for no other reason than to get a crack at him through the polls."

ONLY nine states of the Central West will send delegates to the "Grass Roots" convention of the Republican party which opens June 10 in Springfield, Ill., but the meeting will nevertheless be rather national in scope, for it will be attended by unofficial delegates from other states and by national leaders of the party. It was believed that Harrison E. Spangler, national committeeman from Iowa, would be made temporary chairman and as such would deliver the keynote address. Others on the tentative program for speeches are Arthur M. Hyde, former governor of Missouri and secretary of agriculture in the Hoover cabinet, and Edward Hayes of Decatur, Ill., former national commander of the American Legion.

A. M. Hyde

The keynote address, according to reports, will take inventory of American affairs under the Roosevelt New Deal and indicate the trend of the party in opposition. Mr. Hyde is to talk on the Great Emancipator at the Lincoln tomb in Oak Ridge cemetery, and Hayes is expected to deal with the theories of the Republican party on constitutional government.

IN the May survey published by the American Federation of Labor industry is charged with withholding 4,000,000 jobs in a "strike" against New Deal legislative proposals. The survey referred to powerful lobbies against the Wagner labor disputes and 30-hour week bills; holding company control and the banking act; NRA and economic security legislation. The opposition grew into "open revolt" in resolutions passed early in May by the United States Chamber of Commerce, the labor federation said.

On the other hand, President Green of the federation has been openly threatening a general strike of organized labor if the measures mentioned above are not enacted. How many jobs a general strike would take away from workers now employed has not been closely estimated. There seems to be a lack of consistency somewhere.

SETTING a new precedent, President Roosevelt "acted as his own messenger" and personally returned to Speaker Byrne the Patman bonus measure with his disapproval. Before a joint session of the house and senate and crowded galleries the Chief Executive read his veto message, an able and well ordered document in which he set forth his conviction that "the welfare of the nation as well as the future welfare of the veterans wholly justifies my disapproval of this measure." Asserting that an able-bodied citizen, even though he wore a uniform, should not be accorded treatment different from that of other citizens, he said:

President Roosevelt

"The veteran who is disabled owes his condition to the war. The healthy veteran who is unemployed owes his troubles to the depression. Any attempt to mingle the two problems is to confuse our efforts."

Mr. Roosevelt's stern warning against the dangers of inflation inherent in the measure was listened to in silence, though there was mild applause at other times. All his argument was in vain so far as the house was concerned, for as he left the chamber there were quick demands for a vote and by the time he had reached the White House the representatives had overriden his veto and again passed the bill by a vote of 322 to 98. In the affirmative were 248 Democrats, 64 Republicans, 7 Progressives and 3 Farmer-Laborites. Those voting to sustain the veto were 60 Democrats and 38 Republicans.

The debate in the senate was long and perfervid, and quite unnecessary because the result of the vote had been a certainty for several days. Fifty-four senators voted to override the veto; but 40 supported the President, and only 32 were needed to kill the measure.

SECRETARY HULL signed a reciprocal tariff bargain with Sweden, the fifth to be completed under his program which he has been promoting for about a year. The results of his efforts have been seemingly small and consequently a good many people are paying more attention to the alternative plan advocated by George N. Peek, special adviser to the President on foreign trade. The Peek proposals embody a system of trade restrictions such as have been adopted by most other nations, and he warmly argued in their behalf before the Mississippi Valley foreign trade conference at St. Louis, only a few hours before Mr. Hull signed the pact with Sweden.

LAWSON LITTLE, the brawny young Californian, won the British amateur golf championship for the second consecutive year, being the first American to accomplish that feat. His final match with Dr. William Tweddell ended only on the thirty-sixth green, and he decided to take a month's rest before competing in the British open.

Jane Addams of Hull House What Is Reality? Ludendorff Said No A Woodpecker Sermon

Miss Jane Addams "of Hull House" is dead. She set an admirable example before men and women. She devoted her life and her fortune, all of her time, effort and money, to the welfare of unfortunate women and children. She was one of those that make it difficult not to believe in heaven.

Arthur Brisbane

If there were no future rewards for such goodness the entire universe, with its relativities, quantums, electrons and light-years, would be one ghastly joke.

Learned Professor Einstein, with the also learned Professors B. Podolsky and N. Rosen, all of Princeton Institute for Advanced Study, makes a deep announcement that will interest those that can understand it.

This is it, condensed:

"A scientific theory can be devised which will completely describe reality."

It seems the present scientific theory, supposed to give a description of physical reality by the "quantum-mechanical" method, does not work out satisfactorily, and you are sorry you learned it.

It is pleasant to see scientists on the shore of the ocean of knowledge, playing with one or two little pebbles. Science is far from any "scientific theory that will completely describe reality," for science cannot tell what "reality" is.

In a universe without limits of time or space, made up of particles of electricity variously grouped, in electrons, atoms and molecules, no man-microbe can hope "completely to describe reality."

Chancellor Hitler of Germany conferred upon the fighting German General Ludendorff the title "field marshal general," highest rank in Germany's army. General Ludendorff, greatest, after Von Hindenburg, in the big war, declined with thanks, announced his retirement to a small hunting lodge in the Bavarian mountains. It is suggested that Germany's most distinguished living general did not feel that his glory could be increased by Chancellor Hitler, who was a corporal in the army of Austria.

"Sermons in stones, and good in everything."

There must be a sermon in the Chicago woodpecker that every morning woke his neighborhood drumming on a copper drainpipe.

The copper resisted, but the woodpecker drummed on until a boy with a slingshot stopped him forever. What is the sermon?

Does it deal with modern efforts to ignore the nature of man, stand old "Supply and Demand" on his head, and prove that super-intelligence can make the world over in ten minutes?

Professor Kemmerer, financial expert, of Princeton, worrying about inflation, "too much money in circulation," says the government is spending money twice as fast as it comes in. This, he says, is done by "pumping the banks full of artificial credit." Having done that, the government borrows its own money from the banks and pays them interest, which seems mildly amusing.

President Roosevelt may be right about professors. An eight-year-old girl missing in New York; all police detectives, plus 60 policemen, especially assigned, and troops of Boy Scouts searched the neighborhood vainly for 01 hours.

Prof. Taylor Putney, Jr., of New York university, said to the police: "I saw boys and girls digging a cave in the sand late on the day of the girl's disappearance; look there," and pointed. There at the foot of the concrete wall the girl was found, apparently smothered by sand that had caved in. There is much in knowing how to look for what you want to find.

In New York city racketeers collect $10,000,000 a year from poultry dealers, having, by way of persuasion, killed a few of them.

To discourage the racketeering, Police Commissioner Valentine tells merchants to "slug racketeers" at sight and offers to help them get revolvers for shooting.

An old poker player when he "raised" used to say: "The best way to discourage vice is to make it expensive."

Very old is the story of the fish in which was found a precious ring that the tyrant of Samos had dropped into the sea. And new is the story from Sydney about a captured shark that disgorged the tattooed arm of a man. The man had been murdered, his body dismembered, the parts thrown into the sea. The shark swallowed one arm, returned it as evidence and the murderer may hang. Invent something more improbable than that.

HERE'S AMERICAN OF THE FUTURE

As Depicted by Prominent Anthropologist.

Those of us who might be interested in science's quest to determine the exact nature of the typical American so far as his physical makeup is concerned, probably will find some small comfort in the theory of Professor Albert E. Jenks, a noted anthropologist of the University of Minnesota. The gist of Professor Jenks' opinion is that whatever the number of conflicting conceptions might exist at the moment as to the physical identity of the American, the time is not too far distant when he will have a definite and recognizable racial classification.

The typical American, according to Professor Jenks, will not be a tall blond person, as some might have supposed. He will be only "fairly tall," dark eyed, dark-haired and darker skinned than the present average. This, he asserts, will be the ultimate outcome of the interbreeding among the early and late arrivals on this continent. Upon the whole, if Professor Jenks' theory is well founded, the typical American will not be an unattractive person, assuming of course, that he incorporates a portion of the better physical qualities of each of the racial strains that make him.

Man's concern over the question of what he is, as well as what he does, is not motivated solely by considerations of vanity. Curiosity also plays its part. In seeking the Hellene of the classicist and the Roman of the Etruscan line he finds them not in the Greek and Italian of today. He becomes giddy, striving to follow the ancient medley of races that swarmed and intermingled on the Spanish peninsula. In striving to trace his family lineage he is dismayed by the multitude of his own ancestors, enough to populate a small city within a surprisingly few generations.

In any event, and whatever we of America might eventually become, there is comfort in the thought that we shall be a definite something. Since we are a nation, there is little reason why we should not also be a race; and it must be acknowledged that there is some excellent material here.—Manchester (N. H.) Union.

Feline Mrs. Dionne Didn't Like the "Hospital"

"Mrs. Tailspin," mascot of the Newark airport, was mighty proud of her newly born quintuplets, but like Mrs. Dionne of Canada, she didn't seem to care for the neat little hospital provided for them. In the photograph she is seen trying to move the little ones to her own hideaway. The kittens are named U.A.L., E.A.L., A.A.L., T.W.A.,—after prominent airlines—and A.T.D. in honor of Air Transport day.

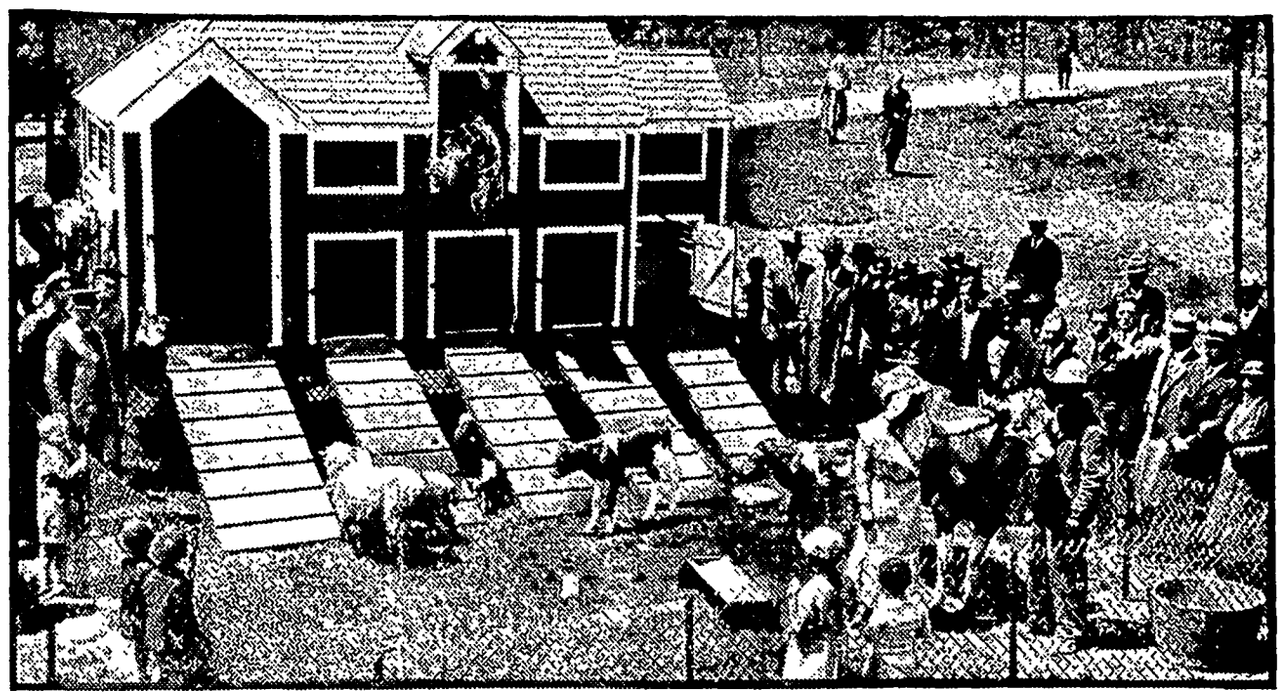
Showing the Country to City Children



To create a rural atmosphere for the benefit of city children, the New York park department has built the "traveling barnyard" shown above. It is mounted on a truck and visits the various parks and play grounds, attracting crowds of little ones who never before have heard a chicken cluck or felt the soft nose of a calf.

WHEN LIVES ARE AT STAKE

You need the same tire protection that race drivers demand

KELLEY PETILLO ON MAY 30TH, WON THE FIVE Hundred mile Indianapolis race on Firestone Tires, breaking the track record and driving the entire distance at a rate of 106.240 miles per hour.

This record is an astounding demonstration of tire efficiency. To go 500 miles in less than five hours on this rough and bumpy 26-year-old brick track demonstrates the strength and blowout protection that Firestone builds into their Gum-Dipped Tires.

AB JENKINS ALSO RECENTLY DEMONSTRATED THE stamina, efficiency, and blowout protection built into Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. He drove his 5000 pound car over the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, 3000 miles in 23½ hours. This was an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, and although temperatures were as high as 120°, he had no blowouts or tire trouble of any kind.

These records are made possible by special construction features built into Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

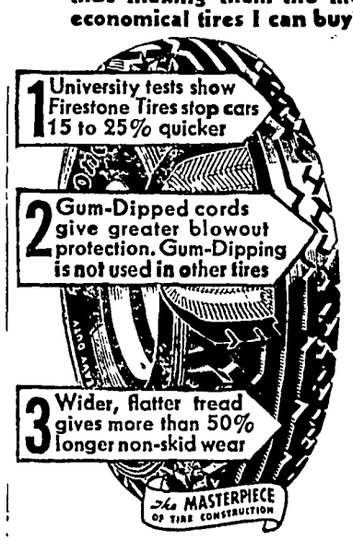
Take no chances—protect your life and the lives of others by letting us equip your car with Firestone Tires.

Before you buy new tires ask yourself these three questions

1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?" Answer No. 1—University tests show Firestone Tires stop your car 15% quicker than best tires.

2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?" Answer No. 2—Unequaled performance records prove that Gum-Dipping gives the greatest blowout protection known.

3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?" Answer No. 3—Car owners report unequaled mileage records of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone Tires.



1 University tests show Firestone Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker
2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires
3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear

HITCHHIKER IN HOSPITAL FOLLOWING AUTO CRASH

Frank Stevens Taken To Mason City Gobert Boy Brought To Klemme

Frank Stevens of Colo, Iowa, who was hitchhiking to Garner last Wednesday evening, after having transacted business in Klemme late that afternoon, was seriously injured about 7:30 o'clock when the car in which he was given a ride, and another auto collided at the Wes Lenz corner, two miles north of Klemme on highway 69. Stevens was taken to the Mercy hospital at Mason City where his conditon was reported as serious.

Henry Gobert and small son, who reside on their farm south and east of Klemme, were on their way to Garner when they stopped near the Verner Stromer farm to pick up Stevens and give him a ride to Garner. The Gobert car and an auto occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Pannhoff and children collided at the intersection at the Lenz corner. The Pannhoff car was coming from a side road from the east and the Gobert car was going north on pavement No. 69.

The Gobert boy was injured in the crash and was brought to Klemme by a local physician for treatment for a cut between his eyes. None in the Pannhoff car were injured. Both cars were badly damaged.

LOCAL ROYAL NEIGHBORS TO ATTEND COUNTY GATHERING

Camp No. 1645, Royal Neighbors of America, of Klemme, Iowa, will send a delegation to the Hancock county convention of Royal Neighbor camps, which will be held in Britt, Iowa on Friday, June 21.

Four camps of Royal Neighbors of America are located in Hancock county and each is scheduled to be represented at the session in Britt. The camps are: Camp No. 474, Garner; Camp No. 620, Corwith; Camp No. 1645 Klemme; and Camp No. 1732 Britt.

Mrs. Grace McCurdy of Des Moines, Iowa, chairman of the board of supreme managers of Royal Neighbors of America, will be a guest of honor at the lodge affair. For a number of years Mrs. McCurdy has played a leading part in the progress of Royal Neighbors of America as a fraternal benefit society. She has been a member of the society's board of supreme managers since 1928.

The visit of the supreme officer is expected to attract a large attendance for the gathering of Royal Neighbors of America in Britt. Mrs. McCurdy is scheduled to deliver an address as one of the features of the program.

R. A. GRIFFIN WAS SPEAKER AT 8TH GRADE GRADUATION

Exercises Were Held Thursday In Garner Auditorium At 10 a. m.

One hundred and sixty-eight students, representing every township in Hancock County and the Miller Indpendent and St. John's Lutheran school, were graduated at the thirty-first annual commencement of eighth grade pupils of the public schools of Hancock County held on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in the Garner high school auditorium.

The program for the morning's exercises included: Class march, played by Gail Kimble of Garner; invocation by the Rev. C. A. Schmid pastor of the Peace and Zion Reformed churches; music, selected by the rural school chorus; address to the graduates by Mr. R. A. Griffin, state inspector of consolidated schools; song, "America the Beautiful," by class; presentation of honor letters by Mr. Griffin; presentation of diplomas by J. R. Baggs; song, "America," by the audience.

Among the list of graduates who received their diplomas at the exercises Thursday were:

Avlery township—Evelyn Arnold, Leo Barkema, Boyd Nelson.

Ell township—Stella Barz, Lester Neuberger, Harold Wicks.

Liberty township—Loraine Bredlow, LeRoy Bredlow, Marva Jean Bredlow, Marie DeWeerdt, Eva May Jensen, Rita M. Lorenz, Lois M. Jensen, Rita Alva Reimer, Ruth Ridder, Virgil Stille, Eugene Schaefer, Melvin M. Schaefer, Lorena Tanner, Howard Schoenwetter, George Zrostlik.

INSUFFICIENT MOISTURE IS CHIEF CORN LIMITER

Cultivate Corn Only When Weed Grouth Is Present

Weeds reduce corn yields largely because of the moisture which they take from the corn, H. D. Hughes, head of the Farm Crops Department at Iowa State College, explains.

It is believed that water limits corn yields more than any other factor and that the yield of corn varies with the presence of weeds in the field. It has been found that the average amount of water required to produce 1 pound of corn is 368 pounds, measuring only the water that passes through the plant.

Water requirements for some of the common weeds found in Iowa corn fields have been found to be 432 pounds of water for 1 pound of cockleburs, 801 pounds of water for 1 pound of lambsquarter, and 948 pounds of water for 1 pound of ragweed.

For each pound of ragweed grown in corn, a decrease of approximately 3 pounds of corn may be expected, for lambsquarter a decrease of 2 pounds, and each pound of cocklebur will decrease corn more than 1 pound.

Of the more common field crops sorghum requires the least water in proportion to the crop tonnage while alfalfa and flax require the most—322 for sorghum, 831 for alfalfa and 905 for flax. In comparison with the 368 pounds of water required to produce one pound of corn oats require 597 pounds of water and clover 797.

There is comparatively little good to be gained from cultivation other than for weed control, but in Iowa corn fields this problem nearly always exists. If there is no weed growth in the corn field, the labor and expense of cultivation may well be eliminated.

MISS MARIE BLANK RESIGNED POSITION AT THADA STORE

Will Enter Beauty Culture School At Des Moines In July

Miss Marie Blank has resigned her position at the W. L. Thada store, effective July 1st.

Miss Blank, after a short vacati n, will leave for Des Moines the second week in July where she will enter the Thompsin School of Beauty for an eight months course. Miss Blank was at Des Moines Monday and enrolled at the school and made arrangements for her stay in Des Moines.

Miss Blank has been a member of the business circle in Klemme for several years as a clerk. She was employed by Arthur Wellemeyer as clerk and was employed by Mr. Thada whn he purchased the store. Miss Blank is an effisient and courteous clerk and the many friends she has made can be numbered by the hundreds. All will miss her at the store.

If present plans materialize Miss Blank may open a beauty shop in Klemme after completing her work at the beauty school.

REV. C. A. SCHMID RESIGNS AS PASTOR OF TWO CHURCHES

Rev. C. A. Schmid, who has been pastor of the Ell township Peace and the Garner Zion Reformed churches for the past twenty-one years, tendered his resignation as a joint meeting of the two boards recently.

Rev. Schmidt has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Reformed Congregation at Berne, Indiana. His resignation is effective as of July 26th, 1935, which date completes his 21st year as Pastor of the Peace and Zion churches.

CUT OATS FOR HAY; IS GOOD SUBSTITUTE FOR CLOVER

An acute hay shortage exists on most Iowa farms because of the loss of clover and grass seedings made a year ago this spring and because of the losses from winterkilling last winter. Cutting a part of the oat acreage for hay offers the best solution of the hay shortage problem, in the opinion of H. D. Hughes, head of the Farm Crops Department at Iowa State College. More oats will be cut and made into hay during the next few weeks than for many years past.

Oats gives a large hay yield and are both nutritious and palatable. Making oat hay also relieves the hay situation much earlier in the season than would be possible with soybeans, sudan or any other crop. Oats cut for hay this year are likely to be more profitable on many farms than the portion of the crop allowed to ripen normally and threshed for grain. The cost of harvesting is likely to be considerably less if the crop is used for hay.

Cutting small grain and making the crop into hay is recognized as favorable to the success of clover and grass seedings put in with the small grain. When the growth of small grain is either heavy or light the clover and grass can be grown more successfully by getting the small grain off early. Under extreme conditions the grass and clover seedings are likely to fail if the grain is allowed to mature.

Any small grain cut in the milk stage makes satisfactory hay. Barley is regarded as one of the best for hay; but the yield of this crop is usually lower than oats. Winter rye for hay should be cut when in the blossom stage rather than waiting until the grain is in the milk stage.

LEFT ON FISHING TRIP IN NORTHERN MINNESOTA

Two Parties Of Klemme Fishermen Are At Northern Lakes

Two delegations of nimrods left Klemme Tuesday morning, bound for the lakes of northern Minnesota to enjoy several days of fishing.

"Stub" Lewis, Albert Swanson and Elmer Schlei left early Tuesday morning for a favorite lake in northern Minnesota where the big ones are supposed to be easly captured.

C. A. Larsen accompanied by "Butch" Schroeder of Chicago, Wilbur Carr of Garner and Clair Christie of Belmond made up another party of fishermen who left Tuesday forenoon for northern Minnesota, to spend several days angling for the finny tribe.

Walt Thada, "Stub" Lewis, W. F. Greiman and Louis Weaver returned Saturday evening from northern Minnesota with a fine catch of pike of various sizes.

LIBERTY FARMERS UNION MET MONDAY, JUNE 3RD

The regular meeting of the Liberty Local of the Farmer's Union was held in the Liberty schoolhouse No. 7 on June 3rd. A large number were present.

The regular business meeting was followed by the program which consisted of songs and a very interesting debate between the Lime Creek and Liberty Locals.

It was voted upon to take part in a picnic of the Farmers' Union of Hancock and Cerro Gordo counties in the near future. At present the date of this picnic has not been set.

The meeting was closed after lunch had been served by the committee. The next meeting of the Liberty Local will be held July 1 at the Liberty schoolhouse No. 7.

FOUND PETRIFIED WOOD IN KLEMME

When Frank and John Ward were excavating a basement for a house in Morningside last Thursday they struck a small hard substance which they thought was a stone, but upon closer examination proved to be a piece of petrified wood. The wood was found about five feet from the surface of the ground.

WEATHER BUREAU SENDS UP BALLOONS FOR INFORMATION

Everyone in Iowa should keep their eyes open for small, red silk parachutes with tiny baskets of scientific instruments attached, according to Charles D. Reed, Director of the Weather and Crop Bureau of the Iowa Department of Agriculture. Farmers should be especially vigilant, as they cover a wide expanse of fields in cultivation or otherwise caring for crops.

On June 1, the Weather Bureau at its Airport station in Omaha, began sending up small balloons with recording instruments attached each day, about an hour before sunset, and will send up additional balloons about sunrise June 11, 12 and 13. These balloons will rise to a height of 50,000 to 60,000 feet, well into the stratosphere, where they will burst and let down instruments with the parachutes. Continuous records of temperature, pressure and humidity will be recorded as the instruments ascend and descend.

Anyone finding such a set of instruments, and returning them according to directions attached to the basket, will receive $3.00. Most of them will land in Iowa or Northern Missouri. Through the cooperation of the press and the citizens a similar effort in January, 1934, resulted in the recovery of 45 sets of instruments out of 46 released.

The Monthly Birthday Party was held at the Liberty Methodist church Monday evening. Rev. Muhlman will preach at Liberty every evening during the week for revival services.

COUNTY "RALLY DAY" OF 4-H GIRLS' CLUBS IS JUNE 14TH

"Rally Day" which starts the summer club activity for all 4-H club girls in Hancock county is near at hand.

Marjorie A Chollett, home demonstration agent, announces that the annual Rally Day will be held on June 14 at Garner high school auditorium. Attending in addition to the members, leaders and parents will be special guests invited by members of the 11 clubs in the county.

Registration begins at 1:00. Mr. J. R. Mounce, supt. of Garner public schools, will present the address of welcome. Response will be made by Norma Wille, county 4-H president.

Following the initiation ceremony of an honorary member by Madison Live Wire Club, there will be reports of the county secretary and historian. Then, there will be the election of officers.

Next on the program will be the Music Festival wherein all clubs will participate. There will be the ceremony of crowning the county 4-H queen and the installation of the officers for the coming year.

A dramatization of the opera "The Bohemian Girl" as studied by the 4-H girls will close the days program.

Bible School Picnic Friday

The Daily Vacation Bible School held at the Methodist Church will close Friday noon with a picnic. The pupils will bring a picnic lunch for noon and will spend the afternoon playing games.

Rev. Zabilka has announced that a picnic for Liberty and Klemme Sunday Schools will be held at a later date.

BOY'S IDEA OF GEESE

Geese is a low, heavy set bird which is mostly meat and feathers. His head sits on one end and he sits on the other. Geese can't sit much on the account of the dampness of the moisture. He ain't got no between-his-toes and he's got a little balloon in his stumuk to keep from sinking. Some geese when they gets big has curls on their tails and is called ganders. Ganders don't haff to sit and hatch, but just eat and loaf and go swimming. If I were a goose I'd rather be a gander.

BRISBANE
THIS WEEK

Goodby, NRA
Wall Street's Dormouse
Good Wages, Short Hours
Lottery Swindles

The Supreme court unanimously declares NRA unconstitutional.

Arthur Brisbane

High judges, whose decision nobody can veto, short of a constitutional amendment, say congress must do its work and cannot abdicate in favor of the Chief Executive.

The most important decision in many years, this probably makes further argument about extension of NRA unnecessary. You can't extend that which is dead. American business men may now resume business not led by the kindly light of professors and others.

Alice's puzzled Dormouse, at the Mad Hatter's tea party, could not understand his watch, that would not keep time, although the Dormouse did everything. He dipped the watch in his tea, put butter in the works. "It was the best butter," he said, "but nothing seems to please it."

The stock exchange is something like that watch—nothing seems to please it, either.

At first, stock broker gentlemen, whose "Kaaba stone" is the stock ticker, began a weird dance of joy when they heard that NRA was dead, and pushed up stock prices.

Then, suddenly, as the day wore on, one broker asked another, and every broker asked every other broker, "How do we know what is coming next?" And then they put the prices down.

It is announced, but not by Mr. Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, that a great strike will be called in protest against the Supreme court's NRA decision. Mr. Green is too wise to permit, if he can prevent it, a strike against the United States Supreme court. He may, should, and probably will, take a wiser course and work, as organized labor has worked successfully for generations, to improve working conditions.

Some union men know that wages, hours and other conditions improved in the old way are more durable than increased pay based on political fiat. It is necessary for some one to provide as well as for some one to take it.

Peddlers of tickets in the Havana lottery send out "come-on" letters, trying to sell tickets to foolish Americans. On one such letter this is printed:

"Arthur Brisbane says large sums of money . . . are won by Americans buying foreign tickets."

What Arthur Brisbane has said, and now repeats, is that through foreign lottery schemes Americans are swindled out of large sums. He who invests in a lottery throws away his money, adding foolishness to incapacity. The Havana lottery is as much of a trap for fools as any other lottery.

Postmaster Farley's plan to hasten air mails allows a crowd of 10,000 to see a whirling autogiro drop down on the roof and deliver mail, another autogiro coming to get mail bags and carry them away.

Mr. Farley's plan is to have the autogiro fly between outlying flying fields, where high-power, fast planes land, and carry mail bags to the roofs of city post offices, saving time lost in slow street travel.

One branch of the Standard Oil company, the New Jersey branch, managed by Mr. Teagle, notifies 6,000 of a bonus of 5 per cent added to their pay envelopes to meet the higher cost of living.

With no sign of smoke, flame, crater—nothing to indicate an extinct volcano—a new and live volcano suddenly begins eruption in an out-of-the-way place in Iceland. A great hole appears in the earth, flames and red-hot lava rise. No overflowing of neighboring farms as yet.

What would natives have thought had this happened in earlier days, when everybody believed that hell, the devil and all his wickedness were just beneath our feet and heaven just over our heads?

Postmaster General Farley thinks of printing on all postage stamps, Sursum Corda, which means "Lift up your hearts." He sees a great summer ahead, "a summer of content."

"Car loadings," says the postmaster general, "are up," incomes reported by our taxpayers "are up," "more people are buying automobiles than before."

For some, the big news is that Little, the San Francisco golfer, has defeated Doctor Tweddell, the British challenger.

For others, more important news is the killing of 300 Chinese by Japanese troops. The 300 killed are said to have been professional bandits. The killing of 300 armed Chinese bandits cost the lives of only six Japanese which sounds like efficiency.

Flower-Adorned Gowns of Real Silk

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION is recapturing the elegancies and enchantments which bespeak a truly feminine season. This message of a return to the exquisite, the aesthetic, the lovely and alluring in matter of dress is being told in countless beguiling trends.

A most happy evidence of increasing sentiment expressed for the sweetly feminine in dress, is the revival of that charming custom of wearing flowers, carrying flowers and trimming prettiest gowns with flowers. No need to tell you the fascinating things designers are doing with flowers, the illustration herewith speaks for itself.

Another evidence of the dawn of a new era of exquisitely feminine fashions is the re-enthronement of silk, real genuine "all-silk," mind you.

This call for real silk from those of discriminating taste is not a mere passing fancy but rather a sense of fabric identification which is developing among the fair sex. We are coming to know that such terms as crepe, satin, taffeta and the like, are not necessarily silk, and when they are, should be called silk crepe, silk satin, silk taffeta, and so on.

The duo theme of flowers and real silk sounds enticing—and is it? For answer, please refer to the trio of adorable evening creations in the accompanying picture. It adds a glamorous note to these distinguished and exquisite modes that they were selected for illustration from among a collection of costumes entered exclusively by society women shop owners in the metropolitan silk showing held recently in New York.

A deep lilac silk crepe (quality-kind pure silk) fashions the stately evening gown to the left, which bears out word from Paris that deep lilac and violet tones are outstanding this season. The wide bordering of silk violets which outlines the graceful cape speaks eloquently of the fascinating and ingenious play which designers are making with flowers.

The costume centered in the picture reflects a very ecstasy of beauty. This most alluring dinner ensemble is in gray (a very high-style color for evening) pure-silk taffeta. Its cunning jacket with quaint flowing-from-the-elbow sleeves is graced with a youthful collar faced with lilacs in delectable coloring. To complete the picture milady carries an intriguing muff done in lilacs to match.

Vaporous, elusively sheer and floating, muchly-draped and shirred chiffon is the idol of the hour for evening wear. The "darling of a gown" with "red riding hood" cape to the right in the group is of exquisite white silk chiffon. The evening hood is one of the outstanding features of the formal mode. Young girls adore them. As artful as fancy can picture is the shirring on this gown which occurs at shoulder cuffs and on the skirt. The very latest gesture in silhouettes is interpreted via the elaborate draping at the sides of the slender fitted skirt. Lilacs on the hood and worn as a corsage sing a song of springtime youth and beauty for this dream of a midsummer night chiffon ensemble.

SILK NET JACKET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This exotic silk print evening gown is white with green florals widely spaced. The silk net "butcher boy" capelike jacket is in the same shade of green. Front, back and the sleeves are pleated. This very beautiful twosome is worn by Gladys Swarthout, the lovely opera and movie star who was recently chosen as one of the ten best dressed women in America.

Pastel Colored Kids Are Latest Note in Footwear

Pastel colored kids are the next footnote. They come in pale powder blue, dusty pink, soft green and yellow, and they are designed in high cut-out sandals for afternoon wear with light frocks.

The new beach sandals come in white and eggshell linens bound with bright orange, blue or red kidskin strips to match the beach outfit.

REGENCY TREATMENT FOR SPRING COATS

"Draped bows," "butterfly revers," "front fullness in the bodice"—call it what you will—each phrase describes the treatment that persists through the Vionnet adaptations that are shown. The coat and wrap designers give this detail an impressive position in the second spring collections.

The "pouf" at front, which gives a pleasant Regency quality to the otherwise modern coat or frock, lends itself to a variety of interpretations—suitable for taffeta or flat fur for the coat and varied from ripping revers to double jabot in crisp formal wraps. Also important as a detail that promises to be heard from are the butterfly collars that are placed high across the shoulders rather than as jabot.

Knit Suit Styles Inspire You to Do One Yourself

You know how important the suit is to be. But had you thought of knitting one for yourself? You'd be inspired to make the effort after taking one look at a three-piece which includes a British looking short jacket, with skirt and sweater blouse. The jacket has all the airs of the high-powered English tailored suits of the season, with its high notched lapels, its semi-fitted lines and its casual one-button closing. Skirt and jacket are done in diagonal ribbing, with the same effectiveness of the smartest diagonal woolens.

Tweed knit coat designs are nothing short of superb.

Taffeta Takes Prominent Place in Fashion Parade

Crisp taffeta continues as a highlight of the spring fashion parade. Rustling bags, gloves, sleeves, revers, blouses and dresses are being taken for granted, but have you seen the dashing navy and white taffeta gloves?

To make them fit well, the palms are of soft woven silk. They are gauntlet type, with a heavily corded, flared cuff. They are particularly smart with a dressy navy suit and an ideal accessory.

Soft Soap

By JANE HARVEY

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

IT WAS an early fall morning in the big city. Busses were pursuing their quiet pilgrimages past Mrs. Hannigan's boarding and rooming house. Mrs. Hannigan's bed of zinnias glowed with beauty in the morning sun. Karen, scrubbing the front steps, paused a moment to admire them.

Quite suddenly, the landlady's ample figure filled the doorway:

"Karen! Where's your soap?"

"But of course—in the water."

"Meltin' itself soft! Take it out! I never see such soap bills! A body'd think you eat it!"

"I am not that hungry—yet," flashed Karen, red staining her fair cheeks. "And if I leave it not in the water, I get me no suds."

"Take it out! I won't speak to you again!" hissed Mrs. Hannigan.

"But that would be lovely," sighed the girl under her breath.

The landlady stepped back into the house to greet her guests with her warm motherly smile and Karen turned to her work. Obediently, she took the bar of yellow soap from the water and laid it on the step beside her. She wielded the scrubbing brush with a fine fervor which was not wholly inspired by a desire for cleanliness. Some of it was merely an outlet for her charged emotions. For Karen was in love and there was no one in America in whom she could confide her big secret.

He—the glorified hero of her dreams—was a roomer and boarder at Mrs. Hannigan's. He was as stalwart as a Norse god should be and a countryman of Karen's. Also, he was quite unaware of her existence except as the maid who cleaned his room and scrubbed the front steps.

On this bright morning she was finding life difficult and hard to endure. Great sighs welled up from her heart and spilled over her red lips. When she heard the guests pushing back their chairs in the dining room, she tipped back upon her heels and carefully brushed the hair from her forehead. Soon her hero would appear. He would pass her on the steps, throwing her a careless "Good morning!" This was the high moment of her day. Before she had secured the last wisp of yellow hair, the door opened and he stepped out. Karen rose quickly to her feet, drawing aside to let him pass. He took a single stride out and down, stepped on Karen's soap and skidded into her with violence. Karen, startled out of her shyness, caught him in a warm embrace and held him so until he could recover his dignity and his balance.

"Dod ding the girl!" he burst out, and added: "Can't you keep your soap in the water where it belongs?"

"I am so—so sorry. It is so too bad you have almost a fall! But Mrs. Hannigan she tell me always keep the soap out of the water. So I do and you have almost kill yourself."

Oscar Helversen—for such was her hero's name—met the pleading of her anchusa-blue eyes with a steely glare.

"I have troubles enough without my neck yet!" he barked.

"You have troubles?" murmured Karen, softly. "I am sorry for that, too."

He turned the full battery of his attention upon her and found her very easy to look at. He murmured something about catching a bus and went on his way.

When Oscar arrived at the boarding house that night, his nostrils were greeted with the odor of mutton. Oscar hated mutton. He decided on impulse, to go out for dinner. On his way up to his room he met Karen. She was altogether lovely in a dark blue suit with white cuffs and collar. She wore a small hat and carried a suit case.

"Going out?" he asked.

"Way out," she sighed. "Mrs. Hannigan saw you slip this morning and tell me to go."

"But—where—"

"The W. Y. till I find work."

"But—seeing it was my fault—maybe we better go out to dinner somewhere and talk it over—"

"But I would love that!" cried Karen, her blue eyes shining.

Oscar took her suitcase from her and they went to a nearby cafe.

It was a delightful supper piled on trays and carried to a secluded table. They talked—but not about their troubles. Troubles were postponed or dissolved or chemically changed into something magic so that they no longer existed for Karen and Oscar.

Other evenings followed: 'til Karen and Oscar decided that two can live as cheaply as one and much more happily.

It was several months after the ceremony when Oscar digging about in his wife's dresser drawer for a bit of court plaster, came upon a battered yellow substance with a disagreeable and familiar odor.

"Karen!" he called. "Kum haar!"

Karen came.

Karen took the yellow thing tenderly in her hand and a beatific smile curved her lips.

"This is the piece of soap which I have not—for once—waste and which has sent you leaping into my arms, Oscar. Mrs. Hannigan tell me I must leave it out of the water—and I did."

"Well, Karen, Mrs. Hannigan—for once—was right!"

"Yes—she was right! If I leave the soap in the water, I would get me a good suds. But I have leave it out of the water and I have get me a good husband. Which is much, much better—Oscar!"

Jargon Is Enemy of Engli

Language as Written at Present Is Filled With "gon," Says Professor; Gift of Precise Word Is Lost in Modern Literature.

English as she is spoken is in a very bad way and jargon is to blame, in the opinion of Prof. J. Dover Wilson, who holds the chair of education at King's college, University of London.

Good English is a rarity, he declares. Little of it, he told a headmasters' conference recently at Harrow school, is heard in the English home of today. Books are most often of the wallpaper variety—they make good decorations, but are not often opened—at least, in the London suburbs of which he was able to speak with personal knowledge. His criticism of spoken English bears also on written English.

"The language as at present written is full of jargon," Professor Wilson said. "We speak of 'transpires' when we mean 'apparent,' of 'the individual' when we mean 'this person,' and 'constitutes a leading feature' when all we mean is 'is conspicuous,' and 'emphatically' when we mean something quite different—undoubtedly.'

"Then there is the cliche, the stereotyped, moldy, outworn 'reach-me-down' phrase. Many writers do not put down thoughts; they put down words. People never come up as Englishmen used to, 'at the nick of time;' they 'appear at the psychological moment.' They never 'sleep soundly;' they 'sleep the sleep of the just,' and when they ask their friends to keep a secret it always reads, 'Tell it not in Gath.'"

In short, Englishmen have lost the gift of concise expression and of the precise word, he believes; they prefer abstractions. In spite of the inroads of the American talkies with their picturesque, short and snappy phrases, the English, as anyone can prove by reading their newspapers, really do prefer, as the professor indicated, the outworn and moldy phraseology to which they have become accustomed.

Reading of English newspapers and books reveals a continued fondness for Latin and Greek tags, such as pointed out years ago by Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, professor of English literature at Cambridge University, and also a love of quoting French phrases when English words do just as well—often with such accuracy that some French people call the result "English French."

Decline in reading the Bible was laid by Professor Wilson to lack of English.

"In the old days something was on in the home which has largely disappeared now—the daily reading of the Bible and the offering of prayers from the book of common prayer," he said. "The young ear was attuned to the rhythms of the best English prose ever written; the young vocabulary was enriched with the simplest words from the greatest things; the expanding mind was filled with countless images of the utmost grandeur.

"So unconsciously and without the aid of any pedagogue, the English people, or the God-fearing middle classes, like the Greeks of old, grew in grace, being nourished on music, the music of one of the great literatures in the world."

Of quite a different kind, he says, are the rhythms and harmonies that reach the English child of today.

The remedy, said Professor Wilson, lies not in the classics, for they are not likely to come back, but in good teaching of good English in the schools. The teaching of English must take the place of Latin, he said, and must perform the function that Latin for centuries has performed.

Unintelligent adoption of modern methods suitable to teaching Latin has hindered the progress in teaching English in the schools, said Professor Wilson. This has been especially true as regards English grammar, he said, though there is "little relation between grammatical knowledge and a command of English."

Fingernail Picture Fad Started by Englishman

Stanley A. Burchett of Kensington, England, growing tired of the brightly colored nails of the modern woman, conceived the idea of painting pictures on them instead, says the Detroit News.

Burchett is a miniature painter and in 1923 the queen accepted a picture he had painted of the cenotaph for her doll's house.

The new finger-nail fashion was really the result of an accident. Burchett is in the habit of making quick sketches on his thumbnail. One day when painting a canvas of a garden he stopped work to amuse a child who "wanted a weeny one for herself."

The painting was quickly done on a finger nail and looked so attractive that the little girl's mother immediately commissioned the artist to paint her nails.

Now there is no limit to the variety of "picture" nails. One society woman went to a race meeting with a picture of her host's horse and jockey, complete even to the racing colors, painted on her nails.

ered down, the law which was ed by Senator Frazier and Rep- resentative Lemke, both of North Dakota, was designed to give purely temporary aid to distressed owners of mortgage farm lands. The things which apparently neither of the co-authors foresaw was the effect the temporary arrangement would have as to the future. By this I mean that, for example, if a farmer wants to buy a home and had only a small amount of cash, he must borrow money from someone else. If the holder of that money were made to feel that at any time during the life of that mortgage congress could pass a law telling the lender he could not force payment of the debt few there would be who would be willing to lend their money. It is not human nature to lend money unless there is a reasonable assurance that it will be repaid.

Thus, it seems to me the Frazier-Lemke law contained elements of danger that were overlooked in the stress of depressed conditions. As laws now stand, lenders of capital will have some assurance that the security they take will continue to be security and that the individual who borrows, whether he be the owner of a farm or the owner of a business in town, either will make payments on the principal or surrender the property.

Perhaps the worst blow dealt President Roosevelt personally was the Supreme court decision which held that the Presidential power did not extend to removal of a Federal Trade Commission member except for the reasons prescribed in the law itself. It will be remembered that Mr. Roosevelt forcibly ousted the late William E. Humphrey from commission membership because, it was openly stated at the time, Mr. Humphrey was a conservative republican and he, therefore, did not see eye to eye with the President and his New Deal plans. Mr. Humphrey sued the government for the salary for his term. After his death his executors carried on the litigation which has just now been decided in their favor.

The Worst Blow

It is the principle involved here that is important. The Federal Trade Commission was set up as a quasi-judicial body, one endowed with powers to regulate against improper business practices and to determine the propriety of general business dealings where those dealings affected country-wide business or the interests of the public.

It takes no stretch of the imagination to see how Presidential interference with the commission personnel would result in changes of commission policy. One business practice might be held proper by a commission whose majority was conservative while that same practice would be considered illegal by a commission dominated by a liberal or radical membership. It becomes obvious then that if the President were permitted to disturb the personnel of the commission, especially judges, there could be no continuity of policy and business itself would hardly know from day to day when it was abiding by the law or when it was not.

Several months ago, I recall, I reported to you in these columns something in the nature of a prediction that the Supreme court would become better known to the general public before the current Administration had ended than it had been known since it rendered the famous Dred Scott decision in civil war days. It was a perfectly obvious circumstance. Sooner or later the questions of a constitutional nature involved in the New Deal procedure obviously were going to be tested in court.

AAA Comes Next

Now, I feel warranted in reporting that the highest court again will be in the public eye. The next momentous decision likely to come from the bench of the nine austere justices will be a ruling affecting the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and therefore of vital import to the American farmer. There will be other cases involving New Deal plans, of course, but their importance cannot possibly be as great as any decision affecting the AAA, because it is an integral part of the New Deal program for recovery.

There is no possibility of a ruling on any AAA questions before next October. No test cases have yet reached the Supreme court for argument but there are half a dozen wending their slow way through minor courts. Consideration by the Supreme court eventually is, of course, certain because they involve constitutional questions.

Notwithstanding the fact that a Supreme court decision on the AAA is considerably distant, it is to be noted that after the NRA was outlawed, there was considerable scurrying around among AAA officials. Fresh consideration was given to many points of law over which there is doubt. Amendments which the AAA have asked congress to enact to strengthen the original Adjustment Act were suddenly withdrawn from the senate floor by those who sponsored them. The reason given was that there were imperfections which should be corrected. The real reason for the action was fear of sudden development of litigation over the controverted points.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

PRESIDENT STIRS NATION BY PROPOSAL FOR A CHANGE IN ITS BASIC LAW.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
©, Western Newspaper Union.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has created a major issue for the campaign of 1936 and stirred up widespread debate and controversy over a question that the nation had thought was settled in its early days. Furthermore, it is likely he has started the movement for a complete re-alignment of political forces into what will be virtually two new parties. Briefly, he proposes that the Constitution be changed to take from the states and give to the federal government power over the chief social and economic questions so that the New Deal may be saved from the doom pronounced upon it by the Supreme court.

Bainbridge Colby

In the course of a two hour talk with the Washington correspondents the President sent up a trial balloon on the plan he had conceived for remodeling the government to fit his program, declaring that he favored curtailing the sovereignty of the states and giving the central government full control over agriculture, industry, commerce and all other occupations and enterprises. He said this question of amending or re-writing the Constitution must be settled by a vote of the people. In some ways, he said, the Supreme court decision was the best thing that could have happened to the country because it clarified the issue as he presented it. The issue must be met by moving one way or the other, he said, back to the 13 states or forward to the modern interpretation.

We are the only country in the world which has not solved this problem, Mr. Roosevelt said. We thought we were solving it, but now it is thrown right back in our faces. We are relegated to the "horse and buggy" interpretation of the interstate commerce clause.

That many prominent Democrats will be alienated from their support of Mr. Roosevelt by this pronouncement is certain. Already there has been launched a movement for those of the party who seek "a return to constitutional government" to unite with the Republicans who are of like mind. Its leaders are Bainbridge Colby, who was secretary of state in President Wilson's cabinet, and Chief Justice William R. Pattangall of the Massachusetts Supreme court.

Mr. Colby has written to a number of Democratic leaders of national repute proposing they meet in a southern city, preferably Richmond, "to consider some form of political action that is for our country and above party."

In a letter to a friend in Washington it was revealed that Chief Justice Pattangall had decided to resign in order to join with other Jeffersonian Democrats to bring about a coalition with Republicans and the restoration of "constitutional government" to replace the New Deal.

Neither of these gentlemen hopes to prevent the renomination of Mr. Roosevelt, but they believe he might be defeated at the polls by a coalition movement.

Of Democratic senators a number, like Smith of South Carolina, Connolly of Texas, Clark of Missouri and King of Utah, frankly expressed their opposition to the President's views. Others expressed rather mild approval. All were surprised. The conservative Republicans of course were outspoken in their disapproval of the abrogation of states' rights, and the more radical men of that party were divided. Senator Borah of Idaho voiced the opinion of many others when he said:

"There is plenty of power, absolute power, to deal with all national problems. We don't need a constitutional amendment nearly so much as we need some one to draw bills in accordance with the Constitution. You can't draw a bill on great subjects of this nature as you would draw a resolution for a town meeting. Let it be uderstood that the construction which the Supreme court has placed on the interstate commerce clause gives ample and complete and plenary power to deal with all matters of national concern."

IT WAS said in Washington that the President and his advisers had decided on their course in reforming the New Deal but would not announce it for a time. Meanwhile, according to the story, congress will be urged to pass makeshift legislation, to reinstate the code system by voluntary co-operation of business men, and to treat the labor problem by a law protecting any state from goods produced in other states under labor standards below its own. The states will be invited to make their own recovery laws and the federal government will assume the power of enforcing them.

Statesmen are trying to devise some way of centralizing the government without amending the Constitution. One suggestion, approved by a good many, is that congress deprive the Supreme court of appellate jurisdiction in cases involving wages and hours of labor, production, and various other fields in which the New Deal operates.

Mr. Roosevelt himself says that the Supreme court decision by implication cast serious doubt upon the validity of much New Deal legislation besides NRA, notably the agricultural adjustment act, the securities act and the securities and exchange act.

OFFICIALS of the United Mine Workers of America gave notice that approximately 450,000 miners in the soft coal fields would go on strike unless new wage contracts were signed before June 16. The members of the union were warned there must be no violations of the law nor any disturbances of the public peace during the strike. The entire soft coal fields of the United States is included, but not Canada.

A committee of the producers was trying to bring about a revision of the Guffey coal stabilization bill, hoping this would prove a satisfactory substitute for the NRA coal code and would avert the threatened strike.

THERE was great rejoicing in Racine, Wis., when the strike at the J. I. Case company plants was called off after lasting 80 days. The employees accepted the compromise offer of the company, whose payroll has been the largest in the city. In general the demands of the strikers were not met, though the company agreed to certain raises in piece and day wages. It promised to re-employ the men without discrimination as business conditions warrant.

ACTING with surprising suddenness, the senate passed the Copeland-Tugwell food, drug and cosmetic bill, which had been modified to meet the objections of Senators Clark, Bailey and Vandenberg. Doctor Copeland said he believed it would get through the house without difficulty. President Roosevelt favors the measure.

The bill greatly increases the scope of the 1906 food and drug act, in the definitions of adulterated or misbranded articles, and provides penalties of a year in jail or a $1,000 fine for violations.

ONE immediate result of the Supreme court's NRA decision was the dismissal of 411 cases involving NIRA, invalidated by the ruling. This action was taken by Attorney General Cummings with the approval of the President.

C. C. Davis

"All of these cases related to the enforcement of code or similar requirements, violations of fair trade practices on the part of individual business or failure to live up to minimum wage or hour standards," the official statement said. "There are, of course, a large number of additional cases in every state in which actual court action has not yet been initiated. These also, because of the Schechter case decision, must necessarily be dropped."

Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, in reply to inquiries concerning future plans as to maintenance of marketing agreements and licenses, sent out the following telegram:

"The Agricultural Adjustment administration has no thought of abandoning either its present program of marketing agreements for fruits and vegetables or its milk-marketing plans. On the contrary, we are now working with congressional leaders on amendments designed to strengthen these marketing agreements and milk plans."

LITTLE George Weyerhaeuser, nine-year-old lumber fortune heir who was kidnaped from Tacoma, is safe at home, but the "snatchers" who held him captive for a week got away with $200,000 ransom money paid by the lad's family. They fled in a fast automobile, and at this writing are still at large, though pursued closely by an army of government agents and other officers. At last reports they were in the bad lands of Oregon.

FLOODS and tornadoes wrought havoc in Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Texas and Kansas—a region that only recently was afflicted by drouth and dust storms. It was thought as many as 250 lives were lost, and great numbers of families were rendered homeless. The worst flood area was in southern Nebraska, where the Republican river was swollen into a raging torrent. Several entire villages were swept away, and utility plants and transportation lines were all washed out.

QUETTA, "garden city" of northwest India, and all the surrounding region were shattered by a series of earthquakes. The dead were estimated roughly at 30,000, but the exact number never will be known. The city and many villages were laid in ruins, and fire and flood swelled the toll of the killed and injured. The barracks of the royal air force at Quetta were demolished and more than fifty members of the garrison were killed. The city's police force was almost wiped out. While most of the victims of the disaster were natives, there were many English men and women among them.

BABE RUTH is out of baseball. The most sensational figure in the national sport during many years announced he had quit the Boston Braves, and soon thereafter Judge Emil Fuchs, president of that club, announced that Ruth had been released unconditionally. The Babe and the management of the Braves had not been in accord for some time, and the final break came when he asked for time off to meet the new French liner Normandie and was turned down.

GERMANY has no desire to deprive Great Britain of control of the high seas, but Reichsfuerher Hitler does propose the limitation of naval power so that Germany will be able to cope with other continental powers. That was the message carried to London by Joachim von Ribbentrop, elevated to the rank of ambassador extraordinary, and Admiral Schuster. Hitler also sent his proposals for an air pact, asking parity with the strongest western power—France—and mutual assistance pledges in case of attack from the air. He suggested that air bombing attacks on civilian populations be outlawed.

Although the proposal calls for limitation of air fleets, Nazi officials say that they think the result will be an agreement among the powers not to build further than they have already done and that it will not mean the scrapping of planes already built.

IN the honors list in connection with King George's birthday appear three names especially interesting to Americans. Dr. Allan Roy Defoe, the country physician who attended the births of the famous Dionne quintuplets of Callender, Ontario, was given the Order of the British Empire. John Masefield, the poet laureate, who once was a bartender in New York, was one of three made members of the highest ranking Order of Merit. Among the others who received O. B. E. honors was Edward Johnson, Canadian tenor who is now director of the Metropolitan opera of New York.

RUMORS that Vice Chancellor Ernst von Starhemberg had seized dictatorial powers in Austria or was planning such action were put at rest by his public pledge of loyalty to Chancellor Schusschnigg, given at a rally of the prince's Fascist home guard troops. However, he made it plain he still hopes for a Heimwehr government for his country.

FIGHTING desperately to save the franc and prevent inflation, Premier Flandin of France staked everything on a demand that he be given dictatorial financial powers until the end of the year, and lost. The chamber of deputies voted against him, 353 to 202, after a dramatic debate, and Flandin and his cabinet immediately resigned. M. Fernand Bouisson, who was committed to the support of the franc, formed a new government.

SAN DIEGO'S beautiful world's fair, the California Pacific exposition, was thrown open to the public practically completed. Thousands of visitors moved along the ancient El Camino Real of Balboa park on the opening day and viewed with delight the handsome buildings and interesting exhibits. The climax of the opening ceremonies came in the evening when President Roosevelt addressed the throng by radio from his study in the White House.

The exposition has been built to be a symphony of sight and sound, combining the grace of nature and the cunning of science for the pleasure and edification of an expected tourist throng of 10,000,000 people. The show stretches over 14 winding miles of exhibits and pleasure palaces housed in buildings of delicate Spanish architecture scattered through 300 acres of landscaped gardens.

KELLY PETILLO of California won the 500-mile auto race at the Indianapolis Speedway, setting a new record with an average speed of 108.24 miles an hour. Clay Weatherly of Cincinnati lost control of his car and was killed.

JAPAN, ready to take control over more Chinese territory, delivered to the government at Nanking an ultimatum charging that Dictator Chiang Kai-shek, as well as Gen. Yu Hsueh-chung, chairman of Hopei province and commander of Chinese troops in north China, were directly responsible for the long list of alleged infractions of the Tangku truce signed May 31, 1933, marking the conclusion of the Sino-Japanese hostilities over Manchuria.

Dispatches from Tokyo said Japanese officials admitted plans had been made to include Peiping and Tientsin within the demilitarized zone, which at present lies north of the two cities. Threats were mode to bomb and occupy both those cities.

Later word from Tokyo said the Chinese national government had yielded to all the Japanese demands and that an early settlement of this latest dispute between the two nations was expected.

ON THE arrival at New York of the new palatial French liner Normandie it was announced the vessel had broken at least two transatlantic records. She covered the 3,192 miles from Southampton to Ambrose lightship at a speed of 29.68 knots, the elapsed time being 107 hours 33 minutes. Her average speed on two days was 31.55 knots, the highest ever achieved by an Atlantic liner.

DR. ALAN ROY DAFOE, Judge J. A. Valin and Minister of Welfare David Croll of Ontario, guardians under the king of the Dionne quintuplets, put on a party for those famous babies on their first birthday, and there was a great crowd of visitors in the little town of Callender. But Mr. and Mrs. Dionne, resentful because the infants have been removed from their charge and home to a special hospital across the street, refused to attend the festivities. The five little girls, who are in good health and growing rapidly, were displayed briefly and were permitted to crow or cry into the radio micronhone.

Quite the neatest trick we've observed for a long time is this cleverly arranged, yet delightfully simple, home frock. Especially nice for those of us who gain and lose weight or who just naturally love a smart looking wrap-around for sheer comfort and convenience. And, of course, a boon to expectant mothers. Note how the belt slips through a slit and may be simply adjusted to fit the figure. Meanwhile, one has stepped right into it as into a coat. No petticoat needed. Nice shoulders and back, aren't they? Most attractive in solid color cotton broadcloth or printed or plaid cotton of any sort.

Pattern 9321 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48. Size 36 requires 4⅜ yards 36 inch fabric.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Address your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West 18th Street, New York, N. Y.

TRADE IN ALL OF YOUR OLD, TUMBLE-DOWN FURNITURE FOR NEW

We like to buy and sell used furniture. During the last three years we sold more used furniture than new.

Now, of course, times being better, our customers prefer new furniture, but they will buy considerable used furniture, providing it is re-built nd refinished good as new, and providing the price is right.

We have a well equipped Repair Shop, and a well trained repairman, Leonard Lau, where all used furniture is re-built and refinished.

Tell us you furniture troubles. We can either take in your Used Furniture on a trade, or we can repair it for you good as new.

You can always make a deal with

How They Ride at the San Diego Exposition

This bevy of California beauties appears to be enjoying the ride in one of the Ford V-8 tractor-powered, specially designed semi-trailer buses that are carrying the visitors to the California-Pacific International exposition now open in San Diego. The buses, operated by the San Diego Railways company, are 45 feet long, eight feet wide and eight feet high. Each is painted in bright colors and bears the name of a bird of brilliant plumage.

Going to Meet Europe's Best Lacrosse Teams

Here are the members of the All-American women's lacrosse team selected to invade Europe this summer and meet the best women's teams over there. Left to right, they are: Betty Ritchie, Westchester, N. Y.; Lucille Burnham, Boston; Gretchen Schuyler, Westchester; Elizabeth Bontron, Baltimore; Anne Pugh, Baltimore; Barbara Crowe, Boston; Virginia Allen, Philadelphia; Betty Freeman, Baltimore; Sue Cross, Philadelphia; Florence Hoff, Baltimore; Lillian Scott, Baltimore, and Libby Toulmin, Philadelphia.

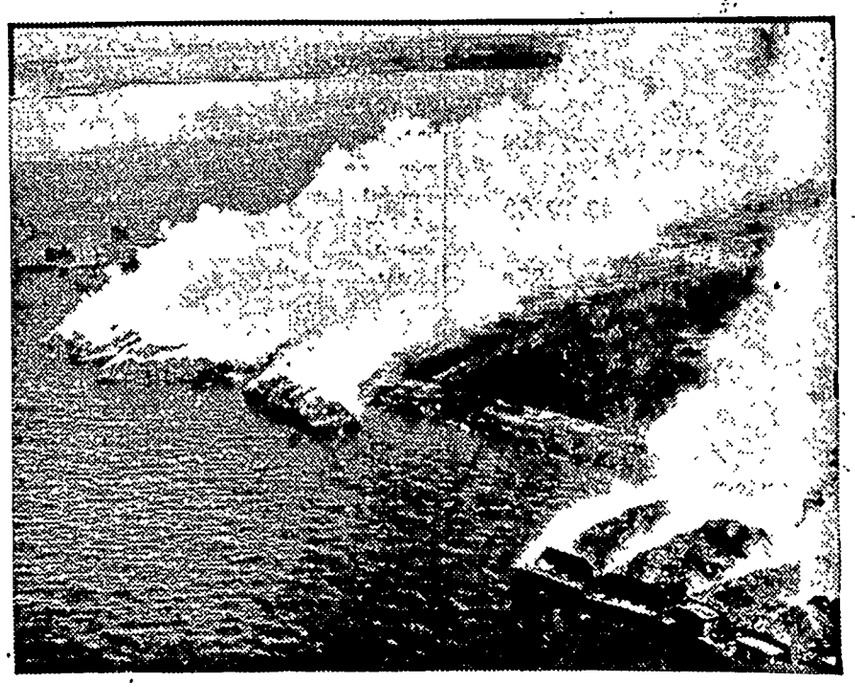
Looks Like Big Blaze; Only Garbage



Tied together and strung around Riker's island, New York harbor, are seen the 24 garbage scows that caught fire as they were about to be towed out to sea. The blaze was spectacular and made a tremendous lot of smoke, but the damage was small.

World's Champion Butter Producer

This is Femco Johanna Bess Fayne, nine-year-old registered Holstein cow of Minneapolis, which has recently completed an official test that established her as the greatest living butter producer. Her record is 1,525.5 pounds of butter in 365 days, churned from 32,727.1 pounds of milk. The animal is owned by F. E. Murphy, a publisher.

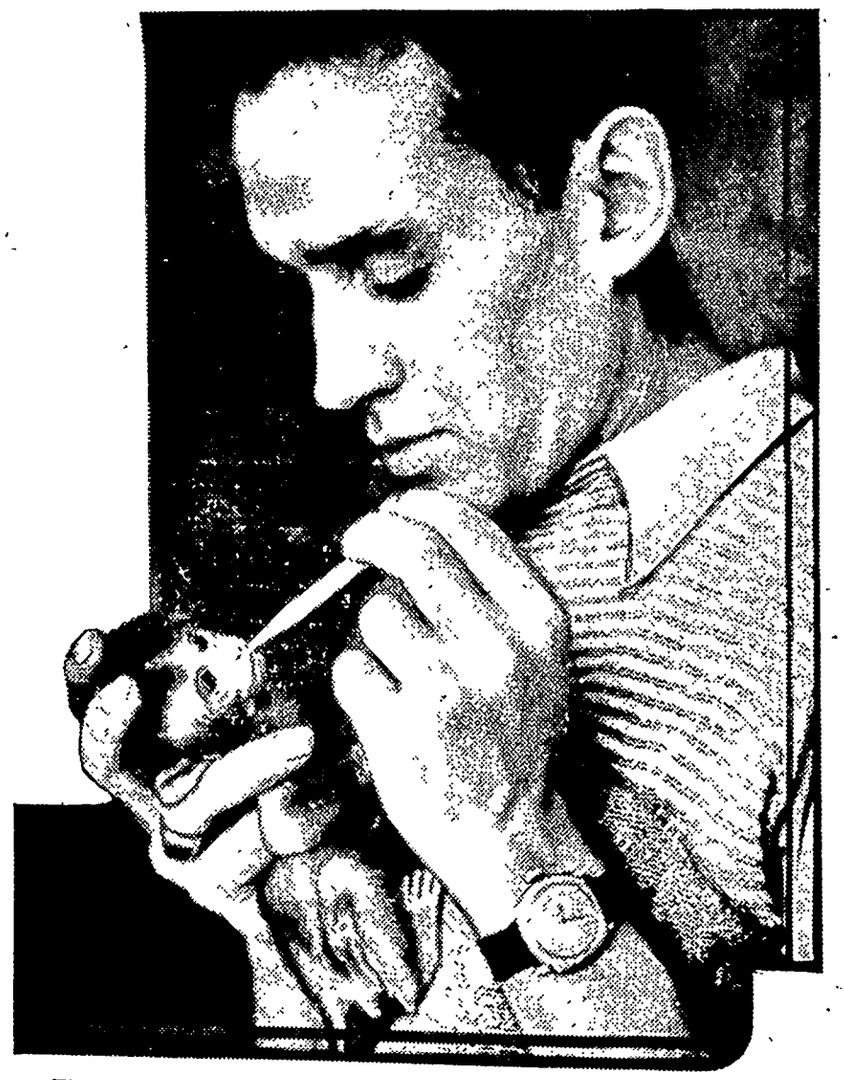
Snail raising is an important industry on the European continent; the demand is so great that the supply is inadequate.

Village Pound National Monument

The village pound at West Wycombe, believed to be the only remaining one in England, has been acquired by the nation as a national monument.

Her Life Saved by an Eye-Dropper



Three days old and with a mother not well enough to nurse her, this baby monkey at Atlantic City was saved from death by the patient care of a menagerie superintendent. A special preparation of baby food and milk was fed the infant with an eye-dropper, and in a month she will be ready to be returned to her mother.

Pioneer Days in Yakima Valley

The whole Yakima valley in Washington lived over again the frontier days in a celebration that lasted several days. Automobiles were tabooed in the city of Yakima and the people wore 10-gallon hats and other pioneer garb. This is a view of the parade.

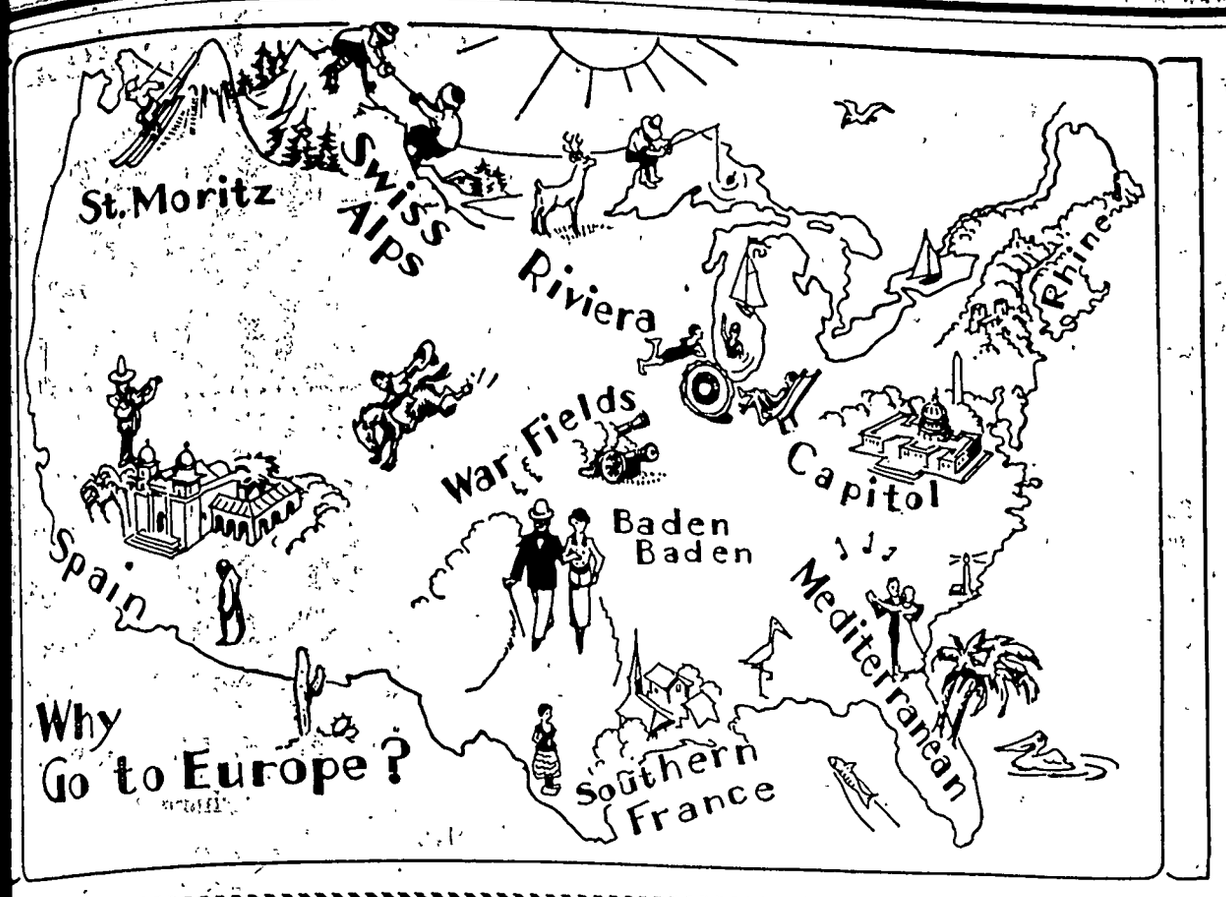
Viking Ship Relics Found

Relics of a thousand-year-old Viking ship have been found in a little bay near Kenterming, Denmark. The wood had rotted, but the iron rings and bolts indicate that the vessel was 65 feet long. The hill is near the sea, and it is believed that a Viking chief was buried in the ship, which was dragged from the sea and then covered with earth.



See America First" Now More Than Just a Slogan

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

WELL, well, well. So the Smiths are going to spend their vacation in Europe this summer! Well! Be right in swing of things, won't they!

a matter of fact, the Smiths t. For these last two or three s the swing of things has been ltely away from setting Europe goal for vacation travel. Steam- lines and travel bureaus report eady decline in tourist bookings he last few summers.

ere are several reasons for this. of them is that the average pock- ok is decidedly slimmer than it a few years back. The others count—except for one. That is act that Americans are beginning, ems, to discover that the good old A. has appeal, scenery and trav- terest in an abundance that the tioner can find in no other land earth.

ere was a popular song a few s back that got the idea over as as anything could: "You'll find castles in Spain through your low pane, back in your own back . . ."

at's almost literally true. Just ose now that you are sitting there ming about far-off Spain, famed its sunny skies, brilliant after- s, gay, starlit evenings and white rs glistening under merry red s not so far off as you might im- e. Like a metropolis of Old Spain is the southern California city e millions will probably visit on vacations this summer. It is Diego, home of America's 1935 ex- ion. Here, on the bay discovered Cabrillo in 1542 is a setting that resembles the explorer's native ; here are the azure skies, the e buildings and the red roofs. It pain of the renaissance, yet the el comforts are those of modern ed States.

uch of southern California is like The bountiful country, spotted sely with orange groves and ng vineyards, guarded by snow- ed mountain peaks, is sprinkled old Spanish missions, lovely in itecture and rich in tradition, built 300 years or more ago. climate concedes nothing to the iterranean summer. Yet eleven or more of two-weeks' vacation be spent in this happy land, no ter where you live in America.

Offers Many Attractions.

lifornia, like any other vacation of the United States, offers the or attractions that are distinctly erican, in addition to the glamour thrill of European atmosphere. e is Hollywood, with its endless ders of the most fascinating of all stries, and the ever-present pos- ity that you may run into Clark e or Joan Crawford face to face. e is San Francisco with its world- ed Golden Gate; there are nation- parks unsurpassed in beauty and deur the world over, and count- points of interest interspersed.

siting California, you may pass ugh other glories of the West—Ari- Colorado, New Mexico. Where Spain will you find a Painted ert, a Garden of the Gods, a Yose- falls?

let's say it was England you thinking about. The charm of English countryside you will find any parts of the New England es. On a Vermont hillside you stop for lunch or for a day or of rest and recreation in a quaint English inn. In Boston, Maine, Hampshire and Connecticut you t well imagine you were on the sh Isles. There is a section of Maine hills which has been called Scotland of America; it is said esemble the home of the kilt and bagpipe more than any other place earth. Leaving New England, you return home through the Irish in southern Michigan, whose s and lakes are reminiscent of "ould sod."

u'll find Germany in several s on the United States map. Take oonlight trip down the Hudson some evening. All you need is the deck orchestra playing "Zwei Hertzen im Drei Vertel Tacht" and it will be as easy as apple strudel to image you are floating down the Rhine, especially as you pass the "castles" of the United States military academy at West Point. If you're looking less for romance and more for recuperation, such as you might find in the baths at Baden-Baden, why there are Hot Springs in Arkansas, French Lick in Indiana, Waukesha in Wisconsin and numerous other spas that rank with Europe's finest; you can find the romance there, too, if you want it.

Or perhaps it's the weather you're worrying about. Sweltering in a stuffy office or shop, or toiling in the fields with the torrid summer sun beating down, more than often gives inspiration to fanciful revels in fields of snow, skiing down a mountain side or watching your breath dart forth in little puffs of steam as you sigh relief in getting away from the heat of July and August. Where? At St. Moritz, famed cooling-off place of the Swiss Alps?

Forget the Alps.

Forget about the Swiss Alps. The Pacific Northwest is calling you. Rainier and Glacier National parks, Mount Baker and other snow-capped peaks beckon with promise of cool, clear weather and scenery not even surpassed in the Alps. Paradise valley in Rainier National park is one of the world's greatest winter sport centers, and the real winter season lasts well through June. Even after that you will find plenty of snow in the vicinity, for the giant glacier areas haven't yet wilted under the summer sun.

Don't worry about missing the sights of the Riviera. When you see them you will be likely to deprecate them anyway, for it is almost bound to strike you that you've got something like this back home, only better. That's one objection Europeans generally find to American visitors. They just can't help bragging about something bigger and better back home. What the average European doesn't realize is that it's the truth.

Summer along Lake Michigan brings the vacationer the climate of the Riviera. (Have you ever stopped to realize that Lake Michigan is just as far south as Riviera?) The long stretches of white beach, wide expanses of blue sky and water, tree-crowned bluffs along the shore line have a charm and beauty that is enjoyed by hordes year after year. Swimming, fishing, summer sports and opportunity for relaxation are ever-present; so are the amusement gaieties of the resort world, such as dancing and cabaret entertainment.

Educational and historical relics, monuments and atmosphere are part of the magnet that used to draw American tourists to Europe. It is true that Europe's attractions are distinctly its own in this respect. By the same token it is also true that America has tradition and historical education possibilities that are certainly individual. The American tourist has too often overlooked the lore of old-time battlefields and spots consecrated by the blood of his ancestors right here at home.

Historical Trips.

The South is replete with such attractions of a more serious nature. So is New England and so are many parts of the Middle West. There are many tour arrangements that plan complete historical trips for the vacationer, sandwiching in enough sport and entertainment to afford him sufficient divertissement from his everyday labors and keep him from going stale.

Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, Virginia, Mississippi and other southern states have preserved many of the most historic buildings and battlefields of the Civil war. No American's education is complete if he has not scanned the countryside from the crest of Lookout mountain, spent a few moments in reverie at the sites of the battles of Chattanooga, Chickamauga and the Shenandoah. Andrew Jackson's home, the scene of Sherman's march to the sea and the sites of some of the great Confederate victories should not be overlooked. Northerners will be interested in the sight of cotton growing and fascinated by the charm of southern hospitality, just as southerners are interested in the vast wheat fields, the great industries and the summer recreational possibilities of the North.

No trip through the South should overlook the most beautiful capital city in the world. Washington, D. C., if it is not that already, is certainly destined to become that. It is considered the most important capital in the world, and it is surely the busiest at the present time. It offers interesting side trips to the home of George Washington, that of Thomas Jefferson and others who were the foundation rocks of our nation.

For the seeker after the night life of Paris and Vienna, America has two cities whose bright white lights are famed to the ends of the earth for the gaiety and amusement they represent. The cabaret and show worlds of New York and Chicago can give you everything that a European metropolis can. Besides, to occupy your time when the sun is still in the sky you will find matchless beaches, race tracks, major league baseball parks, endless boulevard drives and, especially in Chicago, park areas that are the envy of all other cities. Broadway and Michigan avenue are more than a match for Montmartre and the Rue de Paris.

These things that we have been talking about are for the larger part vacation attractions in America that are comparable with those in Europe. But the United States has more and more to which Europe can never pretend.

Most important of these are the national parks, which were host to nearly 4,000,000 persons last year and will probably be visited by an even greater number during the tourist season of 1935.

America has its own "Mediterranean" coast, you know. The palms and beaches along the Gulf of Mexico are visited by throngs in the summer as well as in the winter. Florida's climate and vacation attractions might be compared to those of southern Italy. New Orleans is a piece of Old France, even to the dress and habits of many of its people.

Great Scenic Parks.

Outstanding of all these national parks is the Grand canyon of the Colorado river. There is nothing like it anywhere else on this earth, at least. This fearful panorama of nature at its wildest, most awesome and at the same time most beautiful is a sight to remember for the rest of your life.

Some of the other national parks have sights to see that are nearly as grand, but in a different way. There is Sequoia, in California, with the oldest living things in the world, the giant trees, whole forests of them, which tower above as high as the skyscrapers of our metropolises. Yellowstone is the oldest of our national parks and one of the most popular, with its Old Faithful Geyser and its other natural wonders. The Yosemite with the greatest waterfall in the world draws its share of the summer thousands.

Other national parks, some of which may be included in your summer tour, are Lafayette, in Maine; Glacier, in Montana; Rocky mountain, in Colorado; Rainier, in Washington; Crater lake, in Oregon; Lassen volcano, in California; General Grant, in the glorious Sierra Nevada range of California; Mesa Verde, in Colorado; Platt and Hot Springs, in Arkansas; Sully's hill, in North Dakota, and Wind Cave, in South Dakota.

Our national parks contain good hotels, where fine meals are served and where prices are adjustable to almost any pocketbook. They get us out of doors in summer, when we need a relief from the year's work, and let us follow their delightful trails through gigantic laboratories of nature. They give us a true picture of what our forebears had to conquer when they first explored this land and built upon it the nation which we like to think is a good deal better in which to live than any other on earth.

There is little that the European vacation can offer us that we cannot duplicate here in our own country. And the difference in expense, it is needless to say, is tremendous. Railroads, especially the western railroads, as well as other travel media, have prepared tour programs this year which most of us can afford, and have reduced regular rates for the summer months. It's easier than ever this year to "see America first."

Scientists Claim Brain and Brawn Go Together

The theory that brains and brawn go together was put forth recently by a group of scientists who had assembled to discuss the world's ills and how to cure them. A large chest expansion is a symbol of mental breadth, it was said, while a narrow chest denotes compressed intelligence. Children who are the best students, surveys have shown, are those with the biggest chests. Statistics were called in to show that more successful persons, as a rule, have more generous height and girth measurements than their less fortunate neighbors. Thus the idea of brain power being associated with brawn has been elevated somewhat from the field of physical culture arguments.

Among the statistics cited in support of the theory that larger dimensions are indicative of business success were those showing sales managers, on the average, to be twenty-five pounds heavier and one inch taller than salesmen. Railroad presidents appear to be thirty-one pounds heavier and one and one-half inches taller than station agents. The relative avoirdupois of generals and private soldiers was not given.

Regardless of the scientific explanations of these phenomena, the ordinary man—possibly the station agent—has some sensible views on the subject. In the first place, he readily will grant, good health is the best stimulant for a smoothly working brain. There are exceptions, of course, as in the case of the genius who has cultivated his brain cells to compensate for physical deficiencies, but in the main the better a person feels physically the more fit he feels for head work.

PROTECT YOUR LIFE AND THE LIVES OF OTHERS!

THERE are three questions you should ask yourself about the tires you buy:

1—"Will the non-skid tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

Answer No. 1—Harvey S. Firestone early realized the value of tire traction and safety and was the first to design an All Rubber Non-Skid Tire. Through the years Firestone has led the way in the design and development of tires with most effective non-skid treads.

Firestone does not depend solely on traction and non-skid tests made by its own engineers — it employs a leading University to make impartial tests for non-skid efficiency of its tires, and their most recent report shows that Firestone High Speed Tires stop the car 15% quicker than the best of all popular makes of tires.

Answer No. 2—Blowout protection must be built into a tire. Friction and heat within the tire is the greatest cause of blowouts. Firestone protects its tires from friction and heat by a patented process which soaks every cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber. This is an additional process known as Gum-Dipping, by which every 100 pounds of cotton cords absorb eight pounds of rubber. This extra process costs more and is not used in any other make of tire.

Leading race drivers investigate the inbuilt qualities of the tires they use, because their very lives depend upon their tires, and they always select Firestone Tires for their daring speed runs. In fact, Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the gruelling Indianapolis 500-mile race for fifteen consecutive years, and they were on the 5000-pound car that Ab Jenkins drove 3,000 miles in 23½ hours on the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, without tire trouble of any kind. These amazing performance records are proof of the greatest blowout protection ever known.

Answer No. 3—Thousands of car owners reporting mileage records of 40,000 to 75,000 miles, is proof of the long mileage and greater economy by equipping with Firestone High Speed Tires. Let these unequaled performance records be your buying guide.

Go to the Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Firestone Tire Dealer and let him equip your car with Firestone Tires, the safest and most economical tires built.

WHOSE WORD

WILL YOU TAKE FOR BLOWOUT PROTECTION?

LOW wheels, larger tires, and the high speeds of today make blowout protection in your tires vital to your safety as never before. Are you accepting exaggerated and unsupported advertising and sales claims—or are you accepting the judgment of men who risk their lives on their tires and know from experience the tire that gives them the greatest blowout protection?

Thirty-three race drivers and their mechanics lined up for the dangerous, gruelling grind of the 500-Mile Race at the Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. Firestone Tires were purchased and used on every one of the thirty-three cars. Not one of the drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Gum-Dipping is one of the outstanding reasons why Firestone Tires give such amazing performance. By this process every cotton cord is soaked and every strand is insulated with pure liquid rubber, preventing internal friction and heat, the main cause of blowouts. Gum-Dipping is a patented extra process not used in any other make of tire.

Protect your life and the lives of others by equipping your car with Firestone Gum-Dipped High Speed Tires—the safest tires built.

It will be worth your time to read these three questions and their answers:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

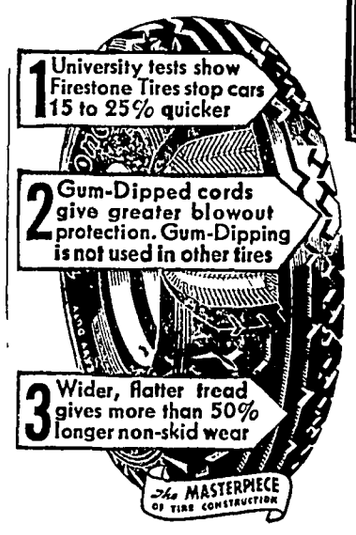
ANSWER—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of other popular makes of tires.

QUESTION 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

ANSWER—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Thousands of car owners report unequaled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.



1 University tests show Firestone Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker
2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires
3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear

LEMME YOUNG MAN NAMED N STATE HIGHWAY PATROL

lair West Left On Saturday For onth's Training At Camp Dodge

Mrs. Alex Miller, secretary of ate last week notified 88 appli- nts for position on the new state ighway patrol they have been mporarily approved.

The tentative appointees were mmoned to the patrol training mp at Dodge for a 30 day period hich started Saturday.

Fifty highway patrolmen are to picked after the 30 day training eriod. A few additional temporary ppointments will be made and will ring the list to approximately 100.

Among the approved applicants amed by Mrs Miller for the 30 day raining camp was Joseph C. West f Klemme. "Clair," as we know im better here was one of the 3500 owa men who applied for the posi- ons. Out of this number 300 were alled in for personal interviews, nd of the 300 called, 88 were no- ified to appear for training. Clair urvived all of these tests and is ow in training.

Other young men near Klemme ho received notice to start training ere: Harold E. Fisher, Clarion; . N. Connelly, Mason City; Louis . Tallman, Mason City and George . Weeks, Hampton.

FIRE DESTROYS BUILDINGS ON KERAUS FARM BY HAYFIELD

Fire of unknown origin caused damage estimated at $2,900 at the Keraus farm two miles east of Hayfield last week Tuesday. A barn and double corn crib were destroyed. The farm is tenanted by Geo. Schneider. C. F. Keraus of Klemme was the former owner of the farm and the Keraus family resided there for a number of years.

P. H. M.'S MET AT WEAVER HOME MONDAY EVE

The Progressive Home Maker's met at the home of Bernice Weaver Monday evening, June 17th.

The meeting was called to order by the Vice-president Norma Wille. Ten members answered roll call and two visitors were present.

Each member was requested to hang one piece of clothing and then was shown the proper way to hang it. Music was studied for Rally Day and there were also other plans made.

Lunch was served by the hostess.

KILL APPLE WORMS NOW WITH SECOND COVER APPLICATION

Because codling moth worms will be entering fruit in this county in a few days, apple orchards should receive the second cover spray at once, says County Agent S. J. Oberhauser. During the hot weather of the past week or so, the pests have been developing very rapidly and worms will be entering the fruit in numbers by June 24 in northern Iowa.

All trees on which there is fruit should be sprayed, using 1¼ pounds of lead arenate to 50 gallons of either of the following fungicides: 1¼ pounds of dry lime sulphur or 1½ quarts of the liquid form, plus 5 pounds of hydrated lime. This is commonly called the Ohio formula. A 2-3-50 bordeaux mixture will be used by many commercial growers. It consists of 2 pound of Blue Vitrol or Bluestone, and 3 pounds of hydrated lime to the 50 gallons.

Jack Wellemeyer Manager Of Large Springfield Store

When Jack Wellemeyer returned to Springfield, Mo., after a few days visit in Klemme the fore part of the month, he was given the full management of the Learner Vogue Store at Springfield. Mr. Wellemeyer had been manager temporarily for some time due to the illness of the manager. About thirty people are employed at the Springfield store.

PRE-NUPTIAL SHOWER HELD FOR MISS KLUCKHOHN

Miss Lola Hammitt and Miss Gladys Bridges sponsored a pre-nuptial shower at the Hammitt home Thursday evening in honor of Miss Thelma Kluckhohn who will soon become the bride of Carold Larson, of Lake Mills.

The evening was spent in playing a number of games after which the bride-to-be was presented with a number of gifts. In order for her to find the gifts she was directed to search small clothing stretched on a line and the key to the gift was contained in verse.

About twenty-five close friends and a few relatives of Miss Kluckhohn were present. At a late hour lunch was served which consisted of strawberry short cake, angel food cake and coffee.

KOERNER RELATIVES HELD A RE-UNION AT CLEAR LAKE

Sunday afternoon the Herman Kuppinger cottage at Clear Lake was the meeting place of the Koerner relatives. The families began to gather around noon with well filled baskets. A picnic lunch was held upon the lawn and was greatly enjoyed by all. The afternoon was spent visiting and talking over old times.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Herman Kuppinger and Geneva, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kuppinger and Mr. and Mrs. Meyer, all of Mason City; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Veitmeyer and Ronald and Emil Betten of Charles City; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Koerner and family and Nora Koerner of St. Charles; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kollman and Melvin, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Koerner f Rockford; Miss Elsie Kollman of Cincinnati, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stille and Marie; Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Lau and Norman; Mr. and Mrs. Jim McHugh, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gibbs and family; Mrs. C. A. Arnold and Miss Minnie Lenz; Mr. and Mrs A. G. Koerner and Nova; Mr. Glen Bridges; Mrs. Lee Ridder and family and W. F. Stille, all of Klemme.

ECONOMISTS BELIEVE HOG PRODUCTION INCREASING

Hogs, as far as production is concerned, have turned the corner and their numbers are due to increase instead of decrease from now on, predicts the June issue of Agricultural Economic Facts, Iowa State College Extension Service circular.

Though the corn-hog ratio is still narrower than average, prospects are so bright for feeding hogs next fall that already sows and gilts are being held off the market for breeding purposes. An examination of receipts at the livestock markets shows that the proportion of female stock in the runs has decreased considerably.

Because of this increase in breeding, the fall pig crop will probably be larger than last year, when the number of pigs farrowed was extremely small. A scarcity of breeding stock, however, still will tend to keep next fall's crop below normal.

With this situation in view, hog marketings will not increase before the summer of 1936 and probably not much then. Prices, therefore can be expected to stay relatively high through the remainder of 1935 and most of 1936.

The immediate price outlook offers little encouragement for any rise above the present level in view of the weak demand for pork and the low buying power of consumers. The recent jump in hog prices was made in the face of the seasonal decline which usually takes place during April and May. This was largely the result of the unusual shortage of pork. It is doubtful if the usual mid or late summer rise in prices will occur this year unless consumer buying power increases.

STATE SLOW IN GETTING OUT DRIVERS LICENSE BLANKS

Sheriff Says, "Don't Worry If You Don't Get Yours Before July 1st"

For some reason or other the secretary of state is slow in getting the auto driver license application blanks out. Sheriff E. P. Hanson says that only a small number have been received in the county so far. As soon as a supply arrives he will send a bunch to Klemme to be distributed at the Times Office, the First National Bank, garages and filling stations.

Peck say he has had innumerable calls from all over the county asking about the applications, from people who want to get their license before July 1st. However, Sheriff Hanson informs us that no one need feel alarmed if they cannot procure the license before that date. As long as the state officials have failed to furnish each county with an adequate supply it is not the fault of the car driver if he has not a new license. However, the old license should be carried until you get a new one.

AMONG OUR SUBSCRIBERS

When Mrs. John Bock renewed the subscription to The Times the other day, she also subscribed for the paper to have it sent every week to Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Burr at Louisville, Kentucky. Before her marriage Mrs. Burr was Miss Stella Bock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bock who reside on a nice farm east of Klemme. We are sure Mrs. Burr will enjoy getting the news from home every week—just like getting a big, fat letter!

John Neuberger has been a subscriber to the Times for many, many years. The other day he stopped us on the street and handed over the required amount to keep the Times coming for another year. John's farm is east of Klemme, but he gets his mail on the Ventura route.

We can always depend on Charlie Fritzel keeping his Times well paid in advance. The other day Charlie handed us a check to keep the weekly sheet coming to his mail box on route one. Charlie is one of the best farmers in the community, but we sort of suspicion that we can proudly call him a resident of Klemme in the not so far distant future. He has two fine resident properties in Klemme and so we just naturally presume Mr. and Mrs. Fritzel will some day reside in town. That ought to give Charlie more time to devote to his favorite pastime—fishing.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McKee have now resided in Klemme a few years. Mr. McKee's Times will be coming his way for sveral months to come as he plunked down the cash on our desk the other day. Mr. McKee has been very busy the past few days tending to his garden, which we number as one of the best in town. Gardens are doing fine these days since the weather has warmed up. Frequent showers have made Klemme look like the garden spot of the world.

Ice Cream Social Saturday Evening

The M. E. Ladies Aid and church members will serve the public at an ice cream social Saturday evening of this week on the vacant lot next to Wellemeyer's. Come and enjoy the home made ice cream and a nice big piece of cake, all for fifteen cents.

The ladies will be prepared to start serving at five, so if you want a quart to take home for the supper meal—come and get it. The ice cream will be a dime and cake five cents. All goes into the church budget, which is for a good cause, so come and get yourself a treat. 1tc

ELL TOWN BIBLE SCHOOL CLOSES FRIDAY

The Bible Schools of the Peace and Zion Reformed churches will come to a close June 21. A program willl be given, beginning at ten o'clock in the church four miles south of Garner, followed by a picnic dinner in the church park. All members and friends of the Peace and Zion Reformed Reformed churches of Garner and of the Immanuel Reformed church of Klemme are heartily invited to come and enjoy the day with us. There will be a collection to defray the expenses of the Bible School.

This brings to a close another successful period of Bible study. The daily attendance was very good as was the interest shown by the parents. We wish to express our thanks to the teachers who assisted us, and so willingly contributed of their time to the interest of the school. They are in Zion: Mrs. Edith Elling and Mrs. Marie Niemeyer. In Peace: Miss Margaret Haberkamp and Miss Lola Goll.

STATE FAIR PREMIUMS TOTAL $98,000 THIS YEAR

Des Moines, Ia., June 5, Special:

An outlook for an Iowa State Fair this summer of old-time proportions —in crowds, in farm and livestock entries, and in commercial exhibits —was reported here this week as officials began the summer's preparations for "America's largest agricultural and livestock exposition."

The better feeling throughout the state is reflected in a better than 50 percent increase in early reservations of commercial exhibit space for the State Fair.

Greatly improved farm conditions are also reflected in entries for the agricultural show for this year's fair. All available space for county agricultural exhibits, and for individual farm exhibits, has already been allotted, although the opening date of the exhibition is still two and a half months away. The 4-H club show this summer will also be the largest in the history of the fair —the number of head of 4-H livestock on feed throughout the state in preparation for the 1935 show has broken all previous records.

Anticipating increased entries in all departments, fair officials have added $22,000 to this year's premiums, compared with the offerings of last year, bringing the grand total of cash prizes to more than $98,000.

"Ia loks like a real, old-time fair —the kind that has made people always think of Iowa whenever the word 'State Fair' was mentioned," Secretary A. R. Corey said today.

Shower For Miss Norma Stromer Tuesday Afternoon

Bible School and Sunday School teachers of the Reformed church had a miscellaneous shower on Norma Stromer Tuesday afternoon. The afternoon was spent in visiting and playing games. Delicious lunch was served. Miss Norma received many nice gifts.

Shower For Mrs. Erwin Priebe

Friday afternoon many relative and friends were entertained at the home of Mrs. Wm. Stille, assisted by Mrs. J. E. Stille, at a shower given in honor of their neice, Mrs. Erwin Priebe, nee Mildred Stille. Many games were played and much merriment was enjoyed in the presentation of the gifts for the bride. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses.

CREAM WILL BE BOUGHT BY GRADE AFTER JULY 5TH

Buyer Must Vary Price At Least 1 Cent Per Pound Butterfat

Beginning July 5, all cream that is bought by Iowa creameries, stations and other buyers will be graded according to the specifications of the cream grading law which will go into effect on the above data, and the price must be varied at least 1 cent per pound of butterfat for the different grades.

Cream will be graded according to the following specifications:

Sweet Cream—clean cream containing a minimum of foreign materials and not more than two-tenth of one percent lactic acid.

First Grade Cream—clean cream containing not more than six-tenths of one percent lactic acid.

Second Grade Cream—cream that has objectionable flavors and odors and is too sour or too old to be classed as first grade.

Unlawful cream— that contains dirt, filth, oil and other foreign materials. It is unfit for human consumption and is stale, cheesy, rancid or actively foaming.

All cream buyers must comply with the requirements of this law, and they are now attending short courses over the state conducted by the State Department of Agriculture and the Dairy Extension Service of Iowa State College. Examinations will be given, and licenses issued to those who pass. Only licensed buyers will be permitted to buy cream.

HONORED MRS. WM. BELL AT BIRTHDAY PARTY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bell was the scene of a family reunion in honor of Mrs. Bell's 61st birthday, June 12. A delicious dinner as served and after the dinner the members decided to make the reunion an annual affair on the 1st Sunday after the 12th of June. Russell Bell was elected president and Mrs. W. O. Lassahn, secretary. Other committees were also appointed. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bell and family; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Bell; Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Lassahn; Charlie Hitt and Jeff and Kenneth Bell.

FARM FAMILIES TO VISIT IOWA STATE COLLEGE JUNE 25TH

Hancock County farmers along with others from this section of the state have been invited to attend a field day at Iowa State College on Tuesday, June 25, according to Grant Chapman, extension specialist and director of farm tours at the college.

Four field days are being held at the college this year and all counties in Northeast Iowa are invited to attend on June 25. Farmers and their families unable to attend on this day are welcome to come on any of the other days, June 25, 26, 27 and 28, according to Mr. Chapman. Farmers from each district however, are urged to attend on the date designated if possible because subjects of interest to their particular farming areas will be discussed.

As guests of the college the visitors will have an opportunity to see the college at work and view the campus and buildings. They will see some of the experiments in progress and hear the latest results of the work.

GREIMANN INFANT PASSED AWAY MONDAY

Glen Dean Greimann was born early Monday morning, June 17th, and passed away the same day. He was the first-born son of Floyd and Margurite Greiman who reside in north Liberty township.

Rev. Schmidt and Rev. Hoon officiated at a private burial service and the child now rests in the Ell township Reformed Church cemetery.

GREIMANN CLAN OBSERVED ANNUAL RE-UNION JULY 16

The Greiman clan held their annual reunion Sunday, July 16 at the home of W. H. Greimann. About 280 attended. Relatives from Garnavillo, Ia.; Sheffield, Ia.; Clarksville Ia.; Mason City, Ia.; Blue Earth, Minn.; Remsen, Ia.; and Intake, Montana were present besides the Greimann clan from Hancock Co.

A big picnic dinner was enjoyed at the noon hour. After dinner a good program was held. Opened by W. H. Greimann who gave the following history of the Greimann grandparents, beginning with his grandfather:

"Frederick William Greimann was born on December 20, 1809 at Iverheim, Westphalia, Germany, of rural parents.

"Anna Maria Elsabine Holdbruge was born February 6, 1824 at Emiglob, Westphalia, Germany, also of rural parents. They both received their religious education in the Even Luthrn church, both attending the same school. They were married in 1848. They lived in Germany about 6 years after they were married.

"They came to America in 1854, leaving Germany in August, by sail boat. While in the Gulf of Mexico the boat struck on a rock or sandbar and was wrecked. Before sinking, a nearby boat took them aboard and all were saved. After arriving at New Orleans they came up the Mississippi river by steam boat landing at Guttenberg, Iowa, sometime in November. The trip from Germany to Iowa taking them nearly three and a half months.

"I have an imaginary picture of how our grandparents looked. Grand father was a rather large, roughly built man, quiet and of a Christian nature. Grandmother was short and heavy and talkative. They had three small children: Mary, age 5; William, age 2; and Fred, age 9 month.

"The first winter in America Grandfather split rails for the Yankees and when the weather was bad he made baskets from willow and hickory, receiving potatoes as payment. He also made wooden shoes. The first year he worked for wages. The second year he rented a farm shares; the landlord furnishing the oxen and a few odds of machinery This he did for four years. He then bought 40 or 60 acres to live on and also rented 80 acres. They cleared the land and built a small log house on their small acreage. Gradually buying more land from time to time he finally had 500 acres.

"Grandfather was a hardworking man and strong and if he undertook to fell a tree or hew a log it did not take him long to do it. They tell me he never went in debt for anything. He never bought anything unless he had the money to pay for the same.

"Our grandparents were God fearing people and their hope and trust was in God. One of the family told me that Grandfather was the priest of his household. Reading Bible and worshiping with his family daily. They reared a family of nine children, 5 boys and 4 girls sending them to religious school first public school being secondary.

"The children in order are Mary (Mrs. Oelkers-, William, Fred. Mary (Mrs. Harnack), Henry Anna (Mrs. Katter), John, Katherine (Mrs. Obermuller) and Herman.

"John and Herman have passed away. Grandfather died January 15 1898 at the age of 89 years. Grandmother passed away November 10, 1906 at the age of 82 years. They are buried at Garnavillo, Ia."

A program in charge of Mrs. L. Weaver consisted of a number from each family which was much enjoyed, after which every one had a social time.

Next years reunion will be held at Blue Earth, Minn.

Reception Dance At Garner Monday For Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Priebe

Monday evening many friends and relatives were entertained at the Garner Opera House to a wedding dance and reception held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Priebe. Music was furnished by Kellys orchestra and the evening was very much enjoyed in spite of the inclemency of the weather.

REPUBLICANS OF MIDWEST DENOUNCE ROOSEVELT IN "GRASS ROOTS" MEET.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
©, Western Newspaper Union.

THOUSANDS of Republicans from ten states of the Middle West gathered in Springfield, Ill., for the "grass roots" conference and, in the shadow of the tomb of Abraham Lincoln, who saved the Union, solemnly determined to save the "indestructible states" from what they consider an assault on their constitutional rights. The gathering was considered so important that it attracted political observers from all over the country. Most of the delegates were young men eager for the battle, but with them were many white-haired leaders of former frays whose enthusiasm and patriotism have survived the years.

Frank O. Lowden

After a pilgrimage to the New Salem State park where the scenes of Lincoln's youth have been reconstructed, the delegates assembled in the fair grounds Coliseum and were welcomed by George W. Bunn of Springfield, general chairman of the local committee. Harrison E. Spangler of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was installed as temporary chairman and made a speech in which President Roosevelt was pilloried for all manner of political and governmental sins, from killing six million pigs and breaking campaign pledges to violating the Constitution and attempting to set up a dictatorship. Mr. Spangler then introduced the orator of the day, Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and former aspirant for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Mr. Lowden, breaking a political silence of seven years, vigorously denounced President Roosevelt's proposal to change the Constitution to fit the New Deal and argued at length for maintenance of the bill of rights unimpaired. Here are a few of his trenchant sentences:

"The essentials of our form of government are being challenged in high places."

"No crisis so grave as the present has confronted the people since the Civil war."

"If an amendment can be used to nullify a decision of the Supreme court upon a fundamental matter in one case, why can it not be employed in another?"

"Any attempt to rob America of its liberties would revive the spirit of '70."

"There is no room on American soil for the dictatorship of either the Fascist or the proletariat type of government."

"The preservation of the Constitution; this is the supreme issue of the hour."

At the Lincoln tomb later that day there were impressive ceremonies and a eulogy of Lincoln by Former Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde of Missouri. Then in the evening two more notable addresses, by Mrs. George B. Simmons of Marshall, Mo., and John D. M. Hamilton of Topeka, national committeeman and permanent chairman of the convention.

The second day of the conference was devoted to speeches by Edward A. Hayes of Decatur, Ill., former national commander of the American Legion, and R. G. Simmons of Lincoln, Neb., and the consideration and adoption of a ringing set of resolutions.

ALMOST solidly the Democratic majority in the house voted for passage of the joint resolution extending the life of NRA in skeleton form until April 1, 1936. A few of them stood with the Republicans, but their fellows overrode all opposition with wild whoops and the vote stood 201 to 121. The balloting was preceded by a lot of noisy oratory which meant nothing.

In the senate the resolution was amended to prohibit voluntary trade agreements that offend against the anti-trust laws.

Immediately after the house had acted, it was announced at the White House that Donald Richberg would retire as chairman of the practically dead NRA on June 16, and that President Roosevelt had accepted his resignation "with great reluctance."

LONG ago the President said he was formulating a special message to congress on relief of the railways and federal regulation of all forms of transportation. This he finally sent in, asking for the following legislation at this session:

1. Amendment of the bankruptcy act of 1933 to facilitate financial reorganization of railways.
2. Regulation of air transport by the interstate commerce commission.
3. Regulation of highway motor carriers, provided for in a bill passed by the senate.
4. Regulation of intercoastal and coastwise trade and some inland water carriers.
5. Extension for one year of the office of federal co-ordinator of transportation and of the emergency railroad transportation act of 1933.

At the same time Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, recommended to the railroads drastic changes in rate structures, schedules and types of equipment.

The changes, which Eastman termed "suggestions," were contained in a report which contains the findings of a two-year survey and which envisions a co-ordinated transportation system including all forms of transport—rail, water, motor truck, and pipe line.

Of outstanding interest was the suggestion for development of railway cargo operations and rates making possible profitable handling of trainloads of basic commodities without intermediate yardings and at greatly reduced rates.

CONGRESS, it now appears, will be in session until September, for the President handed to the leaders a "must" program of legislation that will keep the law makers busy for a long time. Here is the list:

1. Social security bill.
2. Omnibus banking bill.
3. Holding company bill.
4. Wagner labor relations bill, and Guffey coal regulations bill.
5. Tennessee valley bill.
6. Bankhead cotton act extension.
7. AAA amendments.
8. Tax extension bill.
9. Temporary NRA extension.
10. NRA government contract requirements.
11. Federal alcohol control legislation.
12. Federal oil control legislation.
13. Central statistical board set up.
14. Electrical farm and home autority set up.

The holding company measure has been resisted firmly in committee by two Democrats, Pettingill of Indiana and Huddleston of Alabama. In a senate debate it was vigorously attacked by Dieterich of Illinois, Democrat, and Hastings of Delaware, Republican, as an unconstitutional scheme to destroy the government's competitors in the power business. Mr. Dieterich said it was his honest conviction that the measure would destroy all private ownership of public utilities in the country, together with the millions upon millions of dollars invested in them by private citizens.

Thomas N. McCarter

This measure was naturally the chief topic of discussion at the annual convention of the Edison Electric Institute at Atlantic City. President Thomas N. McCarter told the assemblage that the privately owned power industry must fight for its life against the administration's "most devastating and destructive attack." He told of presenting "in person" to the President "a dignified memorial" setting forth "facts that seemed to the trustees to threaten the existence of this industry and appealed to the government for a get-together policy for the elimination of whatever abuses and wrongs might be found to exist," but said he get nowhere.

GREAT BRITAIN'S attitude toward the crisis in east Africa has enraged all of Fascist Italy and the attacks on England in the Italian press became so bitter that Mussolini had to order that they be toned down a little, though it was denied in Rome that the British had made any diplomatic protest. Il Duce, however, continues his outspoken denunciation of the British course. In a speech at Cagliari, the capital of Sardinia, he defied his European critics who have requested him to deal less harshly with the Ethiopians, and attacked the British without going to the trouble of hiding his words behind diplomatic formulas.

"We will imitate to the letter those who taught us this lesson," he shouted, referring to British colonizing methods which his press has been "exposing." "They have demonstrated that when they were creating an empire and defending it they never took into consideration world opinion.

"We have got old, and we have got new accounts to settle with Ethiopia, and we will settle them. We will pay no attention to what is said in foreign countries. We exclusively are the judges of our own interests and the guarantors of our future."

Actually, Mussolini's plans for war with Ethiopia are not very popular in Italy, but British interference is increasing his support daily. The reconstructed British cabinet is much worried over the situation and believes the war cannot now be stopped, though Sir Samuel Hoare, the new foreign minister, and Capt. Anthony Eden, who is now minister for League of Nations affairs, are doing what they can to avert it. It is expected the Italian offensive will begin within three months.

TWO of the kidnapers of young George Weyerhaeuser of Tacoma—Harmon M. Waley and his wife Margaret—were arrested in Salt Lake City, where the woman was passing $20 bills that were part of the ransom money. A third member of the gang, William Mahan, an ex-convict, was being hunted in the vicinity of Butte, Mont., in which he was forced to abandon a stolen automobile that contained $15,000 of the sum paid for release of the boy. Waley and his wife, heavily ironed, were subjected to a grueling examination by government agents and confessed their part in the crime.

GREECE has decided to remain a republic and the hopes of ex-King George that he might recover his throne are blasted. In the parliamentary elections a coalition of royalists and other parties was badly defeated, the Tsaldaris government winning 285 of the 300 seats contested. The monarchists were led by Gen. John Metaxis.

PIERRE LAVAL, who succeeded in forming a new government for France, cleverly persuaded the obstreperous chamber of deputies to grant him temporary dictatorial powers over finances in order to "save the franc." The vote of confidence accorded him was 324 to 160. Laval is thus assured of security in his post and in Paris there is confidence that the flow of gold from the Bank of France will be checked and that the country will remain on the gold standard for some time to come.

JAPAN'S army, which appears to rule Japan's foreign policy, has decided that Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, dictator of China, must retire. This was announced at Tientsin by Col. Takashi Sakai, chief of staff of the Japanese troops in North China. He said:

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek

"Chiang Kai-shek, using his financial and military power under the pretense of uniting China, is actually corrupting and disintegrating North China, which Chiang regards as a colony. Hence the Japanese army now feels that it is the wisest policy to uproot Chiang Kai-shek's influence, especially in North China.

"It is not the communists but Chiang Kai-shek who will put an end to the existence of China. The Japanese army intends to take the necessary measures to compel the Chinese government to abolish the Tientsin garrison crops, the Kuomintang political branches, the Blue Shirt secret police and patriotic societies encouraging the consumption of native goods. These societies have been responsible for anti-Japanese sentiment as well as disturbance of peace and order within Manchukuo."

Dispatches from Shanghai said the Chinese troops and officials were rapidly leaving Peiping and Tientsin in obedience to the commands of the Japanese army. Several large Japanese transports and two destroyers were reported hurrying to Tientsin.

ONE of the most prominent figures in the World war passed from the scene with the death in Essex, England, of Viscount Byng of Vimy. As a young officer of cavalry Byng distinguished himself in campaigns in the Sudan, in South Africa and in India. In the great war he won undying fame by his desperate defense of Ypres when it was attacked by overwhelmingly superior German forces which for the first time used poison gas and flame throwers. He was given a baronetcy for this and other gallant work.

SOLELY on account of ill health, Ramsay MacDonald has retired as prime minister of Great Britain and gone to Lossiemouth, his home in Scotland, for a good rest. His successor as head of the national cabinet is Stanley Baldwin, the veteran leader of Conservatives who has been serving as lord president of the council and in reality has been a deputy prime minister since the national government was formed seven years ago. Mr. MacDonald exchanges places with him, thus remaining in the cabinet but without departmental duties. The date of his last cabinet meeting as prime minister was the sixth anniversary of his assumption of the office for the second time. With the exception of H. H. Asquith he has held the office continuously for the longest period in modern times.

Stanley Baldwin

Of the other changes in the cabinet the most important was the transfer of Sir John Simon from the foreign office to the home office. He is succeeded in the former by Sir Samuel Hoare, who has been chief secretary for India. Mr. MacDonald's son Malcolm, only thirty-four years old, was made colonial secretary.

THE United States has a new open golf champion in the person of a young man whom most of the golfers in the country never before heard of. He is Sam Parks, a Pittsburgh professional of only three years' standing, and on the difficult and rain-soaked Oakmont Country club course he scored 299 for 72 holes, 11 over par. Jimmy Thompson, a long driver from Long Beach Calif., was second with 301 and Walter Hagen took third place with 302. Christ Brinke of Detroit was the best of the amateurs, his score being 315.

COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH'S active participation in the affairs of Transcontinental and Western Air has been terminated at least for the present. Henry B. Dupont, chairman of the board, in making the announcement, denied there had been any disagreement between the famous aviator and the company officials.

"Colonel Lindbergh never has devoted 100 per cent of his time to TWA activities," Mr. Dupont said. "As advisor he drew a retainer for his technical advice. Sometimes he worked several days in succession, sometimes only two or three days a month.

"He has devoted much time to the company, but now has decided to devote the next few months exclusively to his personal affairs, although he will continue to be available in emergencies for consultation. He still is TWA's technical adviser and he will be available if we need him. Probably when his personal affairs are straightened out he may be devoting a lot of time to our problems."

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building — Washington, D. C.

Washington.—It is never easy or simple to attempt a forecast of the reactions of a nation as large as ours. There are so many cross-currents, so many local influences and factors at work that the popular reaction sometimes, usually in fact, is slow in crystalizing. Thus, it appears safe to say at this writing that the administration's future course on NRA and other New Deal policies concerning which there is constitutional doubt necessarily must provide a basis for the 1936 campaign.

Issue Drawn for 1936

Yet, certainly it can surely be said that the issue is now drawn and that the battle next year will be between radicals and conservatives; between those who favor constitutional government and those who think our nation has gone beyond the considerations laid down by the founding fathers, and between those who regard American traditions and practices as worth defending and an opposition constituted wholly of those who desire to remake our modes of living.

In these days of swiftly changing conditions in Washington, one can observe certain outcroppings in the numerous controversies and the wild confusion, and these point definitely in one direction. They indicate the break-up, the disintegration, of the old political parties. It is too early to predict whether our two-party system will continue even under the names of Democratic and Republican. Certainly if those two names continue they will shield under their banners eventually an entirely different party leadership and party personnel.

Proof of this contention lies in the numerous statements, suggestions and trial balloons that have floated about—all serving as feelers in the direction of a coalition among opposition to the New Deal. It is to be noted that among those who have put out feelers about coalition have been some very well known names, both among Democrats and Republicans. These moves probably will not develop into important activities but they constitute straws showing which way the wind blows.

All of the above is by way of saying that Mr. Roosevelt as the head and forefront of the New Deal is at the parting of the ways. Soon, he must choose whether he will align himself definitely and completely with the radical element as typified by the Tugwells, the Richbergs, the Wheelers and La Follettes or whether he will turn to the philosophies of the old-line-Jeffersonian Democrats, most of whom come from what used to be the Solid South insofar as Democratic voters were concerned. He must make this choice because it is no longer possible for him to ride two horses, successful as he was in the early days of his administration in keeping the two wings of his party together. When he has made that choice, at that same time begins the development of a new political party alignment in the United States. These conclusions are the conclusions of the most astute politicians and observers in Washington.

* * * * * * *

The question may be asked: What has brought about these new conditions so suddenly? The answer may not be as apparent as it seems. Offhand, one would say that the sudden halt of the New Deal program that was accomplished through the NRA decision by the Supreme court of the United States had actually amounted to a major operation. This is only partially true. The Supreme court decision while blocking further expansion of the New Deal in the direction in which it was tending simply provided a focal point around which the maelstrom centers. In other words, through all the months since the New Deal came into power defections have been increasing. The opposition, growing in strength, at last has been given an anchor. The cumulative character of the opposition and the dissension and dissatisfaction has made it possible for a single incident such as the Supreme court decision to provide what politicians call an issue.

Defections Increase

If the Supreme court ruling had not been sufficient to accomplish this purpose, Mr. Roosevelt personally provided the necessary additional momentum. When he spoke in his now famous press conference about the court decision having the effect of pushing American social life back to "horse and buggy days" he set up at one and the same time a circumstance that molded his own supporters in one group and the opposition concretely in another.

So avidly did the opposition seize upon Mr. Roosevelt's statement that many newspapers of influence in the country construed it as a challenge to the Supreme court. Obviously the President, occupying a co-equal status with the Supreme court in our form of government, had no intention of issuing a challenge to the Supreme court in the ordinary sense of the word. What he intended was to explain to the country that the time had come for the nation to consider its future course; the question he propounded in effect was whether the limitations, the maxima and the minima, laid down in the Constitution were sufficiently flexible to cover life as we now live it. From sober-thinking individuals, I gather that this is the point which must be developed fully in advance of the November elections of 1936.

Consequently, some observers believe the campaign next year ought to be on a higher plane than any in recent history. They point to the fact that determination of the question just outlined above carries with it the collateral determination of whether the United States shall be one vast empire with state lines virtually obliterated. Likewise, determination of the question referred to will bring an answer to a further question, namely, whether the American people desire that their government shall control individual businesses or whether those businesses and the practices of the citizenry shall be permitted to continue as was the desire of the colonists when they fought off the armies of King George.

* * * * * * *

But there will be some sixteen months of time that must elapse before the American people can express their opinion and their wishes at the polls. In that interim, pressing problems resulting from the New Deal program must be solved.

Problems to Solve

At the moment, what to do with NRA as well as how to do it stands foremost. Behind it lies troublesome questions centering in the farm policies of the Agricultural Adjustment administration. Permeating the very structure of the New Deal is the broader question of whether it is desirable to continue so many of the alphabetical agencies as permanent units of the government since each of them was created in response to a plan necessitated by desires for economic recovery. NRA will be continued in a skeleton form. Its powers and its functions will be very limited. Some vitriolic opponents of NRA are declaring that its skeleton organization is being maintained solely as a face-saving proposition. They argue that Mr. Roosevelt could not admit complete defeat of this outstanding plank in his recovery platform.

The truth seems to be that Mr. Roosevelt, while unwilling to admit defeat in this direction, is waiting until he can determine what the wishes of the country are and how far the majority of the population will go with him in rebuilding the structure on lines within the limitations prescribed by the Supreme court. Thus far, certainly he has had considerable evidence of benefits accruing from the NRA experiment. No other view can be taken of announcements by many industrial leaders to the effect that they intend to continue hours of labor and wage levels to which they had subscribed under the codes of fair practice—all of which were thrown out the window by the Supreme court as illegal.

To the extent that important industrial lines are continuing to observe the code conditions on a voluntary basis it is believed Mr. Roosevelt can take credit for having moved general business to a plane against which even the social theorists can offer little complaint. The President has termed those who have been guilty of unfair and unjust treatment of labor and the consuming public "chiselers." There is chiseling going on now. Probably, there will be more of it. If it becomes too widespread, it seems reasonably certain that there will be a strong reaction among thinking people. This reaction will strengthen whatever moves the President makes to revise the constitutional limitations about which he has complained.

There was an incident of historic importance in the Capitol building the other day. The Supreme court of the United States met as usual in its chambers under the dome of the Capitol on June 3. As far as outward appearances go it was simply another session in which the nine dignified and learned justices met to publicly render the conclusions of law they had reached. But it was more than that. It was the last time the court was to convene in that chamber, and today it is dim in the sallow light of shaded windows for the first time since 1860.

Historic Incident

When the court convenes next October after its usual summer recess, the justices will climb marble steps into a gigantic new ten-million-dollar structure—the permanent home of the court for the future. It is a building ornate in its simplicity. The court chambers and the private offices of the justices represent architectural masterpieces. Equipment of the most modern type has been installed. Convenience is everywhere. Yet one of the older members of the court whom it has been my privilege to know remarked with just a touch of pathos in his voice that he believed he would prefer his old office and the old bench and bar where he had served so long.

The chamber that is now deserted was used in the earliest part of its history as the meeting place of the United States senate. It was there that the voices of Calhoun and Webster were heard hey made some headway in Decem- of 1932, when congress passed the Hawes-Cutting bill. This provided that, subject to the approval of the bill by the Philippine legislature, the islands would be allowed to draw up a republican constitution which would have to be acceptable both to them and to the President of the United States. Then, after a period of ten years, the islands would be granted complete independence. During the ten years, exports and the number of Philippine immigrants to the United States would be restricted. After that the islands were to be outside the American tariff wall.

President Hoover vetoed the bill January 13, 1933, on the grounds that it had been selfishly planned to protect American agriculture against Philippine labor and products; it did not satisfactorily discharge American responsibility towards the islanders, who were unready for independence ("Economic independence of the Philippines must be attained before political independence can be successful" was the way he put it); and it would lay the islands open to the dangers of turbulent conditions in the Far East. Congress overrode the veto four days later. The Philippine legislature rejected the bill nine months afterward.

The new constitution was prepared under the conditions of the Tydings-McDuffie bill, which was passed by the last congress and signed by President Roosevelt. Its chief differences from the Jones act are in the manner in which it allows the islands a gradually increased dosage of economic divorcement from the United States for their people to taste before they decide finally to cut away all ties on July 4, 1945.

At present all Philippine exports to the United States come in duty free. The Tydings-McDuffie bill provides that in the sixth year of the ten-year commonwealth period a duty of 5 per cent will be levied. This will be graduated annually until at the end of five years the duty would be 25 per cent. Economic experts are generally of the opinion that this would cut terrifically into Philippine exports, some even contending that the islands would be economically ruined even before they gained their complete independence.

Varied Resources.

The Philippines are not, as many folks in the metropolitan centers of the states might believe, a nation of elevator operators, bus boys and professional ping-pong players. They raise great quantities of rice, sugar cane, hemp, manila, coconut, corn, tobacco and maguey. Their forestry, fishing and mining is important. They manufacture sugar, cocoa, coconut oil, cigars and cigarettes, chocolate and coffee.

In 1895, before the American market was opened up to them, the exports totaled about $19,000,000. In 1929 it had reached $164,000,000, although everything but sugar slumped to a considerable degree during the depression that followed. While only 3 per cent of the exports reached the United States before the islands became an American possession, 61 per cent of them are today sold in American markets.

The present agreement is not what the Philippines have long hoped for, but in their enthusiasm they have apparently decided it is about all they will get, for in the island plebiscite which followed the signing of the constitution by President Roosevelt, they approved the document by an overwhelming vote. Women voted for the first time in the history of an oriental country, as the result of a bill passed by the legislature last December and signed by Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy, former mayor of Detroit.

The new Philippine constitution, which now becomes effective as soon as the existing government is terminated by a proclamation of President Roosevelt, is much like our own Constitution, with the following important differences:

The president may serve only one term, six years. He can veto any part of any bill. The legislature, with two minor exceptions, cannot appropriate more money than his budget calls for. The vice president is a member of the cabinet, and cabinet members may speak before the legislature.

There will be only one legislative body, the assembly. In times of war or other great national emergency it can vote to make the president a dictator. The Supreme court will have eleven justices, automatically retired at seventy, who can declare a law or treaty unconstitutional by a two-thirds majority vote.

Women to Vote on Suffrage.

Literate men over twenty-one will be allowed to vote. A plebiscite will be held in two years on woman suffrage, and if 300,000 women vote for it they will be given the right of suffrage.

All natural resources are to become the property of the state, not to be leased for longer than 25 years. The state may operate and establish industries and systems of communication and transportation, in the interests of national defense. The state will protect labor and regulate relations between landlords and tenants and between labor and capital. It may provide for compulsory arbitration.

Treaties will be ratified by a majority of the assembly, and that body alone may declare war.

Although the plebiscite on May 14 was a landslide in favor of the new constitution, it was held in the wake of an uprising which was the bloodiest the islands had seen in 15 years. There were several actual battles. Constabulary officers ultimately quelled the uprising, but not until 61 rebels were dead and 54 rebels and 10 constabularies wounded. Quezon and Murphy were in the United States at the time.

Dissatisfaction with the trade requirement of the Tydings-McDuffie bill was one of the things upon which the revolt was blamed. It is thought in many circles that the Filipinos will not be so anxious for independence as they are now, when 1945 rolls around, if the bill is followed to the letter.

Economic Future.

A congressional committee headed by Senator Millard F. Tydings of Maryland, co-author of the bill, has just returned from the islands with recommendations which will probably provide material for a study of their economic future. The bill calls for a conference on that subject one year before the commonwealth period expires, but it is probable that this will take place at an earlier date.

The final outcome, it is thought, will result in one of the following possibilities:

(1) Complete independence, exactly as proposed, which will involve (according to most authorities) economic ruin and probable absorption of the Philippines by "an Oriental power."

(2) Independence, exchanging tariff preference to the islands for free entry of American goods.

(3) Dominion government of the islands, allowing them trade preference, but keeping a political string attached to them.

The islands are determined to have independence, complete and at any cost, according to Quezon, who has fought for it in diplomatic circles in this country for many years, served as president of the island senate since 1916, and will in all likelihood be its first president.

The dapper little diplomat, somewhere about sixty years of age, admitted that his nation was setting out on a great adventure and would probably make mistakes.

"What nation does not?" he asked. "But we have been prepared for our adventure by a great republic. We have trusted you in the past and have been rewarded for our trust. We have depended upon you and we have not been disappointed. We know that we can count upon you in the future."

Mentioned as a possible candidate to oppose Quezon for the presidency is Aguinaldo, the same Emilio Aguinaldo who led the revolts and guerilla warfare more than thirty years ago. Quezon then was his trusted lieutenant.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

©W.N.U. By Editha L. Watson

THE LOST CABIN MINE

SOMEWHERE in the Big Horn mountains is a mine richer than the Comstock Lode. It was found in 1863, and lost in 1864, but some day a lucky prospector will find it again, open up its neglected tunnels and build a new cabin where the old one stood.

Three men, Allen Hulbert, Cox, and Jones, were the first to discover this bonanza. They had gone out on a prospecting trip from Walla Walla, and sometime in the spring of 1863 they found themselves in the wildest part of the United States. They had been going through terrible hardships, floating on a raft down the Big Horn, and traveling at night to avoid hostile Indians. Men in their senses would have recoiled from the bare idea of such adventures, but these men were bewitched by a golden phantom; they kept on, prospecting as they went.

At last, there in the Big Horns they found a wonderful pay streak, which panned "all the way from five cents to one dollar each trial." This was their rainbow's end, and here they planned to stay through the next winter. By the time water froze overnight, each had something like half a bushel of gold.

Winter passed all too slowly. As soon as the first spring warmth came to the little valley, they were out on the job again, working at their sluice boxes, and every night adding to their store of gold.

What their plans were, no one can tell. Perhaps they expected to go back to Walla Walla that summer, laden with treasure; or they may have decided to stay on until either they or the nuggets were exhausted. But these plans were destined never to be completed, for Indians suddenly fell on Cox and Jones, killed and scalped them, and rifled the cabin. Hulbert, who had gone some distance off, saw the horrible sight but was powerless to help his partners.

As soon as the marauders left, Hulbert hurried down to the cabin. The gold was still there, and he packed a knapsack full, buried the rest, and struck out in the opposite direction from that taken by the Indians. After 18 days through wild, unknown country, he reached the North Platte river, and found the old trail to California.

Here he met up with a large party of gold seekers heading toward the northwest. On hearing his story, part of the enormous crowd decided to return with him to the mine, and more than 500 people, with 140 wagons, accepted him as their leader.

How was a man to retrace a trail like his? How could he remember every landmark, every direction, of those terrible 18 days of flight? Hulbert thought he could, but all summer long he tried in vain to reach that abandoned cabin where the bodies of his friends guarded the golden treasure. At last he was forced to admit defeat, and the angry crowd, after even once gathering to lynch their bewildered leader, started westward.

Since then, many a good prospector has spent years in the effort to locate the Lost Cabin mine. "Old Pancake" Comstock, grubstaked by Nevada men, searched for it in vain. A Colorado miner named Beckley, following directions given by a dying friend, thought he had found it, but his discovery proved to be copper. Later another prospector, Sweeney by name, found an enormous outcropping which he thought must be the mother lode, and Associated Press items told that the Lost Cabin lead had at last been found. But this ore also proved to be copper.

Then, during the Sioux uprising, when the Big Horn country was alive with Indians, three men made their way up to the head of the Little Big Horn, and here they found what must have been the real mother lode of the Lost Cabin gold. It was the largest known body of rich quartz in the world!

The newcomers built a boat, loaded it with gold, and planned to float down the river until the reached a settlement. Here they would outfit and return to where fortune had smiled her golden grin at them. But death lurked downstream: the Sioux camp, stretched along the river, was more than three miles long, and 6,000 warriors waited and longed for a chance to spill white man's blood.

It was midnight when the awkward boat started past this gigantic camp. A dog, sniffing the air, barked excitedly. A sentinel peered and listened. The rapids of the Little Big Horn reached for the boat. In haste, the miners grew panicky—a moment more, and the boat overturned—another, and they were captives of the hostile Sioux.

In the scuffle that ensued, one man managed to get away. He had no food, no weapons, and his clothing had been torn until only a few rags covered him. But he had clenched his hand over a couple of nuggets, and these he kept during the days when he wandered in search of a settlement. At last he stumbled into a little town.

What happened to Sitting Bull, Custer, and the rest, is history. The country became safe from Indians again. But the one man who could have trailed the golden phantom back to the Lost Cabin lode sat in the sunshine and babbled of immense wealth, of hunger, of Indians, of his beautiful yellow nuggets—a garrulous, senseless idiot.

Humpty-Dumpty NRA
Many Damocles Swords
Biggest and Fastest
Gangster Ingenuity

Refusing to admit the resemblance between NRA and Humpty-Dumpty, that "all the king's horses and all the king's men" could not put together again, Washington will gather up the pieces of NRA and try to reconstruct "something as good." The process may remind reconstructors of the boy who took his watch apart, put it together and proudly said to his friends, "Not only have I put it together, but I have quite a number of pieces left over that I do not need."

Arthur Brisbane

The Weyerhaeuser kidnapers, however "hard-boiled" they may be, must feel nervous when they hand out one of the $200,000 ransom bills, knowing that the number and series of every bill are in the possession of government detectives.

It will not make spending the money more agreeable to learn that thirty "G-men" from the attorney general's office will devote their entire time to hunting for those bills and tracing the spenders of them—$200,000 worth of Damocles swords.

The giant French ship Normandie is here and pleasing to Americans who like superlatives. She is the biggest liner ever launched, the longest, broadest, heaviest, costliest. And, crossing in 4 days 11 hours 42 minutes, she is the fastest. She is built, not for profit, but for glory and to advertise French supremacy.

England will soon send her Queen Mary after the Normandie's record and, doubtless, Mussolini will soon enter the race.

Uncle Sam? Well, he is busy with other things, very busy, just now.

In the line of viciousness, modern gangsters show ingenuity. Police give these details of the death of Danny Walsh, head of a bootleg-rum syndicate who was kidnaped, ransomed for $40,000, later murdered. Enemies took him to sea in a boat, made him sit with his feet in a tub of wet cement, and watch while it hardened. He was then thrown overboard with the tub of cement hard around his feet. Several times, while he watched the cement harden, it must have occurred to Danny Walsh that a criminal career is not profitable.

. To say, "Man is half tiger and half monkey" is sometimes unjust to the monkey. At High Point, N. C., J. R. Riggs, middle-aged, operating a filling station, was found, with tenpenny nails driven through each hand and each foot, fastened to a rough wooden cross. The man, having been nailed to the cross only for a short time, will probably live. Riggs admitted he had engineered the crucifixion to regain his wife's affection.

Sometimes gangsters show signs of intelligence. Volney Davis, arrested in Chicago in connection with the Bremer kidnaping, was "flown" to St. Paul, and, arriving there, confessed complicity in the kidnaping, saying to the judges: "I knew I could not get away from the 'G-men.'"

Land ownership is the best foundation of prosperity and security, under just government.

Those seeking to establish refugees from Germany in Palestine decide, wisely, to begin with land ownership. A fund expected to exceed $5,000,000 is being raised for that purpose.

The ground under your feet cannot run away, cannot be stolen.

King George, seventy years old, celebrated his birthday reviewing troops, wearing the uniform of colonel-in-chief of the Irish Guards. He rode to Buckingham palace on horseback, all four of his sons riding with him, while thousands cheered. Recently the queen celebrated her sixty-eighth birthday. It is desirable that the husband be a little older than the wife. That gives him an excuse for complaining. He can always say, "Wait until you are as old as I am and you will understand."

A Brooklyn girl, ten years old, paid $1 for a sweepstakes ticket, won $30,000. It will cost other little girls and big men and women many dollars for every dollar accidentally won.

Uncle Sam is presumed to get his share of the winnings in income tax. He and his country would be richer if he could find a way to prevent the gambling invasion.

The United States has important work to do outside of NRA and its revision, work with which the Supreme court would not interfere, and that is the control of floods, protection of population against them. Two hundred and fifty are reported killed in southwestern Nebraska, following flood and tornado.

Pattern 2197

You can make yourself a mighty smart summer wardrobe right from this one pattern. Simplicity's the thing—shirtmaker frocks are "the top"—and here's a beautifully fitting model that may take many variations. Made in a tie silk or print it is perfect under coats now and on into summer—make it again as in the other sketch—with square neckline and loose sleeves, in a solid color. Then start all over and use a striped or checked silk or printed lawn. The material influences the frock to a great extent—and this is a perfect one for developing the lovely new fabrics.

Pattern 2197 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Sizes 10 takes 3¼ yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address, and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

EXPLAINING IT

"Yes, it is really remarkable," observed mother at the head of the table. "Clifford seems to eat twice as much chicken when we have visitors."

"Indeed!" exclaimed the lady visitor. "And, pray, why is that, Clifford?"

"'Cause that's the only time we have it!" replied the truthful lad.

Domesticity

"Would you marry for money?"

"No," answered Miss Cayenne, 'that is, not too much money. A man who is constantly being investigated is sure to spend time away from home and be irritable at breakfast."

THE SAME COUNTRY

By ROBERT V. FLEMING

Vice President, American Bankers Association

There is a growing appreciation, both on the part of the people and the Government, of the earnest and sincere efforts being made by bankers to aid in recovery. It is desirable that we miss no opportunity to foster public understanding of the bankers' problems. We are living in an age of complex and upset economic conditions. Our affairs are closely inter-related not only within the confines of our own borders but extend to other countries throughout the world.

R. V. FLEMING

The Greatest Difficulty

I think the greatest difficulty we have to overcome in America today is due to our impatience with the progress we are making towards recovery. We must realize that while the Government can help by directing some measures for relief and recovery, we must help ourselves by doing our share to give impetus to the Government's efforts. We have the same country and basically the same businesses, factories and people we had prior to the depression, and business initiative must step forward if real recovery is to be achieved.

The theory we often hear expressed that banks create business activity is wrong. Banking can only make a supplementary contribution to business activity. Bankers have the facilities and the desire to extend credit, but business must initiate activity by seeking the credit which is readily available to all worthy borrowers.

Let it be said for business, however, that business men are as eager as bankers to contribute towards recovery. I think some of the trouble lies in the fact that too many legislative measures have been proposed for reform which leave an uncertainty in the minds of business leaders as to their eventual outcome and effect. Consequently, they hesitate to expand until the probable effects of such legislation are known.

MAKING IT HARDER FOR BANK ROBBERS

Mechanical Devices That Impede the Work of Bandits Described by Bankers Association Official.

The impediments which the hard working bank robber now meets in plying his trade among small as well as large banks are described by James E. Baum, Deputy Manager American Bankers Association in charge of its Protective Department, in an article in "Banking" published by his organization.

"Protective equipment will minimize if not prevent loss," Mr. Baum says, "such as the silent automatic type of alarm, approved tear gas systems, several styles of bandit resisting enclosures and timelocks, or safes equipped with timelocks, which can be set for intervals of a few minutes.

"The silent automatic alarms operate in the beginning of a holdup and through actions carried out by the bank employees in obedience to the bandits' own commands. They are adaptable to the smaller banks which continue to be easiest targets for bank robbery.

Tear Gas Systems

"Tear gas systems have their advantages as self-contained protective units where outside aid is inconvenient or too remote from the bank to be effective. One objection to the use of tear gas in preventing holdup is the need of pressing a lever or button to discharge it. Although this necessary action seems too much to expect of the victims in a crisis where their lives are in jeopardy, the fact remains that tear gas systems have defeated bank robbery. Its deterrent value is also important.

"Different styles of bandit resisting enclosures are available. The lock manufacturers also produce timelocks which can be set to open at intervals of five minutes or longer. These locks are especially adapted for attachment to small safes or chests for safeguarding surplus funds while the bank is open for business."

Stock of Central Banks Usually Privately Owned

Of all the central banks at present existing there are only four whose stock is owned by the government. The newest central bank is that of Canada, which opened its doors only a few months ago after a most exhaustive study had been made of the experience of all nations with the result that the stock of the Bank of Canada is privately owned.

Agriculture and Industry

Returns for the first quarter of 1935 for industrial corporations publishing quarterly reports show net profits 21 per cent more than for the same in 1934. The total farm value of all important crops, exclusive of livestock, rose in 1934 to $4,782,423,000, as compared with $4,114,265,000 in the previous year and $2,882,195,000 in 1932.

Church Bells Tell Trend in Prices of Fresh Fish

Church bells act as town crier in the village of Palafrugell, writes a Madrid correspondent in the Detroit News.

Apart from directing the fire brigade to the scene of a fire, they announce fish sales and keep buyers informed on price trends in the market.

And all this is done in a sort of Morse code so that if you aren't one of the Palafrugell folk then you can't understand what it's all about, nor can you buy any fish.

When a fresh catch is landed at Palafrugell, a special runner takes the news from the coast posthaste to the church sexton. This worthy at once rings the call to attention, since his reward will be a quantity of fish. And every resident in Palafrugell knows the call.

Immediately afterward a second bell is slowly tolled, and if you understand the code you will receive a running bell commentary on current market conditions, the quantity of fish available and its purchase price while you are hurrying to the market to buy.

When there is a reduction in price a different bell rings the change and the varying length of the toll gives the new price until all the stock is disposed of.

Lenin's Body Rests in Red, Black Granite Tomb

The mausoleum in which Lenin's body is placed is about 50 feet high, rising to a small colonnade at the top in six stages or steps, like ancient Mayan pyramids. The tomb is composed of huge blocks of red and black granite from all parts of Russia. The largest, a 50-ton monolith of black granite, is placed over the bronze entrance doors with the word "Lenin" in large letters inlaid in red porphyry. The short columns which support the flat top are of various shades of black porphyry—each one a gift of a different republic in Soviet Russia.

Just inside the entrance is the giant symbol of Communism, a hammer and sickle carved in stone. Gray marble steps descend to the underground room where Lenin's body lies. The body is in the center of the room under a convex glass case, which rests on a monolith of black granite.

The color scheme is symbolic, black, red and gray. Black and red are the Soviet mourning colors. Gray is the worker's color. Lenin is dressed in a plain worker's suit of cloth.—Washington Star.

Lightest of All

Hydrogen is the lightest substance known. Air is 14 times, water 11,000 times, and gold 212,000 times heavier. Water boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, but hydrogen, in a liquid state, will boil at 421 degrees below zero. Touch a match to two parts hydrogen mixed with one part of oxygen properly enclosed, and you promptly get an explosion forming water. Liquefy hydrogen under a pressure of 2,703 pounds per square inch and it immediately becomes the heaviest liquid in the world, being then more than six times as heavy as water. Certain hot metals will absorb hydrogen in enormous quantities. Thus a palladium wire has been known to absorb 935 times its own volume of hydrogen and to remain apparently unaltered, there being evidently no chemical union between the two.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Rs and Oysters

Why are oysters "in season" only when there is an "R" in the month? For successful spawning the oyster requires water at a temperature approximating to 60 degrees. Consequently the spawning season is practically limited to the summer months, and the oyster is at its best between September and April. But even thus an oyster may not be at its very best unless it is in its fourth or fifth year. Younger than this they are inclined to be thin, and older than this to be tough, and fit only for soup.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Choosing Jewish Names

Religious tolerance filled Eighteenth century Austria with Jews, the majority having only one name such as Isaac or Israel. This resulted in confusion, especially in law courts, so Maria Theresa ordered every Jew to take a new name, and one not used by Christians. So names were derived from minerals, flowers and other things and that was the origin of such present-day surnames as Goldberg (gold mountain) Rosenbaum (rose tree) and Rothschild (red sign).—Collier's Weekly.

Diamonds as Grinders

Genuine diamonds are used for coating grinding wheels. Stones that are off color or too small for the market are crushed and graded, mixed with a special bond and coated on a composition form to a thickness of one-eighth of an inch. The diamond layer is applied to the side of the wheel form for side grinding. The wheels are used for conditioning the hardest machine tools.—Pearson's Weekly.

Lima Old Place

The existence of Lima dates back almost 100 years before the Pilgrims land at Plymouth Rock. England's historic fight with the Spanish armada was still half a century in the future. Martin Luther was still alive. Shakespeare had not been born yet. Latin America had a well-established civilization before the first white man made a home in what is now the United States and Canada.

GOVERNMENT BANK UNSUITED TO U. S.

Would Serve Politics Rather Than Business Needs, Says R. S. Hecht, Citing Previous Experiences.

QUOTES PRESIDENT JACKSON

Extent and Diversity of This Country Presents Different Situation From Europe and Makes Regional Banking Necessary.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A refutation of arguments in favor of a government-owned central bank system for the United States is presented in a statement by R. S. Hecht, President of the American Bankers Association, based on exhaustive studies of European central banks. He also points out the disastrous consequences of previous central bank experiments in the United States.

"Our present regional Federal Reserve System under private ownership is infinitely better for this country than would be a government-owned and controlled central bank," Mr. Hecht says. "If history teaches us anything, it is that it is almost certain that a central bank so owned would be run to meet the varying exigencies of the government in power rather than to serve the commercial needs of the country."

Central banking has been tried twice in the United States, but was finally abolished because the credit control which the central banks exercised became objectionable and unpopular, he goes on to say.

What Andrew Jackson Said

"The continued existence of the Second Bank finally became a bitter political issue and President Jackson succeeded in abolishing it," Mr. Hecht says. "Permit me to quote from his farewell address: 'The immense capital and peculiar privileges bestowed upon it enabled it to exercise despotic sway over the other banks in every part of the country. From its superior strength it could seriously injure, if not destroy, the business of any of them which might incur its resentment. . . . If you had not conquered, the government would have passed from the hands of the many to the hands of the few; and this organized money power, from its secret conclave, would have dictated the choice of your highest officers. . . The forms of your government might, for a time, have remained, but its living spirit would have departed from it.'"

When the Wilson Administration considered banking reform it carefully kept away from vesting central banking powers in a single institution and instead introduced the regional idea by creating twelve reserve banks located in different economic and geographical sections of the country, Mr. Hecht says, a plan that has worked exceedingly well because the separate banks are under the guidance of men chosen on account of their intimate acquaintance with the problems and needs of their respective territories. He continues:

"The great size and diversity of America tends to make a central bank undesirable. The central banks of Europe such as the Banks of England, France and Germany, cover areas not as large as some of our states. A central bank in the United States on the other hand would be called upon to administer the financial policies of an area larger than all of Europe, in which there are quite a number of central banks.

Subservient to Popular Demands

"Moreover, history has proven that any banking system entirely owned and dominated by the government usually demonstrates much greater ability in aiding expansion of credit than in putting on the brakes at the right time to prevent undue inflation by restraining and contracting credit. This is easy to understand because in times of depression everyone is urging the government to make money and credit easy and to encourage expansion.

"On the other hand, it always has been and always will be a difficult task for any government to call a halt in time of apparent prosperity because in the very nature of things the government would be very sensitive to public criticism and would hesitate to take any action which would tend to curtail business activity. It is such undue susceptibility to popular demands which makes government banking inherently weak.

"Our studies show that of all the central banks at present existing there are only four whose stock is owned by the government. The newest central bank is that of Canada, which opened its doors only a few months ago after a most exhaustive study had been made of the experience of all nations with the result that the stock of the Bank of Canada is privately owned."

The American Bankers Association, Mr. Hecht says, is convinced that a central bank would not be in the interest of the public or the banks. This position, he added, is "well understood by the President and the leaders in his Administration for we have been absolutely frank with them in all of our discussions and have missed no opportunity for emphasizing that in our opinion no banking system will, in the long run, be sound if it is dominated entirely by the ever-changing political administrations. We should do all we can to keep our banking mechanism as far removed from partisan politics as possible."

DO YOU KNOW YOUR BASS?

Small-mouthed Bass, micropterus dolomieu. One of the best American game fish. Distributed from Lake Champlain and the St. Lawrence river, Ontario, Minnesota, south to the Ozarks, Mississippi and South Carolina, everywhere preferring swift, clear streams with gravel and rock bottoms. Also found in gravelly and sand-bottomed lakes where depth gives coolness to the water. Reaches a weight of 3 pounds in 6 years. Males build nest and guard young as in other sunfishes. A clean, bold feeder upon small fish, crayfish, larger insects, etc.

Field marks: mouth moderate, the upper jaw never extending beyond the eye, usually a little short of back of orbit; scales on cheek small in 17 rows; young more or less spotted and barred, but never with a black lateral band.

Large-mouth Black Bass, aplites salmoides. Always welcomes any sort of bait and never dallies with a bass fly. Will live in more sluggish and warmer waters than the small-mouth. The bayous formed by impounding our rivers over the cornbelt make a good home for this species. Male is fond of rush and cattail roots upon which to make its nest. The large mouth reaches 25 pounds in weight and up to 35 inches in length. An 8 pound fish is a large one, the average fish in the most waters being 3 pounds. The young bass reach 6 inches during their first summer.

Field marks: mouth very large, upper jaw extending back of eye in adult; scales on cheek in 10 or 11 rows; young with a distinct black lateral band.

Pickerel, Northern Pike and Muskallunge

These are slim, cannibal, fast swimming fish which are hearty feeders and quite gamey. Their flesh is of good flavor. All members of this group spawn in pairs and like overflow areas for egg depositing. They feed more by night than by day. Few smaller fish escape their swift arrowy rush. The Cornbelt members of this piratical group are:

Grass Pike or Little Pickerel, esox vermiculatus. Length 12 inches. Fins without black spots. Has both cheeks and gill covers entirely scaled. Prefers quite grassy pools and streams.

Pickerel or Great Northern Pike, esox lucius. Length 3 feet. Fins spotted with black. All of cheek and only upper half of gill cover scaled.

Muskallunge, esox masquinongy. A giant fish. Reaches 6 to 8 feet in length and 100 pounds in weight. Has the lower half of both cheek and gill cover naked (unscaled.) Sides more or less spotted with black, sometimes banded with same color.

TIMES PRINT SHOP FLOODED!

The Times Print Shop force is working under rather trying difficulties this week as the heavy rains flooded the shop with water. All day Tuesday, and far into the night we battled water, carrying out over 1,000 buckets-full in order to keep the water from damaging stock and machinery. Boots were the order of the day and this is the first time in our life as a printer that we have had to get the paper out with hip boots on. It's a queer sight to see "Oats" Keraus, linotype operator, sitting at the machine with boots on

As the theatre folk say, "The show must go on," and so with we printers, "the paper MUST go to press," water or no water. So excuse a lot of errors which may appear this week—we don't have any windshield wipers on our specs!

NOTICE FOR COAL BIDS

Bids will be received at the office of the County Auditor, Hancock County, Garner, Iowa, up to 2 o'clock p. m., Monday, July 1st, 1935: for approximately 65 tons of coal, delivered in bin at the Courthouse in Garner Iowa, and 110 tons on track at Duncan, Iowa.

Bidders will state price per ton and fully describe specifications of coal upon which bid is made.

By virtue of statutory authority preference will be given to products grown and coal produced within the State of Iowa.

The Board of Supervisors reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

TEST OF NEW BALL

Alex Ednie, pro at Shelter Rock Country club, Long Island, recently drove a spun latex ball through a phone book almost an inch thick, containing more than 500 pages. Standing the book on end without support 4 feet in front of the tee, Ednie sent the ball through with such force that it carried and rolled 100 yards beyond. Traveling at the rate of approximately 114 miles an hour, the ball was averaging 167 feet a second when it hit the book. The drive, declared impossible by golfer and nongolfer alike, was made to test the new spun latex golf ball, a United States rubber product. Made of materials never before used in golf ball construction, the new ball is notable for its power and distance. These qualities are acquired primarily from a high-power winding of thread spun direct from liquid latex, the natural milk of the rubber tree.

Aluminum Mirrors

Mirrors are now made of aluminum, which is brightened by a newly discovered electrolytic process that gives the surface of the metal a reflectivity almost equal to that of silver. The usual reflectivity obtained with polished aluminum reflectors is about 65 to 75 per cent. The electrolytic brightening process is carried out by immersing the aluminum reflector in an electrolyte of novel composition and passing direct current through the solution to the reflector, which is made the anode. Impurities in the metal surface are dissolved out, leaving a bright surface.

Isolation of Thames Port Passes

One of the numerous little ports of the Thames, ten miles above London, is to be brought into at least road traffic with the outer world, from which it has long been cut off. This is Isleworth, for centuries tucked securely away on the Kew-Richmond Reach. Few boating parties ever venture up so far, for it is accessible only at high tide. There people still burn oil and candles and light them with flint and steel and speak early Victorian English. The new river promenade will now for the first time bring the village in contact with the world of London.

One-Room Schoolhouses Are Rapidly Dwindling

Looking into the past for precedence, it may be stated with some confidence that a number and possibly many small rural schools will, if they have not already done so, close their doors this spring without thought of ever opening them again, says a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. And, strange is it may appear, in the name of progress.

In the dozen years from 1920 to 1932, many thousands of small one-room rural schools were replaced by 5,400 new consolidated schools in 44 states and the total of what in our state of color blindness we are pleased to call the "little red schoolhouse" of single room and single teacher fell to a few more than 143,000. While this increase of consolidated schools from 12,500 to 17,900 may have been and probably was slowed up during recent years of farm depression, there can be little doubt that the demand for consolidated schools will move up rapidly now that rural communities begin to see the dawn.

That there is acute need for the better and broader district schools is quite obvious, for there is no state that has not had uneasy moments in contemplation of the backwardness of some of their most backward school districts. As cheaply as some of them are conducted, most of the smaller schools are expensive affairs, especially when we get around to weighing the cost of education we do not give our children.

The office of education, Department of Interior, recently revealed in startling totals what some of these smaller schools have become. In 7,000 of the 143,000 one-room schools studied by the office of education, for example, the average attendance was five or fewer pupils and 250 schools were found which had only one pupil each. Later news that escaped the federal school authorities, possibly, showed that a rural school near Chester, Ill., described as a high school, was being opened every school morning with no pupil answering the roll call. The teacher in this school was going through the formalities of opening and closing the school at regular hours each day in order to maintain her insurance. While several pupils registered last September, the children gradually withdrew from the school (largely because of removals from the district), until none was left and the waste became total.

Hoosiers Are Sceptical of Making Desert Bloom

Isaiah said, "The desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." Longfellow spoke of great men's sublime lives leaving footprints on the sands of time. Others pushed irrigation projects along the Nile and did what they could to make useful the sandy wastes of the Sahara.

Sand possibilities have been brought nearer home by experiments at Rutgers university, where agricultural experts say their efforts to grow roses, sweet peas and other flowers in ordinary sand have met with unqualified success, cites the Indianapolis News.

Professor Charles H. Connors, head of the ornamental horticultural department at Rutgers, says that seashore gardeners, by applying chemical nutrients to the sand, may be able to grow flowers to the very edge of the ocean. They regard sand as almost completely under control of the grower, providing it has been enriched with the proper ingredients, and say that roses grown in sand produce a better root system than those in ordinary soil.

Carnations also are said to flourish better in sand. Nature lovers have cultivated an affection for the dunes because it is sand, and nothing else. They journey to see the dunes of northern Indiana as a variable thing in space, shifting with the winds, never the same from day to day.

The charm of a beach comes from the play of sunlight on the sand, its soft and yielding texture underfoot and the dazzling whiteness of the vista that is exactly as nature created it.

Growing flowers along the Indiana shore or attempting such reclamation in the Indiana dune region is not painting the lily.

Tanning Is No Indication of Health, Expert Asserts

"I cannot emphasize the fact too strongly that tanning is in no sense an indication of health. It merely announces to those who know, that the person who is tanned has been exposed to strong sunlight, and that his protective mechanism has operated to the fullest extent."

Having uttered these debunking words, John Seaverns, of Boston, a spokesman for the American Chemical Society, proceeds with some timely remarks about the disadvantages and perils of sunburn, which is the penalty reckless people pay for not being able to tan.

"In spite of all that has appeared in the public print, and all of the broadcasts that have been given, there will be thousands of adults and children exposed unnecessarily and unwisely to the summer sun this year," Mr. Seaverns said, adding this emphatic statement:

"It is little short of a crime for anybody to send a light-haired child out into the sunlight to play, practically nude."

That unquestionably is high heresy; but we have a pretty definite notion that it is sound sense, by which the wise and pitiful will profit. And just why the Boston chemist speaks as he does, he explains when he says:

"It takes from two to six days before the effect of deep sunburn heals, and during this time that portion of the skin that has been burned does not function. Further, if the burn is deep enough, permanent injury to the skin may result which may impair the health of the victim for the rest of his life.

"Taken altogether, the sunburn is a much more serious thing than most people believe and should be looked upon as a source of great possible danger in place of being something to joke about."

So if you and your children are blonds who do not tan quickly but do burn easily, be wise and acknowledge that the ultra violet ray is an enemy bound to come out best in any rash encounter. If you must have sun baths, make them short and guarded until you have succeeded in establishing some sort of immunity. You may even live longer in case you do.

New Window Glass Bars Heat Rays From Room

Window glass has been developed which takes the heat out of sunlight but permits the light to pass. The heat-absorbing glass contains iron, and objects viewed through it have a greenish-blue color because some of the red rays of sunlight have been removed. Small amounts of iron in glass absorb ultra-violet and infra-red, the heat rays of sunlight. The visible part of sunlight contains only one-third of the heat in the sun's rays and the new glass cuts out the invisible rays but permits most of the visible rays to pass. While the heated glass might be expected to raise the temperature of a room as a whole, the effect on a person in the direct sunlight is much less than for ordinary glass. The glass is particularly suited to offices and factories.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Care of Furs

Air conditioning is an essential to a great many manufacturing processes but in few of them is it more important than in the fur industry.

Fur is most sensitive to humidity changes. If the humidity of the air is too high, the hair cannot absorb the dyes. When the air is heated and the humidity is low, the hair is likely to assume a permanent curl, ruining the appearance of the fur.

Refrigeration of storage vaults to prevent moths and fading has been used for many years. Over $200,000,000 worth of furs are stored each year in air conditioned vaults.

WHEN LIVES ARE AT STAKE

You need the same protection that race drivers demand

KELLY PETILLO ON MAY 30, WON the 500-Mile Indianapolis Race on Firestone Tires, breaking the track record and driving the entire distance at a rate of 106.24 miles per hour.

This record is an outstanding demonstration of tire efficiency. To go 500 miles in less than five hours on this rough and bumpy 26-year-old brick track, without tire trouble of any kind, demonstrates the strength and blowout protection that Firestone builds into their Gum-Dipped Tires.

AB JENKINS ALSO RECENTLY demonstrated the stamina, efficiency, and blowout protection built into Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. He drove his 5000 pound car over the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, 3000 miles in 23½ hours. This was an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, and although temperatures were as high as 120°, he had no blowouts or tire trouble of any kind.

These records are made possible by special construction features built into Firestone Tires.

Take no chances—protect your life and the lives of others by letting us equip your car with Firestone Tires and give you the Safety and Blowout Protection that race drivers demand.

Before you buy new tires ask yourself these three questions

1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

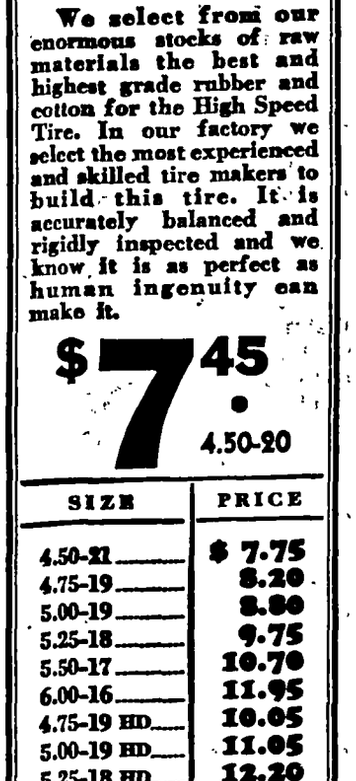
2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER No. 1—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of all popular makes of tires.

ANSWER No. 2—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

ANSWER No. 3—Thousands of car owners report unequaled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.



1 University tests show Firestone Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.
2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.
3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

MAKE PICNICS SIMPLE

Fourth of July is nearly here and holidays during summer months usually mean picnics.

Plenty of salad, hamburger cakes and buns, potato chips and seasonal fruit with coffee, is a picnic menu recommended by Miss Ida M. Schilling, assistant professor of foods and nutrition at Iowa State College.

"Take simple foods which do not need much preparation," Miss Schilling advises, " or else it won't be a picnic."

Her favorite picnic salad consists of tomatoes sliced on lettuce, with cucumbers or chopped pickles and French dressing which has been seasoned slightly with garlic. Wash and peel the tomatoes before leaving for the picnic and combine the salad just before it is eaten. A fruit salad may be made on the picnic grounds from diced mixed fruit which has been carried in a Mason jar.

When steaks are expensive, hamburger shaped into cakes before leaving and broiled in a skillet over the fire are tasty and filling on the picnic menu. Fried potatoes are also good occasionally.

Picnic coffee is good made in the following way. Mix the coffee grounds with a little egg white just enough to thoroughly moisten them, and place in a cheesecloth bag, tying the end and leaving plenty of room for the coffee to swish about. It may be carried in the coffee pot and boiled over the fire, starting with cold water. There is no need to strain coffee when it is made this way.

STATEMENT REGARDING AAA AMENDMENTS IS MADE BY SECRETARY WALLACE

Secretary Wallace's recent statement regarding the Agricultural Adjustment Act Amendments received by County Agent Oberhauser follows:

"In cooperation with leaders of Congress, amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act are being perfected which are intended to bring the Act's provisions as to marketing agreements and licenses into line with the Schechter case decision and also to safeguard the farmers' voluntary adjustment program on basic commodities.

"These volutary adjustment programs were not in the path of the Schechter case decision, and in no event could there be any question of the government's ability to fulfill its contracts with farmers.

"Nevertheless, we have taken advantage of the decision to seek perfections in the law which will make certain the Government's authority to continue processing tax rates in accordance with amended provisions of the Act."

There Goes A Man!

The world is poorer because of the passing of 'Lawrence of Arabia'. An impertinent observer once asked a farmer in a stony section of Ontario, "What do you grow here, rocks?" With a steady keen look which brooked no trifling the man of the soil replied, "And MEN!" What a man was Lawrence! Physically small but physically strong. Courageous yet not cruel. Adventurous yet not foolhardy. Cultured but not haughty. Exceptionally capable in many fields yet not proud. Famous and still modest. A man who dared much for civilization and who had the wit and stamina to carry out the designs which he had drawn on the tressleboard of life. A bachelor and yet a lover of children—sacrificing his life rather than endanger one. "How are the mighty fallen!"

Thought-Out Menus Make Bully Breakfasts

"THAT'S something!" he says, beholding a beautifully poached egg, nicely balanced on crisp buttered toast—rosy with a sprinkling of paprika and gay with a sprig of parsley for spring. He has just finished a hot cereal, delicately blended, and consisting of hominy, oatmeal and bran.

It was a bright idea—inexpensive, quick to prepare—just a matter of a bit of thought the day before. Funny, what thinking will do for menus!

Orange Juice
Mixed Cereal
Poached Eggs on Toast
Crisp Bacon
Coffee

Mixed Cereal: Put two cups of boiling water and one-half teaspoon salt in the top part of a double boiler and bring to boiling. When it is bubbling briskly add one-half cup of chopped canned hominy, two-thirds cup of oatmeal and two tablespoons of bran. Cook directly over the fire for about five minutes, then place over hot water and continue cooking for half an hour. Serve with cream. This serves four persons.

Perhaps it was the coffee that did the trick. It was vacuum-packed coffee and thus the flavor was fresh and enticing. Another cup, if you please!"

Vacation Bible School To Close At Reformed Church

REFORMED BIBLE SCHOOL TO CLOSE WITH PICNIC FRIDAY

The Bible School of the Klemme Reformed Church will close a five week Bible School term with a picnic and program Friday. The program will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning. "The Story of Jesus" is the theme of the program and will be given in story and song.

The graduates are: Edith Baehman, Irene Suckow, Roy Baack, Raymond Swalve, Harold Albers, Elmer Meinders, Harold Wicks and Ruben Grosshuesch.

Miss Ethel Baack taught the Primary department assisted by Wilma Swalve and Arlene Krause. Miss Mabel Schuldt had charge of the Junior department with Avis Barz and Doris Barz as helpers. Miss Norma Stromer assisted by Paul Schuldt and Gladys Griffen was in charge of the Intermediate department.

Rev. Grosshuesch, with Harold Christians, Stella Barz and Mar Barz, as leaders, had charge of the Senior department. Miss Mildred Thieman assisted by Elaine Buntenbach were in charge of the Music Department. The school had an enrollment of 116, and over half of the pupils have a perfect attendance record for the five week period.

Dinner will be served on the Church grounds after the program. The afternoon will be spent in playing games.

Tomatoes Rosy For Spring

MERRY as a day in May is the rosy tomato, and ready to meet Spring cheerily. Use tomatoes plentifully in your fair-weather dishes, even though you know tomatoes are not merely fair-weather friends. They have stood the test. They stuck by you all through the winter, when you were looking for color, flavor and health in the foods you served. You're going to like these two new ways of serving tomatoes.

Cheerful Suggestions

Tomato and Cauliflower Puree: Cook one medium head of cauliflower until it is tender, and press through a sieve. Press the contents of one No. 2 can of tomatoes through a sieve also and add with the contents of one can of consommé and one cup of water to the cauliflower. Bring to boiling. Sauté one tablespoon of minced onion in two tablespoons of fat for a few minutes. Add three tablespoons of flour, stir until smooth, and thin with a little of the hot soup. Then add to the soup, and cook until creamy. Season to taste. This serves six persons.

Tomato Timbales: Bring two and one-half cups of canned tomatoes, one and one-fourth teaspoons salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper to the boiling point. Mash well but do not strain. Add three-fourths cup of bread crumbs and four slightly beaten eggs. Pour into buttered custard cups or ramekins and set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a slow oven, 350 degrees, for thirty to forty minutes or until set. Turn out of molds and serve surrounded with creamed peas. Makes eight individual servings.

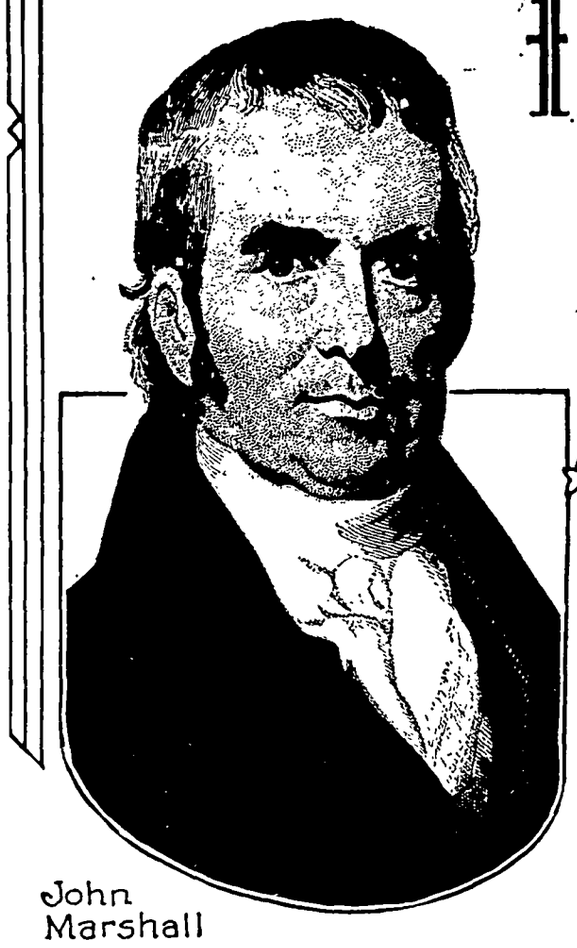
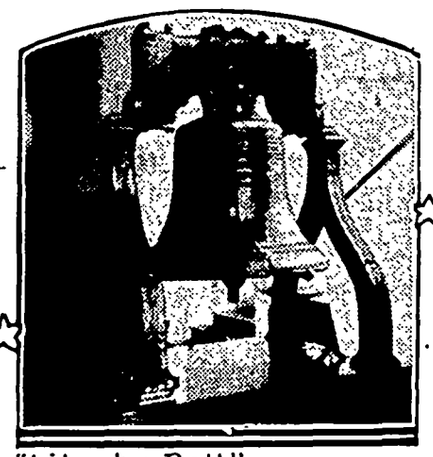
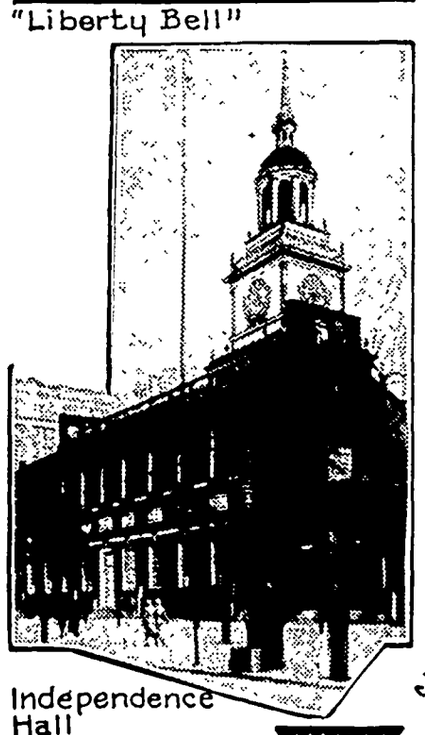
John Marshall and the Liberty Bell



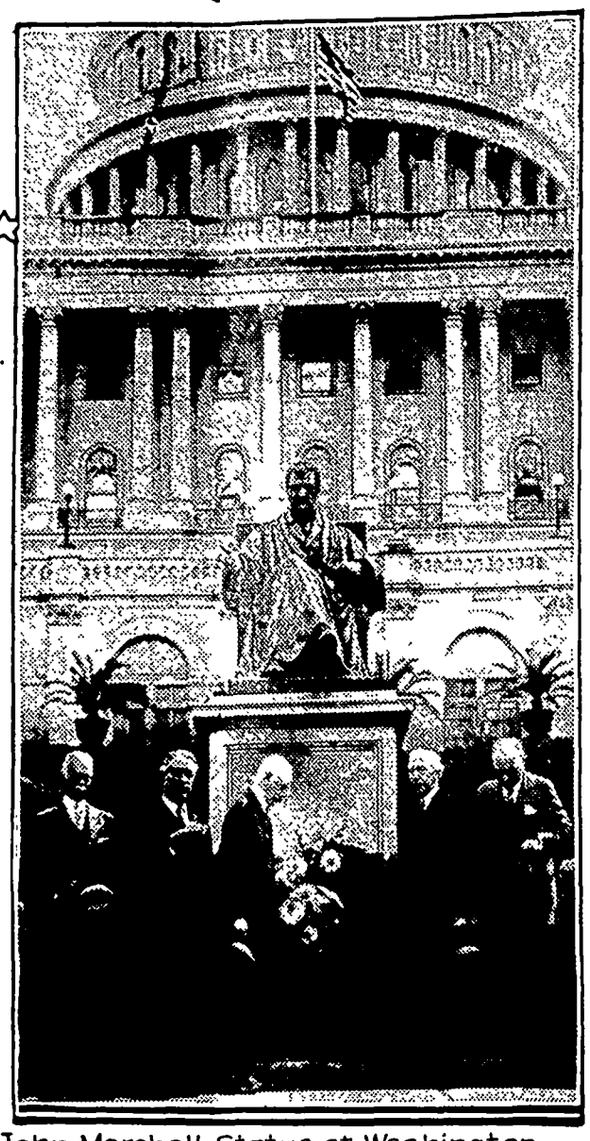
John Marshall



"Liberty Bell"



Independence Hall



John Marshall Statue at Washington

© UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

A Lesson in Patriotism

Chief among the patriotic shrines of America is Independence Hall in Philadelphia because of its intimate association with the beginnings of the nation. Here the Continental congress met, here Washington was made commander-in-chief of the Continenal army and here the Declaration of Independence was adopted. It is now maintained as a museum of Revolutionary relics and most venerated of them all is the bell which once "proclaimed liberty throughout all the land."

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON JULY 2, 1776, the members of the Continental congress, meeting in Philadelphia, voted in favor of a resolution, offered by Richard Henry Lee of Virginia, "that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states."

On July 4 the Declaration of Independence, rewritten from the Lee resolution by Thomas Jefferson, aided by Benjamin Franklin and John Adams, was formally adopted by the congress.

On July 8 the ringing of a bell summoned the citizens of Philadelphia to the state house yard to hear an important announcement read. When they had assembled, Col. John Nixon ascended to a crude platform, built in the yard by the Philosophical society in 1769 for astronomical observations and left standing there for occasional use as a public rostrum.

A moment later his voice boomed out the opening words of an immortal document—"When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation."

The bell which had summoned the people to hear this document had been known heretofore as the Province bell. Here, in brief, was its history up to that historic moment:

Cast by Thomas Lester (or Lister) of Whitechapel, London, upon order of the Pennsylania assembly, it arrived in Philadelphia in August, 1752. But, to the dismay of the provincial authorities, the bell proved defective and it had to be recast twice by two ingenious workmen, John Pass, and Charles Stow, Jr. In recasting the bell they substituted their own names for that of the original English maker and also changed the date on the bell from 1752 to 1753. But more important was the fact that the inscription, composed by Isaac Norris, chairman of the superintendents of the state house, was retained on it. It was from the Bible, Leviticus XXV, 10.—"Proclaim liberty throughout all the land to all the inhabitants thereof."

Prophetic of the role it was to play in the struggle for liberty were such occasions, when it was rung, as these:

It first sounded on the afternoon of August 27, 1753, to call the provincial assembly together and in that session the assembly resolved to make and continue the use of Province money contrary to the orders of the lords justices of the crown.

On February 3, 1757, it called the assembly together again when they directed "Mr. Franklin" to "go home to England" to ask for redress of colonial grievances.

On October 5, 1765, it was muffled and tolled when the ship Royal Charlotte, bearing the hated stamps for Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware came up the river under convoy of a royal British warship and it summoned the citizens to a town meeting where they resolved not to permit the stamps to be landed.

On September 27, 1770, it assembled the people in the state house yard and they there resolved that the claims of parliament to tax the colonies trespassed upon their constitutional rights, that the union of the colonies ought to be maintained and that anyone who imported English goods into Philadelphia, contrary to these resolutions, was an enemy to the peace and good order of the city.

On June 1, 1774, the bell was muffled and tolled again in sympathy with the people of Boston on the closing of their port by the crown authorities.

On April 25, 1775, after the news of the Battle of Lexington had been received, the bell called together "eight thousand people by computation" and they unanimously agreed "to associate for the purpose of defending with arms, their lives, liberty and property against all attempts to deprive them of them."

Thus in the clear notes of this famous old bell can be traced the successive steps leading up to that historic day, July 8, 1776, when the bell rang out once more—loudly, joyously—"proclaiming liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." Before this time it had been the Province bell. From that time on, forever, it was the Liberty Bell.

On September 11, 1777, Gen. George Washington and his 14,000 Continentals were defeated by General Howe and his 18,000 British at the Battle of Brandywine. In Washington's army was a young Virginian named John Marshall, the son of Col. Thomas Marshall, who before the Revolution opened had foreseen the coming of the struggle for liberty and had himself trained his sons in the use of arms.

The defeat at Brandywine threw Philadelphia in a panic. Howe was marching on the city. The Continental congress hastily adjourned to Lancaster. In order to save the Liberty Bell from capture by the British, it was taken down from the steeple of the state house and, under cover of darkness, taken to Allentown where it was secreted under the floor of Zion Reformed church. There it remained for nearly a year—until the British evacuated Philadelphia. On June 27, 1778, it was returned to that city and later was hung again in the tower of the state house.

In the meantime young John Marshall had fought in the Battle of Germantown and had gone with Washington to his winter quarters at Valley Forge. He went to Valley Forge a Virginian; he came out of it an American. On June 28, 1778, the day after the Liberty Bell was returned to Philadelphia, he had a part in the American victory at Monmouth and from that time on until the final victory came at Yorktown he served valorously in the Continental service.

Back in Philadelphia on October 24, 1781, the Liberty Bell was being rung to announce to the people that "Cornwallis is taken!"

On April 16, 1783, it rang out the news that the treaty of peace had been signed.

As for young John Marshall, he had gone back to his home in Virginia and started on the career which was to make him one of America's greatest. Granted a license to practice law, he took the steps in rapid succession which carried him to the top of his profession—election to the Virginia assembly, the executive council, the state legislature and the federal convention which met in 1788 to discuss the ratification of the Constitution.

"All these bodies knew the intelligent co-operation of young Mr. Marshall, whose convincing arguments, it is said, did much to overthrow all obstacles to the adoption of the Constitution. In relation to the much contested Jay Treaty, too, John Marshall's arguments indicated his strong belief in the necessity for building up a central government.

"And so he climbed and climbed in position and influence. He, with Elbridge Gerry and Charles Pinckney, was a special envoy to France, leaving a tactful impression upon a troubled scene. Then he was elected to congress, where he led the forces of the administration and took a leading part in the debates. In 1800 he became President Jefferson's secretary of state, and but one year later was appointed first chief justice of the United States, which exalted office he held for more than 30 years. In the Supreme court were exercised those qualities which enabled him to leave a lofty and a lasting mark upon American forms and modes of government: his breadth of understanding, his tolerance and moderation, his truly original viewpoint, his stanch defense of the Federal Constitution at a time when the powers of that document were but ill-defined."

Meanwhile the Liberty Bell had continued to mark with its deep tones important periods in American history.

On December 18, 1799, it was muffled and tolled in mourning for the death of the great Washington.

On February 19, 1801, it rang to announce the election of Thomas Jefferson as President of the United States.

On September 29, 1824, it rang to welcome Lafayette to the Hall of Independence.

On July 4, 1826, it ushered in the year of the jubilee—the fiftieth anniversary of American independence. On that day John Adams and Thomas Jefferson died. But it was not until July 26 that "the bell which had proclaimed Jefferson's immortal masterpiece and had hailed his advent to the Presidency of the republic, whose birth it had signalized, now sounded his death knell."

On February 22, 1832, the centenary of Washington's birth, the bell was rung for the last time in honor of the Father of His Country. During that year it also tolled for the death of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, the last survivor of the signers of the Declaration.

On July 21, 1834, it was tolled for the death of Lafayette.

"The Revolutionary mission of the bell here reaches its completion. Of the great actors in the drama, few survived. The author of the Declaration was dead; the leader of its armies was dead, and he who wrote the resolutions of our independence was dead, the colossus of its debates, its diplomatist and its financier, were dead; its orator was dead—Jefferson, Washington, Lee, Adams, Franklin, Morris and Henry were dead—and of all that immortal list of names, not one remained . . . of the greater actors of that struggle, one, John Marshall of Virginia, survived; he sat in judgment on the finished work and gave the measure of its strength and power for the people."

* * * * * * * * *

The year is 1835—just 100 years ago.

On July 6 John Marshall, chief justice of the United States, breathed his last in Philadelphia.

On July 8, the precise anniversary of the day that the bell had proclaimed liberty "to the citizens of Philadelphia, a solemn cortege passed through the streets of that city. They were taking John Marshall back to his final resting place among the Virginia hills."

Slowly tolling during these rites, the Liberty Bell cracked.

Perhaps there is more than mere coincidence in that fact!

HORSES ONCE PIGMIES

As the fossil remains of elephants show that in their earliest forms they stood no higher than 3 feet, so the horse was a pigmy in its earliest manifestation, no more than 1 foot high. Its development into the racehorse is a story which has provided endless puzzles. Its remote ancestors were as unlike a horse as anything which could be imagined. In 1856 Professor Owen discovered a little animal, now named hyracotherium, with an arched back, short neck, long tail, and four toes on the front feet and three on the hind, with vestiges of others, and quite different teeth from those of the present horse. It belonged to the earliest Eocene period, when there were neither carnivores, as we know them, nor herbivores, like the cow or elephant.

...ington.—President Roosevelt ...to be facing a considerable amount of trouble as ...le for his plans move for...evelt ward for administration of the $5,000,000,000 works-relief fund. The difficulties confronting the President are manifold, each likely to prove embarrassing. At this writing it is impossible to forecast what the end will be, but the circumstances of the situation that has been brewing some weeks past warrant a recital of the facts.

It will be remembered that during the long drawn out congressional fight preceding passage of the $5,000,000,000 appropriation there were numerous public accusations and many more mumblings underneath that the fund would be used by the administration to some extent at least for political purposes. Close observers thought at that time that the accusations were simply representative of a boiling political pot. It was felt also that opponents of the administration were fomenting discontent in certain sections in his ranks in order to establish a record for later political campaigning.

There is, however, a different aspect apparent now. The patronage question has flared up. It is coupled with complaints in many states against federal encroachment upon states' rights. So, it would seem to appear that Mr. Roosevelt is confronted with a determined element in his party battling against his policies in some states much because he is a New Dealer as much as because they believe federal authority has been extended to a new high level and this breeds a fear of future coordination and subjugation of state authorities. The recent meeting of the governors' conference at Biloxi, Miss., constitutes ample proof, if further evidence be needed, of the uprising that is on in the states against encroachment on state affairs by the Washington administration. History records numerous instances where heretofore the Washington government has been forced to extend the scope of its activities in one way or another, usually in times of matters. In every instance the move has been met by a solid front of state officials and state executives who have promptly put the federal government back in its constitutional place. As far as research discloses, however, the Biloxi governors' conference is the first instance in which the chief executives of states have come out so openly with their declarations that the federal government has gone too far. The Biloxi pronouncements take on added significance as well through the fact that governors who were the most critical of President Roosevelt in that meeting were governors of traditionally Democratic states.

Another phase of the difficulties encountered by Mr. Roosevelt links possibly more directly with the politics in the situation than does that which I have just discussed. While the states' rights question and the potentialities of further subordination of state authorities to the will of the federal government lies in directly with the President's expressed desire for constitutional revision, the second factor involves possibilities of important political defections in the ranks of the Democratic party.

In short, the governors' conference was a clue. State officials must maintain their own political organizations. Unless they do so they sink quickly into oblivion. During the last fifteen years the office of governor in a good many states has been looked upon as a stepping stone to the senate or to the presidency. Consequently, unless a governor who has political ambitions holds his own lines fast his political days are gone. Since the federal government has so much money to spend in each one of the states it becomes obvious that the governors look with longing eyes at the cash. If they control the expenditure they wield an enormous power. The trouble is that Mr. Roosevelt's policies the governors in most states are not being given a voice in this expenditure.

Harry Williams, assistant emergency relief administrator here, let the cat out of the bag in his speech before the governors at Biloxi. Few plainer words could have been chosen than those used by Mr. Williams in imparting to the governors' conference the information that Relief Administrator Hopkins and Works Administrator Ickes were going to pick their own men in most, if not all, states. Naturally, the governors began to wonder what was left for them. When they discovered they were holding an empty bag, containing no checks which they could sign, their wrath knew no bounds.

And there are further complications in the works relief spending program.

Other Difficulties

It will be recalled that a good many senators and representatives did not conceal their antagonism for Secretary Ickes while the $5,000,000,000 bill was before them. Indeed, some of them laid down an irrevocable position demanding that Mr. Ickes, public works administrator under the old order, should have nothing to do with the new fund, whereupon the President soothed their ruffled feelings by saying that he himself would direct the spending, and his promises are regarded as having saved the day.

When the new set-up was announced, however, Mr. Ickes was found to be a part of it. It is true that theoretically his position is of less consequence than that of Relief Administrator Hopkins and that he is also subordinate in a way to Frank C. Walker, who was brought in as a new co-ordinating element. As the program develops Mr. Hopkins appears more and more to be the big shot. His influence predominates. It must be added, however, that his policies and those enumerated by Mr. Ickes are not in accord.

The divergence of views between Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Ickes was shown in illuminating fashion the other day when these two officials held press conferences on the same day.

Mr. Ickes, who believes the administration never has made a real try at "pump priming" by use of its public works program, argued the impossibility of conducting real public works on any substantial scale under the present Roosevelt program of spending. Mr. Hopkins, on the other hand, discoursed at length on his favorite theme, the necessity of planning projects from the standpoint of potentials in providing employment. The Hopkins policy takes no account of the question of permanence of the projects. It contemplates only the factors involved in getting immediate work. Mr. Ickes takes the position that recovery cannot be gained unless public works projects serve not only to give jobs but to induce other lines of businesses to commence operation. Mr. Hopkins points to previous experiences in the present administration with these attempts at priming the pump and causing related jobs to prosper, while Mr. Ickes inferentially, at least, holds that it is better to continue trying to prime the pump than to give up the job or use the money in the Hopkins fashion. While this little difference of opinion between the two high ranking officials may not seem important, the consensus is that it has had the effect of slowing up the work of spending the vast sum of money. Most folks believe it will take much longer than a year in which to spend the $5,000,000,000 anyway so that any additional delay puts further back the ultimate consummation of the works relief program.

There is another element of this situation deserving of consideration. It is Mr. Hopkins who is picking the President's representatives in the various states where the federal government has taken over the management of relief expenditures. Mr. Hopkins is not a politician, has never had experience in that field and gives every appearance of being wholly unconcerned about political advices. The result naturally is that Mr. Roosevelt is being "placed on the spot" in a number of instances through Mr. Hopkins' appointments.

Political observers are watching these developments closely because they see in them the germs of bitter political enmity that may not serve Mr. Roosevelt so well in the next election.

The sleepy Republicans show signs of arousing. The administration has been trying to ignore the Springfield conference of "Grass Roots" Republicans and has succeeded except for Spokesman Farley. Mr. Farley, as head of the Democratic national committee and postmaster general and political patronage dispenser, had to shoot back in his characteristic fashion. Other than his outburst, silent treatment has been the medicine prescribed respecting the Republican uprising.

Republicans Awaking

If Mr. Roosevelt kept his radio turned on while the Springfield meeting of Republicans was in session, he must have harkened back to a similar circumstance involving his predecessor, Herbert Hoover. Political writers in Washington and a good many of the franker politicians could not resist drawing a parallel on the Springfield meeting and the strafing which the Democrats gave Mr. Hoover. Of course, every one knew then that Mr. Hoover was too thin-skinned politically to stand up under such machine gun fire. Few of us expected that Mr. Roosevelt had the same characteristic because he had been under political gun fire much more than Mr. Hoover. Notwithstanding White House silence on the Springfield meeting, however, the word leaks out that the President has been much irked, if not disgusted, by the attack on fundamentals of the New Deal. It will be remembered that for the first time the Republican opposition singled out what the opponents believe to be eighteen vulnerable spots in the New Deal program.

Here in Washington observers are watching closely to discover how the President intends to offset the Republican criticism. If and when he fights back, it is believed his general tactical plan for 1936 will be disclosed. Republicans also are watching. There are to be more of these so-called "Grass Roots" conferences and if by any chance the President tips his hand before these other meetings are held, insiders among the Republicans insist they are prepared to take full advantage of the disclosures.

"DUFFERENCE"

By EDYTHE S. DRAPER

©. D. J. Walsh—WNU Service.

GAY. How gay. The woman stopped her slow pacing of the pebbly seashore. Her eyes had been on the ocean. Now they were on the gay house, small, quite alone by the sea in the yellow sand.

Blue-gray stones piled in two pyramids in the two green rectangles of lawn were entwined by a thousand oranges and yellow and flame-bright nasturtiums. Geraniums, deep-crimson, scarlet, salmon and rose-pink, stood straight and stiff and splendid in pots along the stone embrasures of the porch.

The house was painted an incredible exquisite pink. Shells, pink and white, set one against the other, outlined the gravel path from the pink gate in the pink fence to the pink house. And the ocean was blue the woman knew though she did not turn her eyes from the house. And the sky was blue. Gay, gay, sky and sea and flower and house. The woman felt a little gay lightness in her. She felt able to venture.

"I will have this house," the woman murmured. "I will go in now and take it. The doctors, they are wrong. Six months? No. Forever, in this house."

She opened the gate. It was low. She could almost have stepped over it. It was a toy fence, a toy house, toy flowers, all for a good child. She was it, that good child. She would, with much, much money, make the people know that.

"I will have this house," she said again firmly.

Who could be living here?

Far from hoarding-house and hotel and palace-cottage?

In such rash gayety? Did they not know that the gods are jealous of the very happy? People very young and brave, belike, these were loving color and breeze, and each other.

She had used to come to this piece of sand. Yes, away up here. With Angus. Angus.

When in years now had she thought of Angus? Angus the sailor? He was dead perhaps in some far city, low in some still green sea. But, no. Too stubborn Angus to die. Old stubborn Angus. Old Scotch, stubborn Angus. "You can't talk English," she had scoffed, "Dufference! Can't you say difference?" "Hey!" he had roared. "I don't see any dufference between dufference and dufference!" "Very well, then, Mr. Angus! Good-by."

She had laughed and gone.

She knocked.

Anybody in the house wanting to analyze the sound of those white knuckles on the tiny door would have said it was the knocking of some woman getting in always where she wanted to get in, having always what she wanted when she got in, but yet not often glad.

Perhaps one in this house was discussing with himself this knock, coming perhaps to some conclusion about it. For the door remained closed. The woman stood before it and a flush came up into her cheeks, making them young.

She knocked again hard. The door remained closed. A third time she knocked and tears were in her eyes as she turned away.

Then the door opened.

A man robust and vital and compelling stood smiling at the woman. He wore a velveteen coat. He had a white beard. A pink rose half-blown was in his buttonhole. He had a cork leg. He was no one she had ever seen, the woman said to herself. His eyes were very blue, his cheeks pink. Gay and content seemed he.

"Good morning! Come in! He stood aside a little and the woman entered the pink toy house.

Sunshine filled the house coming in through many windows.

The sunshine had a gay rainbow sheen because it came in by so many green leaves and flowers in the house. It glinted on a clear large round bowl of goldfish. It sparkled up the feathers of greenish birds flittering among orange trees and ferns and oleanders.

The inside walls of the house, the walls where no windows could be were like a museum. Placques were on them from China, kakemono from Japan, fat gods from India and a lovely Taj Mahal; ivory and ruby-incrusted scimitars from Turkey, monkeys and parrots, stuffed, lifelike, grotesque, from Africa, small, unglazed, richly earth-colored pottery from Central America, silk fans from Malaysia. On small mirroring mahogany tables bits of porcelain and coral and intricate inlaid fragrant boxes holding treasure. The woman's eyes sparkled, her cheeks were deeply flushed. She felt young, not ill.

"I will take your house," she said breathlessly.

The man's eyes sparkled, too. The lips under his very white beard twitched.

"The little house? But, please, it is the lunch hour. If you will sit for a moment."

"Oh—I do not eat."

"But I do! I am agreeable after lunch. I may give my house away, after lunch."

He opened a door and went out.

She sank down against golden embroidered cushions in a long low chair of bamboo.

The ferns waved their lacy fronds in the wind from the sea.

The oranges and oleanders breathed forth fragrance. The goldfish swam delicately appreciative of their own scintillant beauty in the reflecting translucent depths of their coral-cavered lagoon.

The birds preening their emerald and yellow feathers on perches among the ferns in the sun twittered out little upward-sliding chirpings.

The woman's eyes were taken from this to that.

They had no chance to turn inward, to peer into her own sore soul.

A splendid house the woman had in the far city, a darkly splendid house with many grand rooms. In that house one's thoughts were pressed into oneself.

"Oh, ye'll tak' the high road an' I'll tak' the low road."

The man's barytone came into the room where the woman sat.

She held her head quickly up for an instant and smiled.

Then she lay back long and slender and pale, resting from deep weariness against the golden brocaded cushions. Her hands lay open and empty on the chair arms.

She smiled, but two tears ran down and met the points of the smile.

"Old stubborn Angus sang that," she whispered.

Then not caring to be thinking she turned to watch the birds.

In this house one would be always interested. And when she wanted open space, sky, sea, blue-lavender distances—there they were beyond the open windows merely for the lifting up of one's eyelids.

Space outside seemed more beautiful for the things inside and the things inside were comforting when space without was too empty and wideness appalled.

An old, old Chinaman wrinkled like a long-folded saffron silk handkerchief brought lunch in on a small ebony table, lacquered, with golden dragons, tea unforgettable in yellow cups of egg-shell thinness, jelly with the shaven polls of innumerable Nipponese babies, orange marmalade, hot crisp biscuits, but, first, clam-chowder.

The tasting nerves are the organ of memory.

At the first whiff from under the silver dish-cover the women's eyes widened and darkened. At the first taste accustomedness and happiness sat in the room of her mind, strange guests therein.

"Old stubborn Angus," she whispered low into her teacup. "You would have clam-chowder."

"Did you speak?"

"No. Oh, no."

And she ate her first food in four days, like a hungry child.

After a while the Chinaman came and took the table away.

The woman still in the low golden chair lifted beseeching eyes.

"You, you might rent the house?"

This the self-assured, commanding woman whom the great of the earth stumbled over each other to kneel to? This the woman whose name and face the people of three continents knew and worshipped?

The man stood with his white beard covering his lips, twitching. His eyes sought the sea dreaming in the afternoon sun. The blue of his eyes became bluer than the blue of sea and sky together.

"I'll not rent it. No."

"Oh."

"It is yours."

"Mine?"

"The years, Nora, have made in me no dufference."

"Oh! Old stubborn Angus!"

"To you, the years, have they made any dufference?"

"They have. They have." As if repeating a litany she reverently intoned, "There is no dufference between dufference and dufference."

"You will have the house, Nora?"

"With you?"

"With me or without me."

"With you, please, Angus."

Ramie, Substitute for Cotton, Linen, in West

Success in growing ramie or China grass as a partial substitute for cotton and linen and a probable aid to both in making better twines or fabrics is announced by Bela Chatt, who has been growing this plant experimentally near Los Angeles, says the Chicago Tribune. Mr. Chatt reports a probable yield of more than 1,500 pounds of ramie fiber an acre.

Ramie fiber has been produced in China thousands of years, but only by laborious hand processes not possible without very cheap labor.

Although ramies fibers are stronger than cotton or linen and have the other advantage of glistening almost like silk, they have two serious practical disadvantages. One is that they grow embedded in a layer of extremely sticky gum, every trace of which must be removed from each fiber before these can be used. The other is that individual fibers, even if from the same plant, may differ considerably in length, so that it is difficult to sort and spin them by machinery.

With the cheap Chinese labor, the fibers merely are picked out and degummed one by one and are sorted into lengths by hand. Many degumming machines have been suggested, but most of them require the crude fibers to be stripped off the plant stalks and carried to some kind of factory, during which trip the gum dries out and becomes still harder to remove.

Some Equivalents

Paroles and Ransom
Vincent Astor's Hotel
Mussolini Is So Blunt
The Brain Bath

Waley, the Weyerhaeuser kidnaper, caught after he sent his wife, like a true gangster coward, to change ransom bills for him, has this record:

Arthur Brisbane

He had been arrested six times, beginning at eighteen, and sentenced to terms in prison that would have kept him in prison for 75 years if parole boards had allowed it.

He was repeatedly released until at last, thoroughly trained in crime and convinced, probably, as he might well be, that American justice is a mere joke, he went to Tacoma and planned there the "snatch," as criminals call it, of the Weyerhaeuser child.

Highway patrolmen in the western states did admirable work co-operating with the "G-men." The western highway patrolmen are real policemen.

Mr. Vincent Astor of New York has bought in and will operate the St. Regis hotel on Fifth avenue, built originally with Astor money, now repurchased for $5,090,000.

An Astor running a hotel is nothing new. You need not be very, very old to remember the gray granite "Astor House," a block long, opposite the City Hall on lower Broadway, where they had roast beef such as you find nowhere now.

Before prosperous Americans learned to be really "aristocratic" with yachts, race horses and divorces, they thought owning a hotel and putting your name on it was almost aristocratic. The Astor House and the Brevoort House in New York, the Palmer House in Chicago, the Coates House in Kansas City, a thousand others prove it.

Mussolini annoys England; he talks so plainly—no diplomatic beating about the bush. Bluntly he says to old Britannia: "When you were building up your empire, killing off the Boers to grab South Africa, taking India from the pot-bellied rajahs, gathering in everything that was not tied down, you did not care tuppence what the world thought about you. Now it is my turn to gather in territory, maybe Ethiopia, and I care less than half of tuppence what you think about it. So mind your own business, please."

Important to the human race is news of the "brain bath," which, according to physicians gathered at a convention of the American and Canadian medical associations, literally "washes the brain," freeing it from the poison of diseases such as infantile paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sleeping sickness and some kinds of spinal meningitis.

A solution of salt and water is injected into the vein at the ankle. After it has gone through the circulation and washed out the brain, it is withdrawn with its collected poisons through a needle inserted in the lower end of the spine.

Newsdom, written for newspaper men, says it has questioned all editors and publishers that amount to anything, and finds them "overwhelmingly certain that radical movements are of no serious trend."

The discovery will comfort many, but it is well to be cautious. There is always a possibility of underestimating what looks like "radicalism of no importance."

China, because she cannot do otherwise, yields in full to Japan's demands. That is the news from Tientsin, and it happens because the 400,000,000 Chinese are not prepared for war, whereas the 60,000,000 Japanese are prepared.

"Yielding" probably will not save China from another heavy loss of territory. It is predicted that the young Chinese emperor, Japan's figurehead in Manchukuo, will be moved over and back to the old imperial palace, there to sit again as the Japanese imperial dummy.

All this it not our business, for it is happening in Asia. We have plenty to do here.

"What's in a name?" Some young Republicans want the old Republican party to change its name from "Republican party" to "Constitutional party." Long ago, when the New York Herald, since dead, reduced its price, the late Joseph Pulitzer wrote in a short editorial: "The trouble is not with your price, it is with your newspaper. Change that."

The trouble with the Republican party is not with its name.

A dangerous strike is called off in Toledo, workmen wisely deciding to deliberate before going ahead with a strike that might have thrown tens of thousands out of work.

The steel industry, also setting a good example, decided to continue the NRA wage scale, not reducing pay or increasing hours. The Supreme court's Constitution decision has done no harm there.

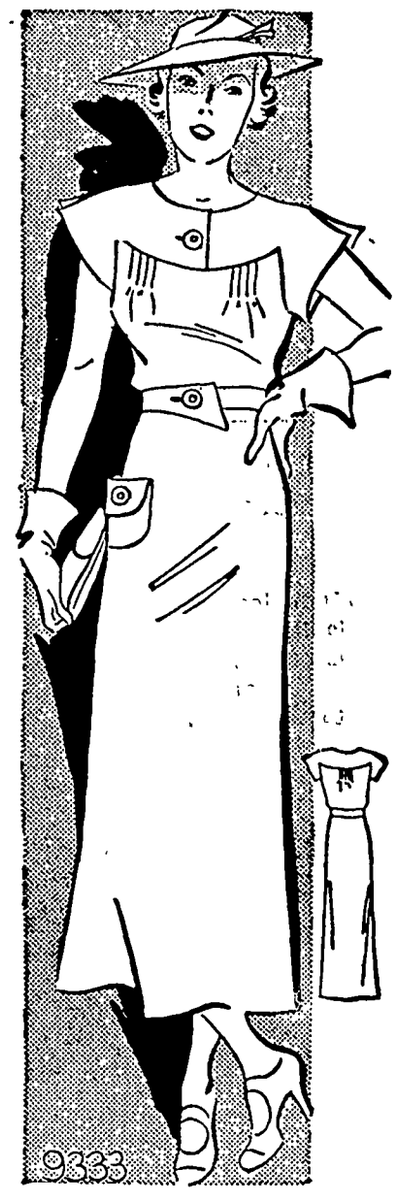
CHARMING LITTLE RUNABOUT FROCK

PATTERN 9333



The whole Fabric world echoes with the words "Shantung,"—"Linen"—"Pique." The whole Fashion world reflects "femininity" in its styling, even when the styling is decidedly Tailored! So take a cue, and combine the two! For the casual little runabout frocks you need so many of, Pattern 9333 is the Right Answer. Charming in its simplicity, the yoke becomes a slashed excuse for a sleeve and a note of femininity is reflected in the simple bodice by means of front and back tucks. The clever detail of belt and pocket subtly conforms with the yoke styling. Choose novel crystal, wood or cork buttons.

Pattern 9333 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3⅞ yards 36 inch fabric.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coin preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York.

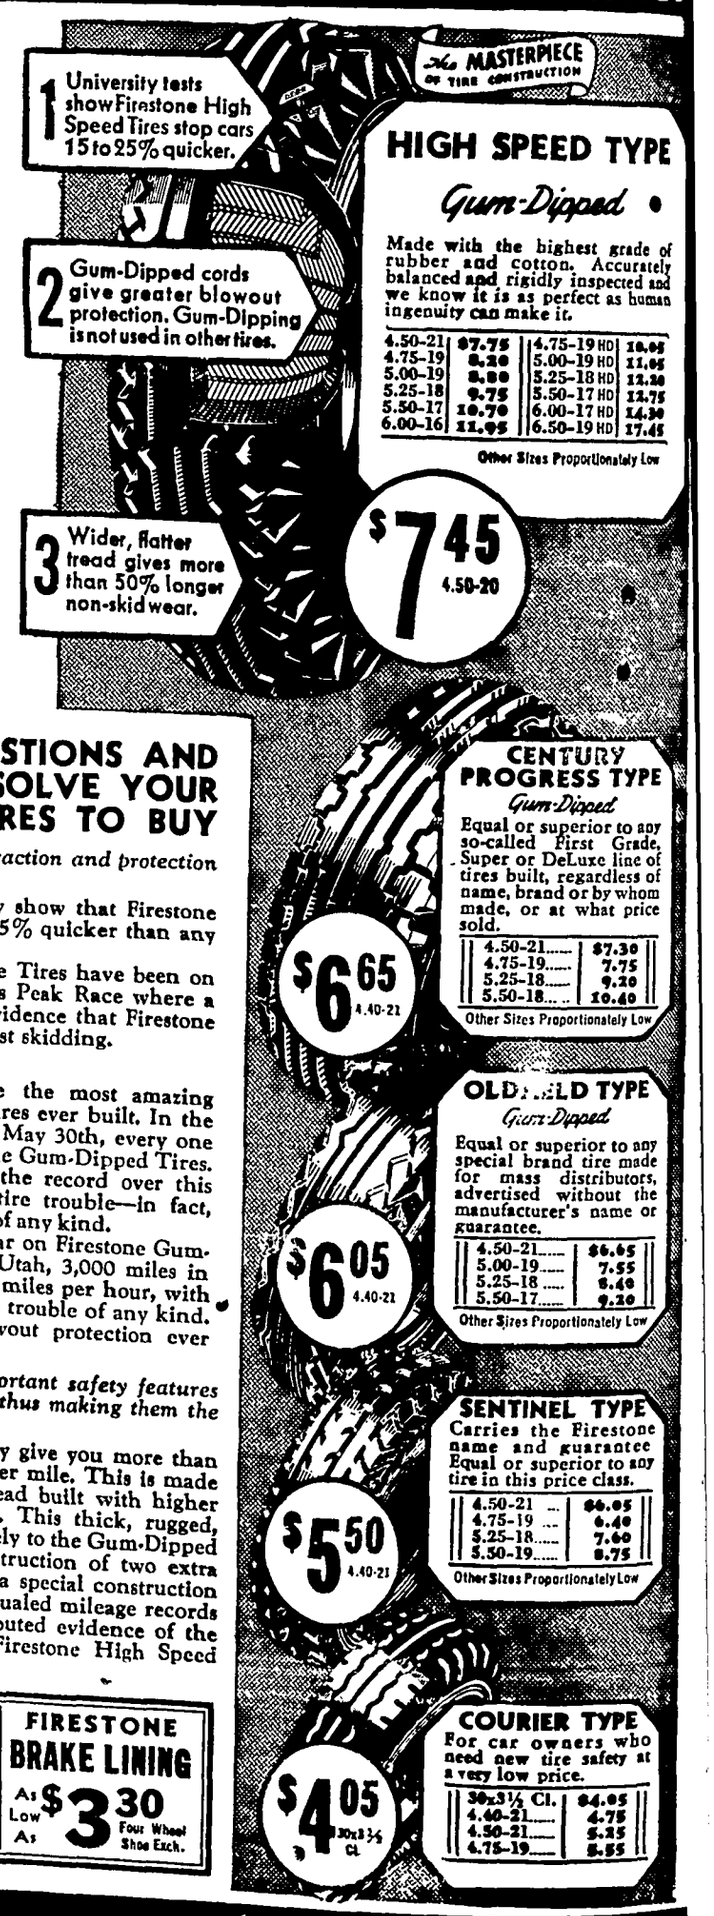
YOU ALWAYS GET BETTER QUALITY AT NO HIGHER PRICE WHEN YOU BUY A FIRESTONE TIRE WITH FIRESTONE NAME AND GUARANTEE

TIRES may look alike on the outside, but on the inside where blowouts start, they are different. Firestone Tires are made blowout-proof by Gum-Dipping, a patented extra process which soaks every cotton cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber. In fact, every 100 pounds of cotton cords absorb eight additional pounds of liquid rubber. This special process prevents internal friction and heat, the main cause of blowouts. No other make of tire is Gum-Dipped, yet you pay no more for Firestone blowout-proof protection than you are asked to pay for tires built without this patented safety construction feature.

The make of tires you buy for your car becomes a matter of vital importance when you realize that there were 882,000 automobile accidents in 1934 injuring 954,000 people and killing 36,000 and that 43,000 of these accidents were caused by blowouts, punctures and skidding.

Firestone High Speed Gum-Dipped Tires hold all world records on road and track for safety, speed, mileage and endurance. These records emphasize the undisputed evidence that Firestone Tires are not only blowout-proof but give greatest protection against skidding.



The MASTERPIECE OF TIRE CONSTRUCTION
1 University tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.
2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.
3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

THERE ARE THREE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THAT WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM OF WHAT TIRES TO BUY

1 "Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes.

For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death. This is undisputed evidence that Firestone gives car owners greatest protection against skidding.

2 "Are they blowout-proof?"

Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Kelly Petillo won the race and broke the record over this 26-year-old rough brick track without tire trouble—in fact, not one of the 33 drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles in 23½ hours, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind. These are most amazing proofs of blowout protection ever known.

3 "Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage; thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile. This is made possible by the tough, wear-resisting tread built with higher shoulders and a wider, flatter contour. This thick, rugged, scientifically designed tread is held securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body by Firestone's patented construction of two extra layers of cords under the tread. This is a special construction feature not used in any other tire. Unequaled mileage records by thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

Pianos

Two lovely used Pianos were sold and delivered during this month of June. A "Waltham" to Harry Ostendorf and a "Beckwith" to Gideon Wittenberg.

Some of the Little Folks in our homes have a marked talent for music. Let them take lessons during vacation.

In the School Room too, a good used Piano is just the thing. It "stands up" better than a reed organ and is more appropriate, too.

Used Pianos delivered to your School House in tune for $35, $45 and $55, according to kind and quality.

School directors will do well to make their selection of a piano at this time before the September rush for School Pianos begins.

Ideal Mother-and-Son Relationship

Vital Are Gift of Understanding and Sense of Humor.

DOROTHY DUNBAR BROMLEY, in the New York World-Telegram.

We Americans have a fatal propensity for picking a "typical" person to represent this or that class or occupation. I look forward with no little trepidation to the heralded visit to this city of a business man from Iowa who was chosen several years ago as "the average American man." But the "typical American mother," selected for Mother's day, deserves serious consideration. . . .

Mrs. Fletcher M. Johnson's white hair and six children alone did not distinguish her. Many women have them. But I liked her sweet expression and the lines of humor around her eyes and mouth. And I was impressed to read that she got a job as college dean when her husband died, in 1914, leaving her with half a dozen children on her hands. It's my guess that this fifty-nine-year-old mother has strength and courage, and I congratulate the Golden Rule Mother's Day committee on their good taste in their selection.

There are mothers and mothers. Some of them are swell, then again some of them are not so swell. Sidney Howard in his play "The Silver Cord" said the last word on the type of woman who monopolizes her son's affections. There's a word for this kind of affection, and it's not love.

I should hope that fewer of the generation of mothers will provide copy for the psychoanalysts as their children grow up. They know more about abnormal psychology than their parents did, and the new education has taught them to develop independence in their children. But the danger is still there. A woman in love, whether it is with a son or a husband, is not likely to be erned by reason.

Fashions in mothers have ch as rapidly as social modes kinds during the last hundred George Washington addresse mother, when writing her, as " Madam," and signed himself, affe and dutiful son." Youn today call their mothers by first names, and I think the mode is all to the good. Under ing grows out of intimacy.

For an ideal mother-son rel ship, intimate and yet not p sive, I give you the James bro William and Henry, and their er. With none of the formali Washington and other early l writers they addressed their m in humorous and sometimes erent style.

Henry, the novelist, uses caressing phrase, "Maman de ame"—mother of my soul. But next sentence he flippantly down. "blessings on your unli heads."

William's letters, too, show a plicit understanding. "These ters," says the future philosoph a letter to his mother, "have be good deal on my mind lately, am very glad to get this chan pouring them into yours." mother could ask for more?

The James parents were never to keep their sons by their side there were other continents to b plored. William had a difficult deciding on his career, and ma number of false starts. His m and father didn't reproach him; expected good things of him, they were patient with him.

It's a lucky child who h mother with a gift of understan and a sense of humor.

Odd Beauty Standard

WHOSE WORD WILL YOU TAKE FOR BLOWOUT PROTECTION?

Are you accepting the judgment of men who risk their lives on their tires and know from experience the tire that gives them the greatest blowout protection?

Thirty-three race drivers and their mechanics lined up for the dangerous, gruelling grind of the 500-Mile Race at the Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. Firestone Tires were purchased and used on every one of the thirty-three cars.

Kelly Petillo won the race at an average speed of 106 miles per hour. Wilbur Shaw was second, flashing across the finish line just behind the winner. Both drivers broke the track record without tire trouble. In fact, not one of the thirty-three drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Gum-Dipping is one of the outstanding reasons why Firestone Tires give such amazing performance. It is a patented extra process not used in any other make of tire.

When you realize that last year 43,000 accidents were caused by blowouts, punctures, and skidding, you will understand how important it is for you to protect your life and the lives of others by equipping your car with Firestone Gum-Dipped High Speed Tires—the safest tires built.

It will be worth your time to read these three questions and their answers:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of other popular makes of tires.

QUESTION 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

ANSWER—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Thousands of car owners report unequaled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

Volume—Direct Purchasing—Straight Line Manufacturing and Efficient and Economical System of Distributing to 500 Stores and to 30,000 Dealers, enables Firestone to give greater values at lowest prices

1 University tests show Firestone Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.
2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.
3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

ENGLISH SPEECH EASILY FIRST

Close to 200,000,000 Use That Language.

How many people speak English today? It is hard to answer with any precision, but an approximation is nevertheless possible. First, let us list those to whom English is their native tongue. They run to about 112,000,000 in the continental United States, to 42,000,000 in the United Kingdom, to 0,000,000 in Canada, 6,000,000 in Australia, 3,000,000 in Ireland, 2,000,000 in South Africa and probably 3,000,000 in the remaining British colonies and the possessions of the United States.

All these figures are very conservative, but they foot up 174,000,000. Now add the people who, though born to some other language, live in English speaking communities and speak English themselves in their daily business and whose children are being brought up to it—say 13,000,000 for the United States, 1,000,000 for Canada (where English is gradually ousting French), 1,000,000 for the United Kingdom and Ireland and 2,000,000 for the rest of the world—and you have a grand total of 191,000,000.

Obviously, no other language is the everyday tongue of so many people. Russian is spoken as first choice by no more than 80,000,000 of the 150,000,000 citizens of the U. S. S. R.; the rest cling to one or another of the hundred odd lesser dialects in which the Bolsheviki are forced to print their official literature. German follows with a grand total of 85,000,000. Whether French or Spanish comes next is in doubt, but neither can show more than 55,000,000. Italian is the runner-up, and the rest of the European languages are nowhere.

Nor is there any rival to English in Asia; for, though Chinese is ostensibly the native tongue of more than 300,000,000 people, it is split into so many mutually unintelligible dialects that it must be thought of less as a language than as a group of languages.

Thus English is far ahead of any competitor. Moreover, it promises to increase its lead hereafter, for no other language is spreading so fast or into such remote areas.—H. L. Mencken in Harper's Magazine.

Fish Livers, Backbones, Heads, Throats for Feast

Whitefish livers and gizzards, sturgeons' backbones, heads and throats of lake trout, and suckers' heads formed the "delicacies of Indian menus from time immemorial until such products of the deep became almost prohibitive for the Red Man's curtailed living."

All of these by-products of fresh water fish are thrown away by the white man, with the exception of whitefish livers, which bring a fancy price on the market. Fried in butter until a golden brown, they are delicious, having not the slightest suggestion of the fishy taste about them. They may also be baked.

The Indians ate everything of the trout head but the hard bone, most of it being gristle and fat. The cheeks, however, are a pinkish white meat, resembling chicken. Some white housewives in out-of-the-way places where strictly fresh trout heads are available use them to make the basis for a fish chowder, with satisfactory results.

When an Indian of other days wished to give his family a special treat, and he was lucky, he brought home a sturgeon. Their first meal thereafter was the long, rope-like gristle which forms the backbone, which he carefully pulled out and his wife jammed into a huge kettle and boiled until tender. The family then had a feast. With sturgeon almost extinct from the lakes, and the meat selling at a fancy price, Michigan Indians are having no such banquets today.—Detroit News.

Welsh Terrier English; He Is Least Quarrelsome

History suggests that the modern Welsh terrier and the Old English terrier, from whom the partly white Fox terrier was evolved, are the same animal. The arrival and rapid growth in popularity of the partly white Fox terrier meant that the original black-and-tan dogs, whose brown coats had so often resulted in their being mistaken for foxes, fell into disfavor, says a writer in Answers Magazine.

But the Welsh admirers of the old-colored English terrier refused to bow down to the upstart breed and decided to maintain their old favorites. So it may be said that the Old English terrier exists only in the form of the Welsh terrier.

Owing to the color of his coat, the Welsh terrier requires less attention than many other dogs; while it is also claimed that be is the least quarrelsome of all terriers.

Similar to a miniature Airedale in appearance, the Welshman is a companion-terrier, being a sportsman out of doors and a gay companion in the house.

And if his skull be broader and shorter than that of his more popular relative the Fox terrier, he at least possesses one claim to fame: no breed, when going to ground, works more quietly than he does.

The Word "Yankee"

The word "Yankee" has three meanings, notes a writer in the Detroit News. It was at first a nickname for a native or inhabitant of the New England states; then it was applied by residents of the South to residents of the northern states; thirdly, it was used by people of the rest of the world to describe any residents of this country. Perhaps the most commonly accepted derivation of the word is the American Indian corruption of "English" to "Yengees" and then "Yankees." A more plausible explanation is that it comes from the Dutch word "Janke," the diminutive of "Jan," applied as a derisive nickname by either Dutch or English in the New England states.

Standard Pronunciation

No modern dictionary seeks to "create" the pronunciation of any term. It merely records pronunciations already established by those who, in the opinion of the editors, are best qualified to act as standards of authority. Authoritative standards of speech are set by the common usage of educated careful men and women throughout the world who use English as their medium of expression. Usually the dictionary also notes variations in American standards from British standards.—Literary Digest.

"Hanging Together"

Benjamin Franklin said: "Yes, we must, indeed, all hang together, or most assuredly we shall all hang separately"; as a retort to John Hancock, who in his address to the Continental congress just previous to the signing of the Declaration of Independence, had said: "It is too late to pull different ways; the members of the Continental congress must hang together."

Portuguese January

Janeiro in Portuguese means January. The water around Rio de Janeiro (River of January) is so called because it was discovered in January and was thought to be the mouth of a river. The city is the most spectacularly laid out metropolis in the world. Nature did much and man added handsomely to the work.

Educating the Indians

The education of the American Indian by the white settlers began almost 300 years ago. As early as 1642, only 22 years after the landing of the Pilgrims, a number of Indians were students at Harvard. And in 1665, one named Caleb Cheeshahteaumuck was graduated with a bachelor's degree.—Collier's Weekly.

NEW AUTO PLATES WILL LOOK LIKE THOSE OF 1931

County Treasurer Roy McMillin s received the automobile license lates for Hancock County for 936. The shipment constituted 500 plates for cars and 600 sets of lates for trucks.

The 1936 plates have blue fig- res on an ivory background and e figures are the same height as e, present models. The name Iowa" and "1936" are below the igures, instead of above them as ey are this year.

Except for being slightly smaller n size, the plates are very much ke those of 1931 which had blue igures on an ivory background and e word "Iowa" and the numerals 1931" were also below the large igure.

So why not dig up the old plates nd get by.....maybe!

The remodeling plans under way will ractically revamp the entire in- erior arrangement.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR HARRY ANDERSON SUNDAY

Funeral services for Harry Anderson, 21, son of Verdio Anderson, of Goodell, were held at four o'clock Sunday afternoon in the U. B. Church at Goodell. The Rev. Harry Herlein, in his quiet and friendly way, spoke briefly on the words "It is appointed for Man once to die." The Rev. Doctor Hawley, who assisted in the service, called attention to the many beautiful flowers, and likened the passing of Harry Anderson to the gathering in of a beautiful flower.

A choir of 11 voices sang "Rock of Ages," "The City Four Square" and "When Peace like a River."

Interment was made on the family lot, beside his mother and one brother.

Pallbearers were Claytus Hanson, Peter Hanson, Kenneth Becker, Robert Lawhorn, George Knaup and Dale Brede. Six young ladies, school mates of his high school days, acted as escorts to the body. They were the Misses Henrietta Nelson, Winifred Hampel, Helen Becker, Marie Nonweiler, Charlotte Greiman and Lillian Hollatz.

Obituary

Harry Anderson was born July 17, 1914 on a farm in Twin Lake Twp., Hancock county, Iowa, the second of a family of four children born to his parents, Verdie Anderson and Lorraine, nee Sandry.

When Harry was a child of about four years his mother died and since that time he has made his home with his grandmother, Mrs. Andrew Anderson at Garner, Iowa. He attended the Garner public schools and was graduated with the class of 1932. Since then he has been a farmer working with his father and uncle, all successful men in this line of work.

Harry was an active young man of clean habits, tall, blond hair, blue eyes, a man with many, many friends.

Some years ago during an epidemic Harry had a severe attack of the flu which left him with a weak heart. It seemed that he was gradually outgrowing the trouble, until just recently he again became sick and after a few days illness, passed away on Thursday, June 27, 1935 at the home of his grandmother in Garner, at the age of 20 years, 11 months and 10 days.

He leaves of his immediate family: his father, Verdie Anderson; one brother, Clifford Anderson; one sister, Mary Anderson; his younger brothers and sisters, Harvey, Leonard, Loretta and Marion. His grandmother, Mrs. Andrew Anderson; 7 uncles and aunts, Elmer Anderson, Jennings Anderson, Mrs. John Rust, Frank Sandry, Harry Sandry, Wm. Sandry, Charlie Sandry.

REMODEL KLEMME CREAMERY TO HANDLE CREAM GRADING

New Addition Will House Secretary Office and Weighing-Testing Room

The Klemme Co-Operative creamery has a force of men at work tearing out sections of old walls and making way for a new addition being built on the east side toward the front. The new addition is 14 by 40 feet in size. This will provide for the additonal room required to comply with the new grading law which goes into effect July 5th The room will be partitioned off to provide a new office for the Secretary, Walter Lemke. The other part will be used for weighing, testing and grading the cream.

The new addition extends to the front of the present building and the front of the old building will be re-bricked to match the walls of the addition. This will give the appearance of a new building from the front. Light colored bricks are being used and brown colored bricks are used for trim.

REFORMED BIBLE SCHOOL CLOSED WITH PICNIC

Friday was a big day at the Reformed church for it marked the successful closing of the vacation Bible school

A program was given in the church in the forenoon by the members of the Bible school. A varied program of Bible stories, songs, duets and trios was enjoyed by the audience.

At noon the big annual picnic was served on the parsonage lawn and a large crowd was present. The afternoon was devoted to various sports.

In the evening the Young Peoples Bible Class held their annual party and a fine time was enjoyed by all.

PATROL PLANS WAR ON INTOXICATED DRIVERS

Ruling Also Given On Pasturing Cattle Along Highways

Iowa's new highway safety patrol will receive orders for rigid enforcement of laws dealing with driving while intoxicated, Mrs. Alex Miller, secretary of state, said Saturday.

The war on intoxicated drivers, however, will not represent a new policy of the state motor vehicle department, but merely a continuation of the strict enforcement of the law as carried on in the past by the former motor patrol.

Although the element of intoxication has entered into accidents in many states in an increased number during the last year, Iowa accidents have not shown the same increase from this cause. There is no question but that the use of the highway safety patrol, both from the standpoint of actual enforcement and the psychological effect, will be a great asset in removing drunken drivers from Iowa highways.

Illegal Pasturing

Meanwhile Harry Garrett, assistant attorney general, declared it his opinion that it is illegal to pasture cattle along the highways unless the animals are herded or tied.

If the cattle are herded or tied, so that passing motorists are protected, Garrett said he saw no reason why the animals could not legally feed along the highways.

Many Iowa farmers are pasturing their cattle along the highway part of each day, both because of the luxuriant feed thus made available and to save regular pasturage.

LLOYD ULRICH GOOD GUESSER; BIG SACK FLOUR IS REWARD

The big sack of Omar Flour which had been standing in W. L. Thada's store window for the past week or more was weighed Saturday night. Lloyd Ulrich guessed the closest to the correct weight and received the big sack of flour as his reward. His guess was 267 lbs. 8 ounces. The correct weight was 267 lbs. George Toft was next in line and received a 49 lb. sack of flour for his guess of 265 pounds. Mrs. A. H. Dulmes guessed 269 lbs. 4 ounces, which was good for the third award of a 24½ lb. ack of flour.

What this country needs very badly is a more perfect blend of gasoline and horsesense.

Hancock County Lakes And Parks Will Be Improved

C. C. C. CAMP AT GARNER IS APPROVED FOR 2-YEAR TERM

Preliminary Work May Be Done By First Of September

Garner has been approved as a location for a C. C. C. camp. This information was obtained from Dr. G. A. Bemis, and is authentic. The camp will be composed of 220 men and will remain for a two-year period.

Recommendation of Garner as a suitable location for the camp was made by the district office at Omaha, to Washington, D. C., and the approval of the Washington office is all that is necessary to make the location of the camp definite. As soon as the Washington office gives its approval, a representative will be sent to Garner to find a suitable location. According to Dr. Bemis, a five-acre tract will be required.

Men in the camp will be employed on projects at Clear Lake, Pilot Knob, Twin Lakes and other conservation activities as they develop. Permanent barracks in which to house the men will be erected.

There is much preliminary work and a great deal of time is required in locating a camp of this nature so our people should not expect building operations to begin for some time, probably not before September of this year. — Garner Leader.

FARMERS SHOULD APPLY FOR POISON BRAN AT ONCE

Hancock County farmers whose corn and small grain fields are suffering from armyworm infestation should make immediate application at the county agents office for the poison bran which is being distributed in this section by the state department of agriculture.

A few fields of corn and small grain are being attacked by the pests in this county and unless immediate steps are taken to control the worms very serious damage may result. Weather conditions have been ideal for the growth of armyworm this spring.

Poison bran should be spread on at the rate of about 10 pounds per acre and as thinly as possible. Small grain fields, though perhaps nearly destroyed should be treated in order to keep the worms from migrating into nearby cornfields.

NEARLY ONE HUNDRED AT THE ANNUAL MASONIC-STAR PICNIC

Annual Picnic Held At The Boy Scout Camp On Clear Lake

The Annual Masonic-Eastern Star picnic was held Sunday at the Boy Scout camp on the south shore of Clear Lake. About one hundred people were in attendance, representing Garner, Klemme and Hayfield.

The noon-day picnic dinner was served in the mess hall at the camp Various sports and entertainment was enjoyed by all and the several showers during the afternoon did not dampen the fun of the big get-to-gether

MRS. WILES PURCHASED THE TREES CAFE MONDAY

Mrs. Hulda Wiles Monday closed a deal whereby she became the owner of the Trees Cafe. For several months Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Trees have operated the Cafe. Mr. Trees is also the proprietor of the former Thomas Barber Shop.

Mrs. Wiles will be assisted in the Cafe by her nephew, Sam Howard, of Des Moines.

Cafe work is not new to Mrs. Wiles. She is experienced in the work. A few years ago Mr. and Mrs. Wiles operated a tourist camp and cafe at Ventura. Later, after Mr. Wiles' death, Mrs. Wiles came to Klemme and operated the White Lily Cafe.

Mrs. Wiles feels right at home in Klemme as the Wiles family lived here for a number of years while Mr. Wiles was in the automobile business.

Popularity Contest At Garner

Miss Alice Rokos, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Rokos, won the popularity contest at Garner. Miss Phyliss Elling, Miss Irene Lemke, Miss Eleanor Irving and Miss Adeline Greiman will serve as her attendants during the crowning of the queen at Garner July 4th.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lau Honored At Housewarming Party

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Lee of Kensett, Iowa, tendered a housewarming party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lau here Sunday. Twenty five friends, coming from scattered points in north Iowa, assembled at the Lau residence. Buffet service was used. A heavy rain forced the party indoors and the local couple were presented with a basketful of gifts. They were asked to guess the contents of each package and when wrong were penalized and forced to do some stunt. Games were then played in the sign language.

Ice cream and cake were served in the afternoon. Everyone enjoyed a good time at the party and the guests departed feeling the day was well spent.

SURPRISE FOR MRS. ALB. BARZ

Sunday was Mrs. Alb Barz's birthday and in honor of the event a surprise was planned for her in the evening. The following met at the Henry Barz home and from there went to the Albert Barz home:

Rev. Grosshuesch and family; Lester Harbeck and family; Will Barz and family; Keith Kutzer of South Bend, Ind.; Henry Barz and family; Fred Barz and family; Mrs. Lena Schroeder; Dorothy Croner; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Barz and Max of Waterloo; Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Barz; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Barz; Walter Rosendahl and family; Edmond Josten. All brought well filled lunch baskets and enjoyed a fine time.

NORMA STROMER IS BRIDE OF FOREST CITY MAN

Wedding Ceremony Held At Local Reformed Church Tuesday P. M.

The marriage of Miss Norma Stromer, Klemme, and Mr. Rudolf Bienert, Forest City, was solemnized at the Reformed Church in Klemme Tuesday afternoon, July 2, at 2:00 o'clock, by Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch. Mr. Fernon Gr[illegible] and Miss Dahlia Stromer attended the couple The bride wore a blue silk dress with white accessories and the bridesmaid wore pink with white accessories.

The Bridal party drove to Mason City following the ceremony where they had their wedding dinner. In the evening they were honored at a reception and dance at Forest City.

The Bride is well known in the Klemme territory. She is the daughter of Mrs. Henry Stromer and has been a successful teacher in the rural schools for a number of years.

Mr. Bienert is a successful farmer who resides on a farm near Forest City where the couple will make their future home.

GOVERNMENT TO PURCHASE DAIRY PRODUTS AGAIN

Dairy farmers of Hancock county will be aided substantially by the plans of the Government to purchase approximately one million pounds of cheese, five million pounds of butter and five million pounds of dry skim milk.

The AAA has asked for bids on these commodities which will be turned over to the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation for distribution to needy families. The buying will be done under the direction of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

FAMILY REUNION HELD AT CHARLES CITY

The Arnold, Griffen and Hartwick families held their annual picnic reunion at Wildwood park Charles City, last Wednesday.

A short program was enjoyed. Rev. G. H. Wessel of Dows, Iowa, giving the address. 64 members attended. Mrs. C. B. Hartwick, of Giard, Ia., who is 88 years old, was able to be there. She is an aunt of the Arnold men.

AMBITION REALIZED

Sir Samuel Hoare for some time had an ambition to be secretary of state for foreign affairs in the British cabinet, and he realized this ambition when Prime Minister MacDonald resigned and changes were made in the cabinet jobs. Sir Samuel succeeded Sir John Simon.

First Ship

Jean Ribaut (French) landed, with a company of French Huguenots, on Parris Island, on the South Carolina coast, in 1562. He built a fort there, and on returning to France, left a garrison of 26 men. When he did not come back within the expected time, the garrison built a ship, with the aid of Indians, caulking it with Spanish moss and rosin, and on it sailed for Europe. This is said to have been the first ship constructed in America.

BROOKLYN RECRUIT

Only a few hours after Frankie Skaff received his diploma and a bachelor's degree in economics from Villanova college, he put on the uniform of the Brooklyn National league club and went to work. Frankie plays third base and is a heavy hitter.

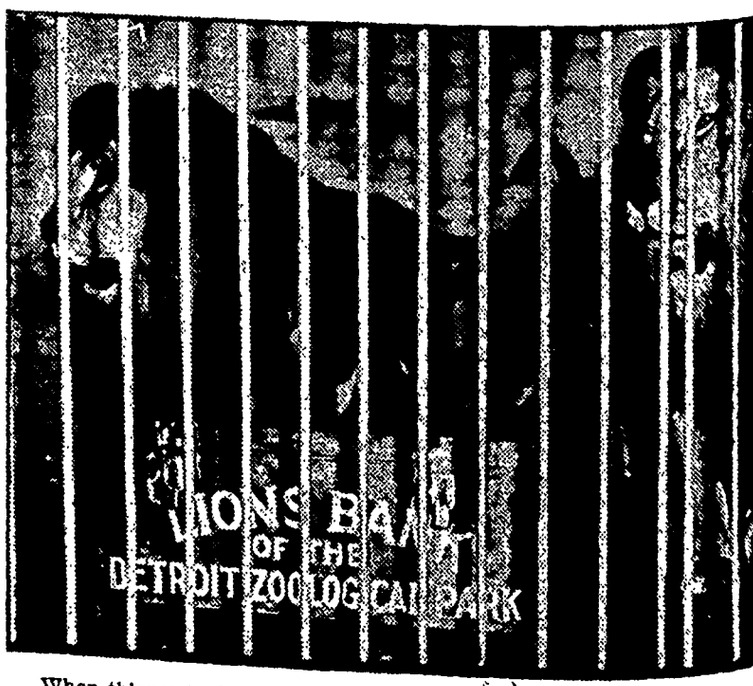
Getting Ready to Fight the Italians

Carrying ammunition in boxes upon their shoulders, these Ethiopian soldiers are mobilizing at Addis-Ababa, the capital, in readiness for the expected attack on their country by the Italians. The troops of Emperor Haile Selassie are fierce fighters, but seem to have old-fashioned rifles and to lack military form.

Detroit Zoo Defies Safe Robbers



When thieves broke into the Detroit zoo and took more than $300 from safe, Director John Millen decided it should not happen again. A special mo box was made for the park funds and every night it is placed in the lio cage. Mr. Millen says safe breakers are welcome to try to get the money

Freedom Statue Modeled in Rome

The statue of Freedom surmounting the Capitol at Washington is the work of Thomas Crawford, an American artist. The modeling was done in Rome, and at the time of his death, in 1857, he was endeavoring to secure the necessary funds for the casting of it at the Royal foundry at Munich.

Mackinac Island's Location

Mackinac Island is in the Strait of Mackinac, which links Lakes Huron and Michigan. It retains some reminders of the days when it was a trading post late in the 17th century—old Fort Mackinac, for example, on an elevation behind the city, commanding the strait.

The tribes, for the first time in six centuries, forgot blood feuds and intertribal warfare in the common cause against an enemy.

Refused Decorations.

The combined forces swept the eastern half of the Arabian peninsula from Mecca to Damas. Lawrence personally led many assaults upon the forces of the Turks. For his valuable services in cutting communications along the Hedjaz railroad, between Medinah and the North, he was offered high military decorations by both the French and the English. He would accept neither.

As the revolt spread, recognition of Lawrence's services in the East grew. He was finally supplied with money and ammunition with which to foster the movement against the Turks. The end came when Lord Allenby, the conqueror of Jerusalem, broke through the Turkish forces on the east coast. At the same time Lawrence and Feisal led a wild attack which resulted in the capitulation of Damas, where Feisal was enthroned.

When Lawrence, at the peace conference in Paris, attempted to set up Arab independence he found—as he had long suspected—that he had been binding the Arabs with promises which he could not keep.

Feisal remained loyal, though disheartened, when driven from the throne of Syria by the French, to whom the territory had been mandated. Lawrence did not give up the struggle, however, and when Iraq was mandated to the British, Feisal, through Lawrence's efforts, was enthroned in Bagdad on August 23, 1921.

But the man who might have been the emperor of Arabia retired to obscurity as an aircraftsman in the British air force.

Touring Bees Work Winter and Summer

Sturbridge, Mass.—No NRA codes for William C. Davenport's bees! He's found a way to make 'em work both winter and summer.

In winter he carts them to Florida where they harvest from orange blossoms the makings of honey. In summer the same bees come north.

Davenport arrived here recently with 150 swarms of bees and four tons of honey, part of his winter's crop from the South.

Some of the local folks say his bees have acquired a southern accent.

France Has Monopoly in Finding Work for Idle

Paris.—This country of government monopolies has just created a new one in an unexpected field.

To fight unemployment the labor ministry established an unemployment bureau, and it has just been discovered that the decree creating it is so worded as to give the government monopoly of finding work for the jobless.

The organization which made that discovery was the Foyer Hotelier, a welfare organization in the hotel industry which was engaged in finding jobs for unemployed hotel workers.

The labor ministry complained, and the appeals court sustained the ministry, fining the welfare organization for having offered its services, which were free, to the jobless.

The court handed down the opinion that the letter of the law makes it illegal for anyone to tell an unemployed person where he can get a job.

Philadelphian Rejects $3,000 Offer for Fish

Philadelphia.—Gustav G. Armbruster, fish grower, has refused an offer of $3,000 for 76 discus fish and their parents, which he has raised. The offer was from a commercial concern.

The discus, pompadour fish, or blue scalare, as it is variously known, is a native of the Amazon river. Armbruster believes he is the only person to have kept them alive more than a day or two after hatching in captivity. He said that even with the most careful care more than half of the delicate hatch died within a week.

Indians Consider Old Promises; Demand Action

Los Angeles.—California's 23,000 Indians are on a warpath, white man fashion, organizing the "California Indian Rights association" to make themselves heard in Washington, where the Great White Father makes his medicine.

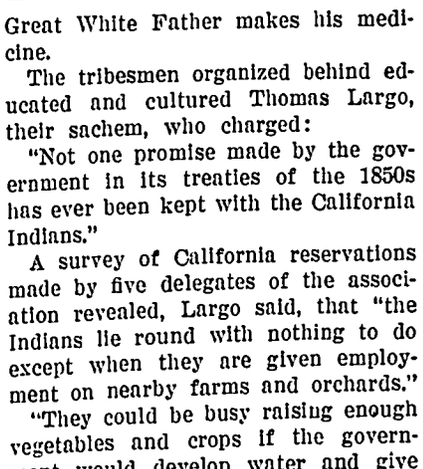
The tribesmen organized behind educated and cultured Thomas Largo, their sachem, who charged:

"Not one promise made by the government in its treaties of the 1850s has ever been kept with the California Indians."

A survey of California reservations made by five delegates of the association revealed, Largo said, that "the Indians lie round with nothing to do except when they are given employment on nearby farms and orchards."

"They could be busy raising enough vegetables and crops if the government would develop water and give them tools and horses," he said.

TEST OF NEW BALL



Alex Ednie, pro at Shelter Rock Country club, Long Island, recently drove a spun latex ball through a phone book almost an inch thick, containing more than 500 pages. Standing the book on end without support 4 feet in front of the tee, Ednie sent the ball through with such force that it carried and rolled 100 yards beyond. Traveling at the rate of approximately 114 miles an hour, the ball was averaging 167 feet a second when it hit the book. The drive, declared impossible by golfer and nongolfer alike, was made to test the new spun latex golf ball, a United States rubber product. Made of materials never before used in golf ball construction, the new ball is notable for its power and distance. These qualities are acquired primarily from a high-power winding of thread spun direct from liquid latex, the natural milk of the rubber tree.

Wealth Is Wages
Most Constant Market
Wages and Prosperity
Long Wants Chunks

The American Cotton Manufacturers' association, at Charlotte, N. C., promises not to reduce wages or increase hours, an excellent pledge, as important to the employing, prosperous class as to workers. This was well put by W. J. Cameron, speaking for Henry Ford, announcing restoration of the six dollars a day minimum wage, which will cost Henry Ford $2,000,000 a month! Said Mr. Cameron:

Arthur Brisbane

"The finest possible method of distributing the nation's goods is through wages. They represent work done and useful wealth created; they never drain or tax the country—they add substance and strength. . . .

"It is impossible to exaggerate the dependence of the country upon wages earned and paid, or the happy effect of a return of wages after a period of decline. . . . The expenditures of the rich cannot support any basic business in this country; for in the first place we have very few people who can be called rich; and in the second place, neither their needs nor their buying power is sufficient to support even a medium-sized industry of any sort.

"The largest, most varied and most constant market in the world is the wage-earning American people. They handle the bulk of the money; it is their needs and standards that keep the wheels turning. If they can't buy it doesn't matter who else can or does and their buying power is wages."

Business men who think wealth can be taken out of the wages of working men, should read those words in italics, carefully, and they should be read by any workers that have listened to demagogues telling them, "Take it away from the rich. That is the way to be happy." There are not enough "rich" to go around, but with full production, full consumption, good wages and reasonable leisure, affording time to spend and enjoy the good wages, American prosperity for all that has grown steadily in the past would continue to grow.

Have wages and prosperity increased? They have.

First, a President of the United States once complained, publicly and without rebuke, that you could not hire a good worker in this country for less than $100 a year, about 30 cents a day.

Second, McMasters, the historian, tells you that in the early days only one American mechanic, a New England carpenter, could earn as much as one dollar a day.

Third, in 1914, when the automobile industry was young, Henry Ford's minimum wage was $2.34 a day. It was in January, 1914, that the new minimum was changed to $5 a day.

The senate rejects Senator Long's proposition to spend five thousand million dollars a year benevolently, and raise the money by taking "chunks" out of large fortunes.

This process, the senator's "share-the-wealth" idea, might last a little while, but after the large fortunes were all gone the "share-the-wealth" gentlemen might begin taking "chunks" out of each other.

J. Pierpont Morgan of New York, who sold valuable pictures here, and sold them well, proving business ability, in London is selling costly miniatures.

Some ask why Mr. Morgan, who is prosperous, sells works of art that cannot be replaced. The reply might properly be "That is my business." Perhaps he sees ahead conditions in which "real money" will be better than miniatures.

Telegram, dated Washington, from Congressman P. L. Gassaway. Try to be as cheerful as he is:

"Just returned from trip through Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. Crops are good out there. Prosperity is certain. Couldn't get breakfast in railroad restaurant on account of crowd."

Lloyd George says: "Signor Mussolini is bent upon the conquest of Abyssinia. Lust is in his eye and it makes his speech wild and incoherent. He resents all interference from outside with furious anger."

Mussolini's speech may have been "wild and incoherent," but there was common sense in it when he reminded the British that they didn't invite or listen to criticism while they were building up their empire.

Jackie Kaul, a New York boy, five years old, thought kidnaped, is found in the East river, drowned, by accident, undoubtedly.

After dreadful anxiety, to know the truth brings relief to the parents. The sad death of this child shows how faith and a belief in the hereafter console human beings. Faith that their child is happy in another world, and has been happy and safe ever since they first missed him, makes their grief bearable.

EASY TO FOLLOW PRACTICES THAT LEAD TO HEALTH

By MARY G. McCORMICK
Supervisor of Health Teaching, New York State Department of Education.

Healthy homes produce healthy children—not so much because of heredity as because there the practices which lead to health, such as proper eating, plenty of rest, tranquility and cleanliness become a part of the child's habits automatically.

For the same reason, unhealthy homes tend to produce children with health defects. The child of such a home does not have an opportunity to learn good health habits. He imitates the bad health habits of his parents.

Briefly, the fundamental rules for good health, both for adults and children, are:

Eat properly, plenty of milk, vegetables, fruits, bread and other simple foods.

Regular exercise—but not too much—in the open air and sunlight.

Children should have 9 to 12 hours' sleep at night, according to age, with an afternoon nap also, if possible.

Keep clean.

These rules are so simple and are based so much on ordinary common sense that it is surprising that they are so little understood by grown-ups. Yet it is a fact that relatively few adults do understand them or practice them. Schools must teach these rules to children, for health teaching is a fundamental part of the educational process but parents must also assume the responsibility of teaching them—and what is more—of practicing them.

Children learn by imitating, and practices learned in the home will often endure for a lifetime, while those learned in school and not followed at home will have relatively little effect.

How About It, Parents?

A physician decided to help the unemployment situation the other day by giving his young nephew, who had just passed his bar examination, some of his bills to collect. He instructed him to make a report on each of the debtors.

One morning the physician found in his mail the following note:

"Dear Uncle—I went to see Mr. X yesterday to collect the $20 he owed you. I found that he had five children but no assets. Bill."

VIOLET RAYS IN ONION

The carrot and spinach long have enjoyed high respectability, even distinction, in the vegetable world for their therapeutic benefits. The onion, meanwhile, has been something of an outcast; a tasty relish, to be sure, but one that advertised its addicts to the world and reduced the housewife to tears. Now the onion is joining the aristocracy. The international congress of radiobiology, meeting at Venice, having examined its concentric circles and found them bulging with "M-rays of a mildly ultra-violet type," has indorsed the perfumed bulb as having high medicinal value in counteracting certain nasal maladies.

The doctors succeeded in putting carrots on the country's tables. They landed spinach on the menu. Probably they can put the onion over, too, aided as they will be by its millions of secret admirers. But there the men of medical science should draw the line. What if some research hound discovered boundless benefits in garlic?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

LET US MAKE YOUR VACATION TRIP SAFER

BEFORE you start on your holiday trip, let us completely inspect your car. There is no charge for this service and it will assure you of a safer and more enjoyable trip.

For the convenience and safety of car owners Firestone has established more than 500 Auto Supply and Service Stores throughout the country, and thousands of Firestone Dealers are also equipped with complete Auto Supplies and complete Service Departments, to test and service your tires, brakes, batteries, spark plugs, in addition to power lubrication and crank case service.

AVOID THE DANGER OF BLOWOUTS

Firestone removes the danger of blowouts by preventing their main cause—internal friction and heat. This is accomplished by Gum-Dipping.

THERE ARE THREE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THAT WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM OF WHAT TIRES TO BUY:

1 "Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

— Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes.

For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death.

2 "Are they blowout-proof?"

—Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Not one of the 33 drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles, averaging 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind.

3 "Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

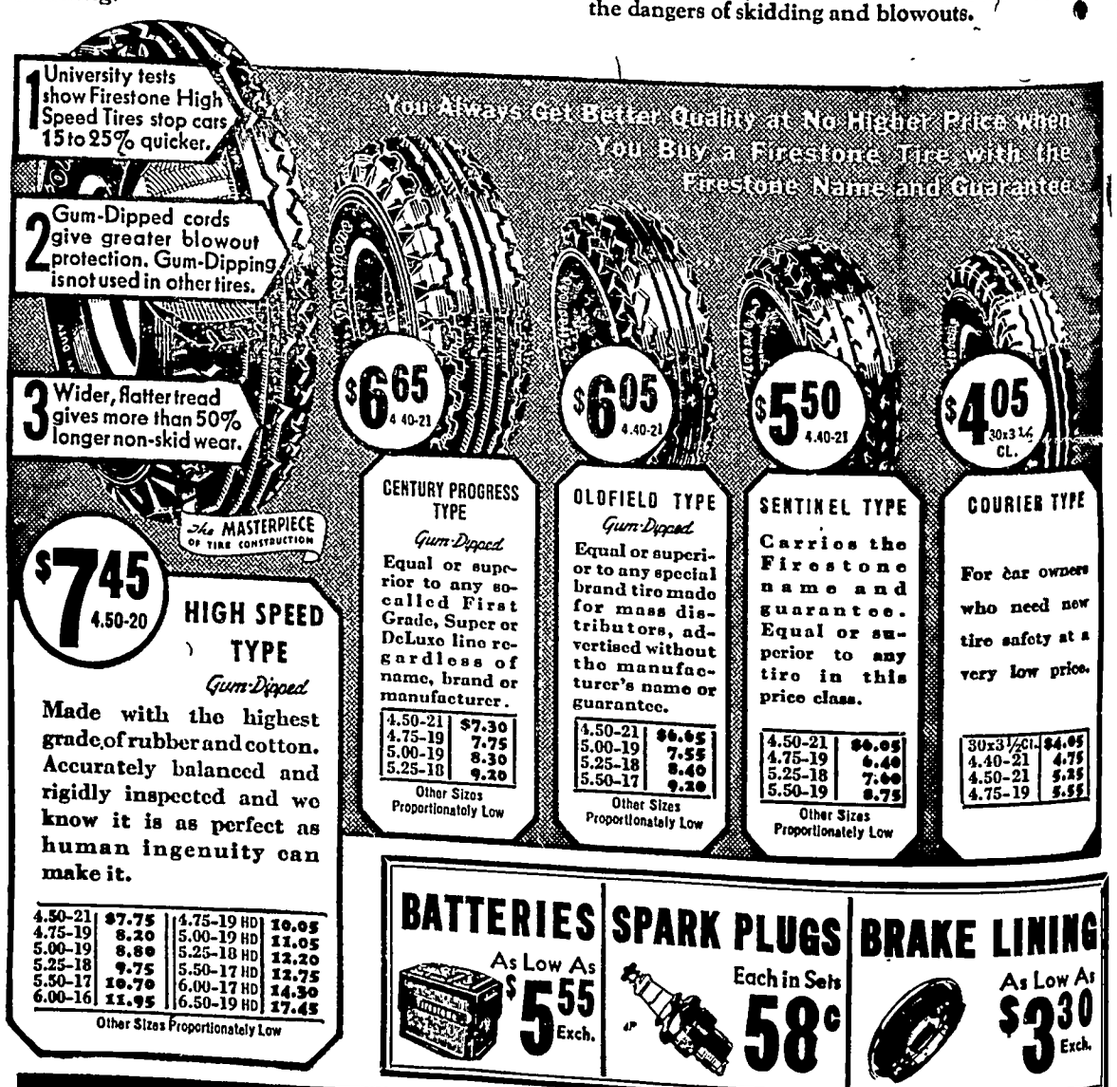
— Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile. In fact, unequaled mileage records of thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

Equip your car with a set of Firestone Gum-Dipped Non-Skid Tires, the safest tires ever built and avoid the dangers of skidding and blowouts.



1 University tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.
2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.
3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

The American Legion Auxiliary will meet in the Royal Neighbor rooms below the First National Bank, next week Thursday, July 11th. Mrs. Albert Etchen will be the hostess. All members are invited to be present.

MORE KLEMME LOCALS

Dwight Hummel and Steve Chizek returned last Wednesday from Northern Minnesota, where they had been fishing for about a week. The men had fine luck and brought back a nice bunch of fish.

Bernard Smid returned to New Hampton Sunday after visiting for a few days in Klemme with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Smid and family. Bernard is working for a paving gang and is in charge of the pumping station and water supply.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kingery drove down from Armstrong Saturday and visited over night with Klemme friends. Sunday they drove to Greene for a visit with Mr. Kingery's parents, returning to Klemme Monday and visited for the day.

Mrs. Wm. Zabilka gave an address on "India" on Thusday evening of last week at the M. E. church at Thornton, the occasion being a annual meeting of the Missionary society of that church to which the public was invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Jacobs, of Garner, were visiting in Klemme Saturday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs are having a new brick house built at Garner and the work is well under way.

Byrnes Missman and Dorance Day left early Sunday morning for Land-O-Lakes, Wisconsin, where Dr. Missman has a cottage on the lake. The boys will spend a week or more there.

D. L. Hunter and family returned to Klemme Monday from Clear Lake where they enjoyed a vacation the past month. They had a cottage on the east shore. Mr. Hunter reports that he had good luck fishing while there.

GOOD old freedom and equality have been with us so long in these United States—and who shall deny that we have them?—that it has become a "property of easiness" and we are prone to forget, with all the Independence days we have observed since that far day of the first one born of the spirit of '76, just how it all came about. It has been some time since we have heard a "Fourth of July Oration" or heard the "Declaration of Independence" read at the fair grounds. So, let's take a moment's pause and do a little looking backward and recover, perhaps, a few forgotten thrills, advises a writer in the Kansas City Star.

The hall in which our freedom was born is still standing there in Independence Square, Philadelphia, little changed with time. Some of the chairs the delegates sat in and the desk upon which the president of the congress wrote his "John Hancock" are there. Portraits of the signers look down from the walls. But who today can recall the actual happenings of those fateful years of June and July, 159 years ago, when our independence was in travail? What actually happened on July 4, the subsequently dedicated day? When was the immortal document proclaimed to the nation? Was the great step taken amid a tumult of shouting and bell-ringing and firing of cannon, as it came to be celebrated in after years?

Glorious in legend as was that first Fourth 159 years ago, it was a day of deep and cautious solemnity. They were not noise-makers who assembled to launch a new nation "dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal." The day fell upon a rainy Thursday. In Philadelphia's old statehouse there was no stately ceremony. No crowds were waiting ouside as yet to hear "the joyful news." In fact, there was an atmosphere of grave uncertainty in the hall as to the fate of the great charter of American liberty. There were a good many minds that were not fully made up as to the wisdom of the declaration.

To state the historical truth, by the record, independence had already been declared July 2, two days before. It was on that day that Richard Henry Lee's resolution, introduced in the congress some weeks before, was passed by a bare majority, declaring "that the United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be, Free and Independent States, and that they are Absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them, and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved." In effect that action was a severing of the political tie between the colonies and Great Britain. Why, then, is not July 2 the "day we celebrate?"

Because those fathers of the Republic recognized the gravity of the step they were about to take and that it meant war and bloodshed. They were practical, methodical and just men, and men bred in the parliamentary usages and constitutional law. They recognized that more than a mere resolution was necessary to justify their action to the world, and that "a decent respect for the opinions of mankind required that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation." They were determined not to go before the world as mere "revolutionists and rebels," but statesmen representing a just cause and a new ideal of government "with the consent of the governed."

So, July 4 became the day we celebrate because it was not until then that the congress was ready to go before the judgment of the people and of other nations with a candid statement of the causes that impelled them to the severance of the ties that had long bound them to the mother country. The act was not consummated without long and careful deliberation. The idea of independence had been long a-borning. The fashioning of the great document that bade defiance to the king and proclaimed a new nation was not as smooth and easy a task as it may appear from a reading of the beautifully engrossed transcript in the archives at Washington now accepted as "the original Declaration of Independence."

The idea of a declaration of independence had its birth 15 years prior to July 4, 1776. James Otis, the "fiery-tongued orator," sounded the first note in the state house at Boston in 1761. Nearly a month before the writing of the formal declaration, Richard Henry Lee, as spokesman for the Virginia delegation in congress, introduced his resolution which, so far as the record was concerned, finally became the formal declaration. It precipitated a serious debate, for there were many who "were not ready for the question." On June 11, a committee was appointed to prepare a suitable declaration of causes, in support of Lee's resolution, composed of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert Livingston.

Reading Declaration of Independence From Balcony of State House.

The task of formulating the causes and writing the document fell to the facile pen of Thomas Jefferson. But it was not finally accepted wholly as Jefferson wrote it. Many passages were stricken out and several amendments attached to it. But on July 4, Jefferson's final draft of the "form of announcing the fact of separation" was formally adopted and ordered printed and distributed to the assemblies, conventions and councils of safety throughout the colonies. This printing had only two signatures—those of John Hancock, president, and Charles Thomson, secretary of the congress. On July 19, congress ordered the declaration to be "fairly engrossed on parchment," and it was not until August 2, 1776, that the great sheepskin was unrolled in the presence of the Continental Congress. Fifty of the fathers signed the document on that day. Six did not affix their signatures until a later date. And one, Thomas McKean of Delaware, did not sign it until five years later.

But with the signatures of Hancock and Thomson, the document became official, so far as the outside world was concerned, on July 4. On July 8, Washington had it read to the army, and to the public from the balcony of the statehouse, a day that became one of public rejoicing.

Weight of Liberty Bell

THE Liberty Bell, which is still preserved in Independence hall in Philadelphia, weighs 2,080 pounds.

"Give Me Liberty Or Give Me Death"

THE orator had a definite place in the building of America. In the Eighteenth century oratory was a fine art and not the lost one that it is today. Therefore, writes Elizabeth Ellicott Poe, in the Washington Post, the place that Patrick Henry held and holds in the affections of the people for the part he played before and during the American revolution is one that cannot be too highly estimated.

Hanover county, Va., which has given many notable men and women to the Old Dominion's Hall of Fame, has every right to be proud of the achievements of this Henry of Studley. As early as 1763 he was sounding the keynotes of freedom in unmistakable tones. He was a country lawyer who had made an early marriage rather foolishly and was struggling to keep a growing family in the necessities of life when, in 1763, he became aroused in behalf of what was known as "The Parsons' Cause," concerning the right of the clergy to receive the same price for their tobacco as other Colonists. In 1765 Henry was elected to the Virginia House of Burgesses. From time he took his seat he introduced act after act defining the rights of the colony, especially in the matter of the obnoxious stamp tax and, against great opposition, carried all of his resolutions through the sheer force of his logic and his eloquence.

This made Patrick Henry the leader of the colony, in many senses of the word.

Patrick Henry came rightly by his love of freedom, his historical sense and powers of oratory. For he was a cousin of the historian, William Robertson, of Scotland, and of the mother of Lord Brougham. His mother was a Winston of that noted English family and his father saw to it that he had a classical education and every possible advautage in the way of proper learning.

In 1774 Henry was foremost in the call to form a Continental congress. George Mason, author of the Bill of Rights, himself an author and patriot of more than usual ability, said of Henry: "He is by far the most powerful speaker I ever heard. Every word he says not only engages, but commands the attention, and your passions are no longer your own when he addresses them. But his eloquence is the smallest part of his merit. He is in, my opinion, the first man upon this continent, as well in abilities as in public virtues, and had he lived in Rome about the time of the first Punic war, when the Roman people had arrived at their meridian glory, and their virtues not tarnished, Henry's talents must have put him at the head of that glorious commonwealth."

Of course, it was in his great speech, familiar to every schoolboy in which he shouted for all to hear—kings and commoners alike—"Give me liberty or give me death" that he rose to his supreme heights of eloquence and achieved for himself undying and deserved fame.

It is said that many of his predictions as to the future of the federal government read like prophecy in the light of subsequent history.

FEW HERDS SEEN ON OLD TRAILS

"Longhorns" Shouldered Out by Woolly Flocks.

The western trail herds have not passed, but today they are sheep and not cattle, with numbers driven regularly exceeding the count of the most famous trails.

It's a faux pas, of course, to mention sheep and cattle in one breath (to a cattleman), but the former still are featured in big drives—in fact the business of sheep driving has grown, while cattle are moved by rail.

It's largely a matter of very simple business.

Cattle lose weight when driven cross-country. Cows are valuable not by the hoof, but by the beefsteak, with thick steaks bringing more money. The money crop of sheep is their wool, which can't be walked away.

So today some 300,000 complaining "woolies" are taking the long trek from southern pastures in and about the Salt river valley to northern Arizona, where they will wait out the summer at high altitudes whose ranges are not withered by the desert sun.

The business of trail driving has become a big industry. The government sets aside regular strips for sheep to follow as they go north and as they return south. Some make a round trip of 400 miles.

Trails followed are as old as the industry. They are picked originally because of advantages of feed and water, and once set by custom, received governmental sanction. Homesteading or scrip purchase of land in the sheep "strips" is forbidden.

The oldest of them recently blossomed out with a shiny new suspension bridge, which sheep weekly cross to avoid wetness and possible quicksand of the Salt river below.

Following the drives demands alertness and sacrifice of herders. Mountain lions are not a myth, but are plentiful in parts of the sheep range. Wild dog packs are a menace in the Salt River valley, and may kill scores in a night's bloody orgy. Coyotes are present everywhere, vigilant to take stragglers.

Pension Rolls Slow to Show Much Diminution

It doesn't take long to raise an army but it does take a long time to pay them off. If the law of averages holds out Uncle Sam will still be paying pensions to Civil war veterans until 1955 and to their widows until at least 1980. While there are now less than 50 actual pensioners of the World war (not counting those receiving compensation) either pensions or compensation will likely continue to be paid these veterans until about 2025 and to their widows or dependents until around 2065. According to the records of the Veterans' administration the last Revolutionary war veteran died in 1869 (the last widow in 1906); the last survivor of the War of 1812, in 1905; and the last soldier of the Mexican war, in 1929. But at the beginning of 1935 there were 15,647 Civil war veterans and 106,901 of their widows and dependents on the pension rolls as well as five widows or dependents of the War of 1812.—Pathfinder Magazine.

TIRES MAY LOOK ALIKE ON THE OUTSIDE ON THE INSIDE THEY ARE DIFFERENT

HEAT on the inside created by friction is the main cause of blowouts. Firestone Tires are different on the inside—they are built with the patented extra process of Gum-Dipping that soaks every cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber, preventing internal friction and heat. No other make of tire is Gum-Dipped.

Firestone performance records again emphasize the undisputed evidence that Firestone Tires are not only blowout-proof, but give greatest protection against skidding. There are three questions and answers that will solve the problem of what tires to buy:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes. For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death. This is undisputed evidence that Firestone gives car owners greatest protection against skidding.

QUESTION 2—"Are they blowout-proof?"

ANSWER—Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Not one of the 33 drivers had any tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles at 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind. These are most amazing proofs of blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile due to the tough, wear-resisting tread built with higher shoulders and a wider, flatter contour. This rugged tread is held securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body by Firestone's patented construction of two extra layers of cords under the tread, a special construction feature not used in any other tire. Unequaled mileage records by thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

You Always Get Better Quality at No Higher Price when You Buy a Firestone Tire with the Firestone Name and Guarantee

1 University tests show Firestone Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.

2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.

3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—President Roosevelt surprised the country by surprise when he suddenly dispatched a message to congress asking for a new tax law that would have the same effect, although limited scope, of the "share-the-wealth" program advanced by Senator Long and Father Coughlin, the radio priest. It may be said that the country was not only surprised but that congress by the proposal. It is a move concerning which there was no forecast and it has taken research to show how it links with other New Deal reform plans. That link does exist. Of that there is no doubt.

...n to the Rich

Exactly, Mr. Roosevelt has demanded that congress enact a tax law which will yield, according to estimate, something like $1,000,000,000 annually. Designed to place the heaviest burden on the rich, whether they be rich corporations or rich individuals. In fact the President observed that it was a program to tax "static wealth" and increase purchasing power of those dispossessed with this world's goods.

The key to the program is the tax on inheritances and gifts. These two taxes must operate jointly if they are to succeed at all. If an individual with wealth wants to avoid already heavy inheritance taxes, he has only to give away his property before his death. In the Roosevelt proposal, those who receive these gifts would have to pay taxes upon them as they would on any other income. There is a question as to constitutionality but many able lawyers believe the gift tax will be upheld by the Supreme court.

The second phase of the new tax program boosts rates of taxes on incomes. At present, the individual with an income of $1,000,000 is taxed at exactly the same rate as the individual having an income of $5,000,000. Of course, a $5,000,000 income pays more total tax but the point is the rate is the same as on the smaller income. Mr. Roosevelt proposes that the rate should be gradually increased above $1,000,000 so that it is graduated from the lowest rate for taxpayer to those receiving $5,000,000 annually. There seems to be little opposition to this particular item of the bill although it is natural to expect that attempts will be made to alter that suggestion since there is a school of economic thought which believes that tax rates can be high enough to discourage investments and deny a return to the individual of a reasonable enough for the government to get the bulk of that income.

A third major item in the President's program provides for a graduated tax on incomes of corporations. Corporations now are taxed at the rate of 13½ per cent of their net income whatever it may be. Mr. Roosevelt thinks this basis is improper. He proposes to have smaller corporations pay only 10¾ per cent and that, as the capital of the corporations increases, they be subjected to a gradually higher rate until a top of 16¾ is reached on the incomes of the largest corporations. Certain modifications or classifications were offered in this section so that some types of corporations may not be compelled to pay the maximum rate.

The President's program for new taxes was received without particular enthusiasm in congress except for a loud "Amen" by Senator Long. In fact the President's message was right down Senator Long's alley. The Louisiana senator has made hundreds of speeches advocating some parts of the proposal now offered by the Chief Executive.

...re Groans ...Applause

Congressional reaction to the President's message included more groans than applause. A political campaign is on next year. Democratic leaders in many instances face re-election. It does not require the services of a lawyer to tell you that new taxes are hard for a political candidate to sell.

Superficially, therefore, it would appear that Mr. Roosevelt was playing politics when he proposed a tax program at this time. Such is not the case. Political conclusions by dozens of newspapers which understand the political situation in this country at this time are unanimous in terming it a political maneuver. Their conclusions are based on the fact that a candidate for political office can go out and tell the people of small incomes: "Look at what we are doing to the rich." Thus it is made to appear that a new wave of soak-the-rich propaganda is about to engulf us.

Business interests naturally are worried over the prospects. Thousands of corporations have barely been able to make ends meet in these depression years. Now that there is some prospect for some additional business and meager profits, they are confronted with a Washington program of taxation designed to go beyond the present burden.

It is true that some of them will be benefited by lower rates but many realists are of the opinion that the corporations receiving the benefit of lower rates actually are in the best financial condition of any in the country. Contrary to the argument often heard the truth seems to be that the smaller business entities have come through the depression much better than those units with great investments and great capital funds. The answer lies in the fact that in the case of the smaller corporations, the stock usually is closely held and they are units for the most part individually managed. In the case of the larger corporations thousands of stock holders have a voice in selection of the corporate management and this management cannot be half as flexible as in instances where the word or direction of one man is controlling. In addition, small corporations are not subjected to great overhead expenses like the larger business bodies. The large corporation must maintain its organization and cannot even when work is slack cut down its fixed charges such as interest on debt and plant operation to the same extent. So, there are many who believe the high rate of tax becomes a penalty, the main object of which is to break up large corporations into smaller business units.

The Republican national committee is sitting virtually asleep in its easy chair, but Mr. Roosevelt's recent challenge of Supreme court decisions and his demand for constitutional revision is not being allowed to die. Everywhere around Washington, opponents of the New Deal are making attempts to keep that issue alive. Their claim is that Mr. Roosevelt put himself on a political hook when he offered criticism of the Supreme court, a co-ordinate branch of the government. They are determined to keep him on that hook if they can.

Roosevelt on a Hook

It is interesting to note how Mr. Roosevelt, observing a bad reaction to his initial statements concerning the NRA decision, has maintained silence on the point since. It is equally interesting to note how some of his mainstays and advisers have kept the issue bobbing up here and there throughout the country. Such men as Senator Robinson of Arkansas, senate majority leader, and Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, probably the President's closest friend in the senate, have made speeches lately using much the same tone and language as did the President in that memorable press conference. Every other administration spokesman has done the same thing. These speeches together with the continual jabbing and poking by New Deal opponents are serving to keep the question before the country. New Deal opponents frankly are joyful at the opportunity they say the President provided them.

In the meanwhile, as said above, the Republican national committee has been doing next to nothing. The condition is serving to build a fire under Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the national committee, and is drawing criticism as well to Senator Hastings of Delaware, and Representative Bolton of Ohio, joint chairmen of the senatorial congressional committee. Some Republicans are saying that the Roosevelt opposition is being allowed to wander without guide or anchor and that a golden chance to gain important results is being wholly wasted, because of the inactivity of these two committees.

Considerable discussion is being heard these days concerning the necessity for getting new blood into the national organization and its headquarters. My own conviction is that Mr. Fletcher is due to go before long. He has failed to win the confidence of the several factions in the Republican party and has operated on a distinctly do-nothing basis. Neither Senator Hastings nor Representative Bolton has set the world afire with political initiative or use of political opportunity available to them. The question naturally then is asked: How can the Republicans and the New Deal opposition generally expect to defeat Mr. Roosevelt for re-election in 1936 unless virility is shown in the party leadership?

An old tale about the Blue Eagle has just come to light. It was not disclosed until after the Blue Eagle had been buried under the avalanche of a Supreme court decision holding NRA codes unconstitutional. The story involves the patenting of the design. Artists conceived the Blue Eagle as the NRA insignia. To protect it and prevent unauthorized use of the insignia the design was rushed through the United States patent office. The design was then turned over to an artist at the patent office with instructions to make the necessary prints required by law. He had proceeded only for a brief period on the work when he left his desk to notify the commissioner of patents of what he deemed to be a mistake in the design. His words were prophetic. He called attention to the fact that one wing of the Blue Eagle contained more feathers than the other and added:

Prophetic Words

"Any bird built like that can only fly in a circle."

To shorten the narrative, let it be said that the artist was directed to proceed with his work. And let it be added, the Blue Eagle did fly only in a circle.

Japs Eat Rice, So Our Labor Starves

Top, Ten Hungry Mouths in New England Town as Result of Closing Textile Mill. Below, American Flag Tie Made in Japan. Right, Jap Women Making Celluloid Toys for American Trade.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

WAVING the old Stars and Stripes for all to see on the Fourth of July is great stuff. It feels mighty good to let loose once in a while with all the old patriotic pep and enthusiasm. It's a visible and appropriate tribute to those sturdy ancestors of ours who, on another Fourth of July, had nerve enough and sense enough to declare to the world that they were free men, determined and able to live by their own rule. And it's a heap safer than shooting off firecrackers. Unless . . .

Take that flag in your hands and examine it carefully. Do you find a stamped label on it that says "Made in Japan"? If you do, go back to the firecrackers. They'll do far less damage in the long run.

For that flag, with its millions of counterparts at large in this country, is putting American workers out of work, adding them to the relief rolls and throwing them and their families into virtual destitution. It is the most ironic symbol of an oriental industrialization and export trade, based on mass production, slave wages and a rice-and-tea standard of living, that is using the bait of lower prices to trick us into believing that we are "saving money" by buying its inferior products.

One particular adaptation of the American flag—a little silk bow that is fastened together with a pin—has definitely been the cause of a plant in Washington, D. C., which was making the same article, and whose product the Japanese ingeniously copied, shutting down and throwing its employees out of work. The Japanese article could be made to retail in American stores at 4 or 5 cents apiece. To make a profit, the capital firm had to sell its product for 10 cents.

In the field of novelties, the ever-alert Japanese manufacturer has learned to cash in on the patriotism of his neighbor half way around the world. He has even learned to play upon the patriotic hero-worship of the child in school. One of the most popular erasers in the American school-supply stores, for instance, is decorated with a picture of the White House and the heads of three of our greatest Presidents. It is "Made in Japan."

Wrecks Textile Industry.

So accustomed are we to seeing the label of Japanese manufacture on many kinds of novelties, we lose sight of the fact that Japanese price-cutting has opened the way for vast inroads of its products upon more than a score of American industries. Most important of these is the textile industry (chiefly cotton) and the hardest hit area is New England, where plant after plant has been forced by the combination of Japanese competition and the processing tax to cease operations.

Cotton growers have been heartened from time to time by the fact that Japanese importation of American cotton has held up better than that of other countries. On the other hand, this is what has happened after the Asiatic islanders have manufactured the raw goods:

American imports of Japanese gloves are up 500 per cent over 1932; hosiery, 400 per cent; cotton handkerchiefs and mufflers, 1,200 per cent; bedspreads and quilts, 100 per cent, and other manufactured articles in like proportion. In January, 1935, we bought 3,341,000 square yards of Japanese cloth; in February, 5,744,000 square yards, and in March, 6,217,000. This was more in each month than the combined total for three preceding years, 1931, 1932 and 1933. The March import was more than one-fourth the total American output for the entire year 1934.

Meanwhile our own exports have been in a steady decline. In 1932 they were 375,000,000 square yards; in 1933, 302,000,000, and in 1934, 266,000,000. The chief reason for this slump is that Japan has won from us our import markets in the Philippines and Hawaii, and a good share of them in South America.

Gov. Louis J. Brann of Maine, in testifying before an investigating committee, said that every mill in Maine was operating at a loss. Thousands of employees have been forced to go on the relief rolls. And as Maine goes, so goes New England. Especially in Massachusetts and Rhode Island have the mills been severely crippled. In Manchester, N. H., since the Japanese competition has begun to take a foothold, the Amoskeag Manufacturing company, one of the largest textile mills in the world, has reported a 1934 loss of $1,000,000.

Idle Plants Our Cost.

Figured in dollars and cents, the Japanese imports from the United States are twice our imports from Japan. But Japanese imports are mostly raw cotton which is manufactured and then sold back to us at prices that cost us many millions in idle plants and unemployed workers.

Japan's skilled laborers, working for wages that would hardly keep American bodies and souls together, have a genius for imitating American products. In appearance, the Japanese article looks quite like the American one, but almost invariably the materials used, and therefore the service to be obtained, leave much to be desired.

An American flashlight, made to sell for 59 cents, has to compete, often on the same shelves, with a Japanese flashlight identical in appearance, which costs 20 cents less. American pencils, sold for $2.40 a gross, are reproduced in Japan to sell here for 94 cents a gross; a device to sharpen them, made here to sell for $1, has a Japanese counterpart of inferior metal which sells for 37 cents.

Rubber manufacturing in the United States dropped from 100,000,000 pounds to 30,000,000 in three years. An American-made tennis shoe sells for 69 cents a pair, its Japanese counterpart for 39 cents. An American hot-water bottle costs 50 cents; one just like it but "Made in Japan" costs exactly half that.

And so it goes, all the way from microscopes (American, $12.50—Japanese, $1.95) to hinges (American, $3.50—Japanese, $1.25). Here is a partial list of articles, made in America, that have been reproduced for American sale by the Japanese, giving the retail price as it is in the United States today. In each case the Japanese article has exactly followed the American in appearance:

Article	American	Japanese
Baseball	$00.15	$00.10
Air Pistol	5.00	1.95
Comb	.20	.10
Toothbrush	.60	.10
Light Bulbs	.20	.06

(The Japanese article is identical in appearance, but consumes far more current, does not burn as long and gives much less illumination. Handled chiefly in stores which are notoriously "cut-rate.")

Article	American	Japanese
Perfume Bottle	$00.75	$00.20
Candlestick Holder	1.50	.20
Silver Mint Dish	4.00	.69
Dishes (18-piece set)	50.00	19.50
Salt Shaker Set	12.63	1.69
Candy Dish	5.00	.59
Cigarette Holder	3.75	1.25

Wholesale Invasion.

In the United States the fish-net business is a comparatively obscure one, if not in point of size at least in point of familiarity. Yet it did not take the thorough orientals very long to discover it. As an example, an American fish netting which once enjoyed a good sale at 75 cents is now giving way to the identical article of a Japanese competitor which sells for 32 cents.

Where were the beginnings and what is the cause of this wholesale invasion of American business by the Japanese? Most authorities attribute it to the lower standards of living and the cheap labor in Japan, and partly to the cotton processing tax (the New Hampshire mill which lost $1,000,000 last year paid $1,274,173 in processing tax).

That is only the situation as it exists today. The seed of the Japanese export business was planted in 1853. And the thing that started the whole trouble that confronts us today was an American admiral's nose!

In that year Admiral Perry landed on the island empire and gave the sons of Nippon their first introduction to American practices and habits. The Mitsui, which was then as now the Japanese family which represents to their business Morgan, Rockefeller and Ford all rolled into one, sent an artist, who might be compared to the photographer of today, to sketch a portrait of Admiral Perry. The portrait is still on exhibition at the Mitsui museum in Tokyo.

An Admiral's Nose.

The artist accentuated the admiral's sharp features and gave him an extremely long and ridiculous nose. It looked much like one of our over-exaggerated caricatures of the present day, but it was not a caricature. The artist was simply so amazed at an ordinary occidental nose that he drew it all out of proportion.

Admiral Perry's nose immediately became the sensation of Japan. It provoked an insatiable curiosity regarding people who could have noses like that. The artist was hurried down to the ship to make a sketch of that, and of the tools and other belongings of the Americans. The imitative ability of the Japanese immediately began to make itself apparent, as the islanders began making things like those of the admiral and his companions for themselves.

These few American ideas became so popular that it was not long before wealthy Japanese were sending the young hopefuls of their families to the United States, clad at first in kimonos, to study at American universities. They brought home with them the American banking system and scores of revolutionary ideas from American industrial institutions. Today Japanese industry is a model of the "endless chain" system developed to so high a degree here by Henry Ford.

Employed in the now great Japanese industrial plants are workers, both men and women, who have learned to practice an economy that would put the Scots to shame. They live in flimsy houses to a standard that seems unbelievable.

Workers Are Skilled.

It must not be supposed that because the average worker's income is about $9 to $50 a month he is a poor worker. He is more likely to be highly intelligent, very fast and well-skilled, with a hunger for education seldom matched on this earth. And his money has a vastly greater purchasing power than it would appear to have. His production is always up to the utmost because the entire Japanese industrial system works on a bonus basis that allows extra pay for high efficiency, economy, safety and production.

The food the Japanese worker's family eats would look sorry, indeed, to the red-blooded American appetite. But the lowly Japanese is not discontented, for his more well-to-do brothers and their families eat much the same menu as he does.

Japanese housewives feed a working-class family of five for only about 55 cents a day. For breakfast they have rice, bean soup and pickles; for lunch, rice, salt salmon and boiled vegetables, and for dinner, rice, vegetable soup, pork and cabbage, and other vegetables. Dairy products the ordinary Japanese does not want and does not like. The very lowest class of course does not eat quite the menu outlined here, but subsists mainly on rice and tea.

For what you and I would pay for a hat, the Japanese man or woman can buy a complete outfit of summer clothing; for what we might pay for a pair of shoes, he can get a winter suit and overcoat; his monthly rent costs him about as much as our monthly bill for gas and electricity. That one-time American institution, the nickel movie, has become a Japanese institution—with the children admitted for half price.

Japanese exports climb. And so do our relief rolls.

Appeals to Those of Mature Figure

PATTERN 9342

Capes? Everybody loves them—they've descended upon fashion like April showers. All sorts of capes. In this charming dress the cape influence is minimized, but it is used to advantage. Joining in front like a raglan sleeve, and cut in one with the yoke in back, these cape sleeves give grace and proper proportioning to the mature figure. A small bow, adroitly placed, adds a winsome touch at the bodice. You'll find the cut of the skirt excellent, too. It's a grand dress to make up in a flower print or a solid sheer, or in voile or lawn for the heat waves to come. The capes may contrast.

Pattern 9342 may be ordered only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards 39 inch fabric.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York.

"I can't fight flies all day long and do my best at the milk pail. Give me protection with Dr. Hess Fly Spray and I'll more than pay the cost with more milk."

A cow that must switch, hook, kick and stamp, trying to rid herself of those pesky flies, is using up energy that should go to milk making.

Dr. Hess Fly Spray gives real fly protection. A cow can graze in peace, lie down in the shade and chew her cud in comfort.

Dr. Hess Fly Spray does not stain or gum the hair. Does not taint the milk. Actual tests show it does not affect the body temperature.

Fly Spray is also a 92% efficient fly killer—for killing flies in the stable.

BIRTHDAY PARTY HELD FOR MRS. FRED BARZ

Mrs. Fred Barz had a birthday July 4th, but her relatives waited until Sunday when they held a surprise for her and after church gathered at the Barz home and all enjoyed a cafeteria dinner on the lawn. Mrs. Walter Rosendahl, Mrs. Harvey Barz and Mrs. Marvin Barz had everything in readiness when the relatives came home from church. Mrs. Walter Rosendahl had baked and decorated a large cake for the affair.

Those who gathered at the Barz home were Rev. Grosshuesch and family; Leslie Hartbeck and family; Wm. Barz and family; Herman Barz and family; Henry Barz and family; Albert Barz and family; Lena Schroeder and Dorothy Croner; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Barz and Max; Fred Kothenbeutal and family and Martin Barz and family.

North Iowa Corn Knee High July 4th

The standard of measurement of corn in North Iowa has always been "knee high by the Fourth." Most of the corn attained that height around Klemme and some was even much larger.

The hot weather for the past ten days has made the corn shoot skyward. One farmer says the corn was growing so fast on his farm that it pulled the roots right out of the ground and every afternoon the roots were at least six inches above the ground. Then after the sun went down and it got a little cooler, the roots would reach down and by morning would be firmly imbedded in the soil all ready for another battle next day.

The small grain crop has the appearance of being one of the best for several years. The hay crop has never been better. The rainy spell of a couple of weeks ago made the work pile up for North Iowa farmers, and now haying, cultivating and harvesting is all coming together, making it a busy time for the farmer.

FORAGE CANNOT SUPPLY ALL PROTEIN NEEDED BY POULTRY

Rank growth of poultry forage crops induced by frequent rains may lead the Iowa poultryman in the erroneous belief that he can reduce grain feeds and maintain production, says H. L. Wilcke of the Iowa State College poultry husbandry staff.

The laying flock does not gain a complete protein from the green growth and needs a supplement in the form of meat, bonemeal and milk combined with an oats, corn and wheat mixture.

With present high prices for grains, the producer may believe that he can safely dispense with grain feeds either partially or entirely and increase these feeds when their prices drop. Hens, however, cannot be restored to laying conditions readily under these circumstances, and such a plan will not work satisfactorily.

The poultry raiser who gets many eggs in the spring without laying mixtures often thinks that this production should continue. The hen produces heavily in the spring because that is her natural production season and as soon as this period has passed it is only by proper feeding that high egg production can be maintained the year around.

The most difficult brain center to control has ever been the speech-cenetr.

Large Crowd Attended July Fourth Celebration At Garner

LIBERTY FARM BUREAU FLOAT WINS FIRST AT GARNER

An estimated crowd of 7,500 people celebrated the Fourth of July in Garner. The Boy Scouts in charge of a first aid hospital reported four minor accidents caused by firecrackers. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Formanek near Duncan was taken to a physician for treatment.

Several floats from Ventura planned to join the parade but because of high wind damaging the decorations, returned home after coming a short distance. The Liberty township farm bureau float, with Miss Lois Lenz as the goddess of Liberty, drawn by six well matched roan horses driven by H. A. Greiman and William Haberkamp of near Garner, was awarded first prize. The Garner Co-Operative Creamery association with the Hancock county queen, Miss Alice Rokos, and her attendants, Miss Phyllis Elling, Miss Irene Lemke, Miss Eleanor Irving and Miss Adeline Greiman, placed second; Shannon and Bohn, Inc., funeral directors, placed third. I. C. Hastings, Garner attorney, presided at the queen coronation ceremonies.

State senator William S. Beardsley of New Virginia, representing Warren and Clarke counties, in a 30 minute addreess talked on the declaration of independence and the constitution. He stressed the fact that the United States is the first and strongest representative government in the world today. Clark E. Lovrien, Garner attorney, introduced the speaker.

Street sports, free attractions and ball games continued throughout the day, climaxed by a pavement dance at night.

Barley Growers Might Enter Contest

Any Hancock County farmer operating a farm of at least 40 acres in size and raising at least 500 bushels of barley this crop season is eligible to enter a sample in the malting barley contest sponsored by the Master Brewers' Association of America. The contest is open to any variety of six-rowed barley, excepting Trebi. Two rowed and hulless barleys are barred.

Entries will be receivable up to September 1. A 1-bushel sample of barley representative of a lot of at least 400 bushels must be submitted. Get in touch with the county agent if you are interested in this contest.

COOL CANNED FOOD QUICKLY

You can't kill all the bacteria in your canned meats, fruits and vegetables during processing—not even when using the pressure cooker; therefore, say foods research workers at Iowa State College, cool your jars of food quickly following canning. This prevents the growth of thermophilic (heat-loving) bacteria which thrive at high temperatures.

Experiments have shown far less spoilage in food which is quickly cooled and then stored in a cool place than in food allowed to cool gradually and then stored in a warm place.

Other factors influencing the keeping of canned foods are: freshness and cleanness of food, length of processing, tightness of seal and where acid has been used. Acid (lemon juice or vinegar in small amounts) is valuable in controlling bacteria in foods which contain but little acid, such as corn and beans.

YOUNG KLEMME LADY PASSED AWAY MONDAY MORNING

Funeral services for Miss Ava Sandrey, who passed away at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sandry, early Monday morning, were held this Wednesday afternoon at the Klemme Methodist Church with the pastor, Rev. Wm. Zabilka officiating, and A. Wellemeyer, funeral director, in charge.

The following young men acted as pall bearers: Dorance Day, Byrnes Missman, Clarence Kluckhohn, Clarence Lemke, James Carlson, and Wilbur Arnold.

Interment was made in the Klemme Cemetery.

Obituary

Death is no respecter of persons and again this fact was brought vividly to our minds when another life just in its prime slipped into the great beyond early last Monday morning.

Ava Mearl Sandrey was born in Twin Lake township, May 1, 1912 and passed away early Monday morning, July 8, 1935 at the age of 23 years, 2 months and 7 days.

Ava's public school education was secured in the vicinity of Goodell, finishing her eighth grade work in Goodell and later graduating from the Belmond high school with the class of 1929. She later completed a course in the Hamilton business college at Mason City. From the time of completing her course there she has worked for the Spencer Chick Hatchery at Spencer, Ia., until last fall when, because of ill health, she was compelled to give up her work.

It would be nine years tomorrow that Ava united with the Methodist church in Klemme. She appreciated the value of the Bible and when she became bedfast she started making an outline of the sacred book. She remarked to her pastor some time ago that she was ready to leave this world and quite willing to go.

Ava has been a long and patient sufferer. She was forced to go to bed early in November and though at times she seemed to be improved yet she was growng weaker and weaker, but was always cheerful.

Besides her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sandrey, she leaves to mourn her passing four sisters and two brothers. They are: Mrs. Gerald Janssen of Newell, S. D.; Mrs. Ervin Dihlman of Mason City; Francis, Ethel, William and Wilson, at home.

COUNTY LETS COAL CONTRACT

At a meeting of the Hancock county board of supervisors Monday, July 1, contracts to furnish coal for the court house and county home were let. The bid of $8.25 per ton for 65 tons of Eastern Kentucky coal delivered at the bin in the court house at Garner was awarded to the Woodford-Wheeler Lumber company of Garner. The Fullerton Lumber Co., of Britt was the successful bidder for 110 tons of Eastern Kentucky coal to be used at the county home. This concern's bid was $7.53 for the coal on track at the town of Duncan.

At this session J. C. Hanson was awarded a contract to install 3,100 feet of tile along the highway east of Klemme.—Garner Leader.

Someone Is Wrong

Postmaster General Farley, the head of the democratic party, claims to represent 22,000,000 democrats; the republican national chairman claims 16,000,000 republicans; Dr. Townsend claims 25,000,000 followers; the Rev. Father Coughlin 16,000,000 and "Huey" Long counts his "joiners" at 20,000,000. That figures up to better than one hundred million, not counting in the hundred and one other issms. The entire population of the country is around 130 million. Deduct that part of the 130 million not old enough to vote and evidently someone has set the list of their followers altogether too high.—Nashua Reporter.

Persons accused of crime in Maryland may be tried by a jury or by a single judge, as they prefer. It is said that a majority prefer to trust their fate to one judge than to a jury of 12.

Where's That Receipt

—AND HE COULDN'T FIND IT!

For the want of a receipt arguments are started—enemies made—money lost. A receipt is an important document in any business, and many times through neglect or just plain forgetfullness the receipt is lost or else you failed to get one.

If you paid with cash your chances for proof of payment are small, if there is any question of doubt as to whether you paid that bill.

If you paid by check you have a positive legal proof of payment, payment by check is the best way to do business, then there will always be a record of your transactions. We invite you to open a checking account in this bank today It is the modern and most business like way for the business man or housewife.

BUSINESS

Many years before the development of the theories of government of the present administration, Elbert Hubbard the famous sage of East Aurora, N. Y., stated:

"Business is done on enthusiasm, on hope, amination and good cheer.

"When you repress men, suppress them, destroy their freedom of initiative, then business languishes.

"It is just as wrong to kill freedom of business as it is to kill political freedom or mental freedom.

"Granting that big business must receive a certain amount of supervision, yet this supervision must be the work of economists, of businessmen, of workingmen, of women who know their own hands; for before a man can intelligently supervise he must have worked at the thing he is supervising.

"To have the business of the world supervised by the demagogue and politician is like putting a man in to lead the orchestra who had no technical knowledge of music.

"The domination of business by theorists will eventually destroy the business fabric, kill initiative, stop production, throttle organization and put the quietus on commercial evolution.

"And without commercial evolution there will be no civilization."

Cool Drinks Easily Made For Hot Days

SERVE A COLD DRINK

There's nothing to restore lost energy after a hard day during warm summer weather like a long cold drink of something sweet or spicy and very cold. Miss Lenore Sullivan, member of the home economics faculty at Iowa State college, has several unusual recipes for hot weather drinks, both for party and family use.

One of them is called Dutch drink, and is made with equal part of freshly made cocoa and coffee and one quarter of the amount of thin cream. Mix well with ice and shake until foamy before serving.

Several other recipes recommended by Miss Sullivan follow:

Tea Punch

A cupful of water, 2 cups of sugar, 1 cup of tea infusion cooled gradually, 1 quart of charged water, 2 quarts of strawberry juice juice of 5 lemons and 5 oranges and the juice from a tin of pineapple poured over a block of ice with a cup of maraschino cherries

Currant Punch

Two cups of currant jelly are melted and mixed in a pitcher with a cup and a half of strong tea, juice of three lemons and three oranges. Ingredients should be thoroughly blended before ice is added.

Grapefruit Punch

Juice of one grapefruit and 2 oranges is combined with one cup of sugarand alloped to stand for an hour. This is poured into a pitcher with two bottles of pale gingerale and enough crushed mint to give a distinct mint flavor.

Summer Punch

One cup of lemon juice, two cups of cooked juice from fresh raspberries (or raspberry sirup or cordial) and a small bottle of carbonated water are stirred into a pitcher. A thin slice of lime is added to each glass before filling.

Orange Ice Punch

Two quarts of orange ice are put into a punchbowl just before serving. Over this pour the juice of 6 oranges and 4 large bottles or pail ginger ale. Thin slices of oranges cut in halves float on the surface and green mint cherries may be added for color.

ECLIPSE OF THE MOON WAS VIEWED HERE

Monday evening was a clear cloudless night and the total eclipse of the moon was a beautiful sight observed by many here. The eclipse was total for the entire U. S. and the first for the whole country since 1927.

The curving edge of the earth's black shadow cut into the moon at 9:12 p. m. It took 57 minutes for the moon to pass completely into the black shadow circle and then for a period remained darkened, becoming bright again at near mid-night.

We wonder if the scientists will ever be able to lengthen the span of life until all the installments are paid.

TREES and CONSERVATION

Little has been said about trees in Iowa's conservation program. Too little, in fact. However, trees are included in the list of natural resources to be conserved. They must be conserved for after all, our game and fish life depend upon it. Without trees our beautiful State would lack much of the outdoor recreation it now affords.

The importance of forestry has been seen by the government and many States. Colleges teach it and it has become one of the foremost professions of today. Forestry was not primarily designed to protect the forests as a source of wood supply. It has a vastly wider meaning and a much larger importance as a part of conservation.

Our streams are none too clear today and partly for the reason that many trees have been removed from the banks of streams and draws. In turn, our lakes and streams have become filled with soil and silt to a dangerous extent. The depth of the water has been lessened and through this the fish life has been endangered and in many cases entirely removed certain species which must have clear, cold water for their home. The former deep holes, rock and gravel bottoms necessary to the life of many species of game fish has been covered by silt allowed to wash in by the removal of trees.

The value of trees to agriculture is important enough alone to warrant saving the life of every tree. It has been estimated that 21 million acres of farm land in the United States has gone out of cultivation because of destructive soil erosion. Tho maintenance of forest cover on such lands would be means of prevention of soil erosion.

Without trees mny of our birds would have no home and without birds our trees would have less beauty. About beauty, what affards more beauty to a natural landscape than trees?

Many of our game animals make the trees their home. The trees in many cases furnish them with food. This brings to mind yet another thought. Our nut and fruit bearing trees in addition to yielding a profor the owner also furnish many birds and animals with their sustainance.

If one has in mind the removal of trees from his land and particularly from along a stream bank, considerable thought should be given such action. Wood obtained from these trees will keep many people warm during the winter months but may cost the value of his land for agricultural purposes and deprive him of a taste of fish or game that sometime will compare with that of being warm.

Heavy Small Grain Crop Being Now Harvested In North Iowa

SMALL GRAIN CUTTING UNDER WAY IN NORTH IOWA

Every Indication For Wonderful Crop For Hancock County

Binders have taken to the small grain fields in North Iowa and by Saturday night thousands of acres of grain will have been cut and shocked in Hancock County.

The oats looks the best here of any crop in several years. The small grain is high and thick and there should be an abundance of fine straw this year. The yield is expected to top records here.

In fact the oats is so big in Hancock County that many farmers cut it with a mower first. The cut is made about eight to ten inches from the ground. The heads are so heavy that when the mower sickle cuts the lower part of the stalk, the cut off part sticks back into the ground like arrows. Then the next cut is taken with the binder and the grain bundled. The bundles are so big that two bundles make a big shock. In many places the oats are so big and thick that shocks are built two tiers high in order to have enough room to walk beteen the shocks.

In one field the oats was so big and thick that the farmer had to run two binders, one hitched directly behind the other in order to bundle the grain. He had the binders fixed so that half of the cut grain was elevated directly back to the second binder which helped tie the bundles.

And.....the corn is still growing so fast that the stalks pull the roots right out of the ground. One farmer has driven stakes along the corn rows and ties down the stalks to keep them from interfering with the airplanes.

North Iowa beats the world when it comes to growing big crops.

A model husband, girls, is all right if you pick o working model.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. MARY CAMPBrLL

At the conclusion of the service at their residence early Friday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Drake and children accompanied the remains of Grandma Campbell on the long auto trip of 150 miles to the "Swan cemetery" near Sully, Jasper Co., Iowa, where they arrived at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Rev. Vern Butler, pastor of the Community Church of Sully, and some fifty relatives and friends awaited their arrival in the grateful shade beneath stately oak trees in this, the oldest cemetery in Jasper county.

The kindly pastor spoke of the "many 'Mansions"; he read the obituary; the casket was closed for the last time and sturdy grandsons carried the flower-laden casket to its final resting place beside grandfather, Isaac Campbell.

Here was a gathering of people who had loved Grandma Campbell and will cherish her memory for the good deeds done in this community during the active years of her life. A kindly old gentleman was heard to remark, 'She and I were school mates." An elderly matron was telling, "She was my teacher." All eyes were moist and all heads uncovered as the pastor read the final service at the grave.

Obituary

Mrs. Mary Emma Campbell was born at Delaware, Ohio, Oct. 18, 1857 and died in Klemme, Iowa, July 9, 1935 at the age of 77 years 8 months and 21 days.

She was married February 22, 1879 to Isaac Elza Campbell and to this union were born five children: Mrs. Lynn Drake of Klemme; Leslie Earl of Pacific Palisades, Calif; John Bruce of Gilman, Iowa; Floyd of Sioux City; Clara, who died in infancy.

Her parents moved to Sully, Iowa when the deceased was very young. She lived in that community most of her life. After her husband died Mrs. Campbell moved to Klemme and made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Lynn Drake. Before her marriage Mrs. Campbell was a teacher in the public schools.

Besides her own children she leaves to mourn her death 14 grand children and a number of more distant relatives. Her sickness was of a very brief duration.

State Of Iowa Will Play Santa Claus

OVER THREE MILLION TO BE RETURNED BEFORE SEPT. 30

State Payments Will Be Made From 3 Point Tax Funds

DES MOINES — Iowa property owners will receive $3,744,000 or approximately $1.29 a $1,000 of assessed valuation, in "three point' tax refunds before Sept. 30, the deadline for the payment of the second half of 1935 taxes.

Since farm property values exceed those of Iowa's cities and towns, the rural districts will receive $2,524,559 and cities and towns $1,219,486, unofficial figures compiled from board of assessment and review statistics show.

The distribution among the counties will be made on the basis of a total assessed valuation for the state. Hancock County, with a total assessed valuation of $27,382,595, will have $27,439 of tax money to be returned.

TOO MANY DROWNINGS

The Conservation Commission has issued an appeal to persons visiting Iowa lake and streams, to prevent by cooperation. drownings. Tho Commission explains that more than the usual number of drownings have occurred to date and the appeal is given to prevent any additional drownings if possible. A few suggestions are listed here to assist in the campaign:

1. Avoid taking chances. Warn others not to.

2. Swim only in waters with which you are acquainted. Better still, confine your swimming to the areas designated, or beaches where life guards are on duty.

3. Be extremely careful when wading. Many of our lakes have dangerous "step offs". Wading is extremely dangerous in the larger streams. Recent high waters have created numerous deep holes.

4. Overloading a boat is one of the greatest hazards on our lakes. It is better to make two trips with half as many passengers.

"SKEETERS"

If mosquitoes keep you from working out doors try this. Equal parts of oil of citronella, sweet oil and oil of tar (obtainable at any drug store). This mixture applied to the neck, arms and legs before going out and renewed at intervals will help to reduce your discomfort The oil of tar may be omitted if desired.

ACHIEVEMENT DAY WILL BE AUGUST 15 AND 16

Dates for 1935 Hancock County Achievement Day have been set as Thursday and Friday, August 15 and 16. More money will be spent in prizes this year than ever before and the County Agricultural Society, under whose auspices the show will be staged, is looking forward to a bigger and better exhibit in all classes of livestock with more township 4-H club booths and more women's booths.

An added attraction for the last day of the show, August 16th, will be a horse pulling contest in which not less than 20 teams are expected to be entered. There will be two classes: one class made up of the horses weighing 150 and less and another 150 pounds and over. A dynamometer, operated by a specialist from Ames, will be used to measure the pulling strength of the animals. Persons having horses to enter, will please communicate with the Farm Bureau office.

GO FISHING!

If worries beset you, burdens weigh you down and money matters plague you—go fishing! Maybe you won't catch a fish, Maybe you will not get a bite. Go fishing anyhow, for its the best known remedy for the blues ever invented. Sitting idly in the shade with a fishing rod in your hand you will find yourself reflecting on pleasant things and wholly forgetfull of everyday worries. You'll rest your mind and body, and you'll find yourself at peace with the world. Chances are that before the day is over you'll discover that the things you are worrying about are never going to happen anway. If the President of the United States can sidestep his job long enough to go fishing, then any Iowa citizen can do the same thing. This country doesn't go to pot when a president goes fishing, and neither will your affairs get all tangled up if you go. What you need—the only thing, in fact that most of us need—is a dose of fishing. It's the world's best medicine.

2. Train and retrain for industrial, technical and professional employment opportunities.

3. Provide for continuing attendance at high school and college.

4. Work relief projects designed to meet the needs of youth.

An estimated 150,000 youths will receive job training of some sort; 100,000 will be aided in finishing their high school courses; 120,000 will be assisted in pursuing a college education, and additional thousands will be given financial aid to enable them to take post-graduate work. Many more may be absorbed without cost through the finding of jobs in industry.

The smallest unit in the set-up will be the local or community committee. This will be under the supervision of the state administration, which in turn will report to Washington headquarters. Efforts will be concentrated upon youths who are out of work and no longer financially capable of attending school.

The tasks of the various divisions, according to the announcement from the White House, will be "to mobilize the industrial, commercial, agricultural and educational forces to provide employment and other practical assistance to the unemployed youth; to develop and carry out a co-ordinated program of work and work opportunities, job training and retraining for unemployed youth, utilizing all existing public and private agencies, industries, schools and various training facilities which can assist in meeting various phases of the problem."

How Money Will Be Spent.

These tasks will all be undertaken with a view of furnishing youths (who are eligible for relief) compensation for work they may do on their new jobs, or expense money if they are going to school.

Boys and girls over sixteen who have been forced to stop attending high school because they have no money for car fare, lunches and incidentals will be given an average of $6 a month to enable them to complete their courses.

An average of $15 a month will go to unemployed high school graduates under twenty-five to help them finish college. Institutions will receive no subsidies; the students will be expected to pay part of the cost themselves, as they have in the past. There is a rule now that those receiving work relief shall not account for more than 12 per cent of the enrollment of institutions of higher learning, but this will in all likelihood be revoked or changed to make room for the NYA proteges.

Post-graduate students who have been unsuccessful in their job-hunting will be carefully selected for aid in completing their study. A special effort will be made to find jobs for graduates of the class of 1935.

An average of $15 a month will be paid to youths given outright work-relief jobs; since one of the qualifications is that they must be from relief families, it may be assumed that the head of the family will be holding a work-relief job at better pay.

Regarding this type of worker the plan says: "Particular stress should be laid upon the building and use of recreational and community centers which, depending upon local conditions and the energy, ability and enthusiasm of local youth groups, can be anything from an old-fashioned "swimming hole" to a complete center including all types of athletic facilities, community houses, library, classrooms, etc. In most communities these recreational centers can be made self-liquidating. Substantially all of the direct labor in the creation of these centers shall be performed by youths themselves, working as apprentices under the direction of skilled mechanics."

Take National Census.

Work relief youths will also be kept busy taking a national census of all youths in the United States between sixteen and twenty-five.

To secure employment, the NYA will ask industrial employers to hire youths as apprentices under special arrangements. Governmental bureaus, county, municipal and state, will be asked to take apprentices and train them for public service. Concerning the latter, the NYA said:

"The opportunity afforded by this type of work should be used to develop a new type of trained public servant, rather than to merely add to the immense groups of men and women who now clamor to get into government service."

It has been called possible that this may foreshadow a permanent civil service organization, like that of England.

Job training and job placement are to be accomplished by:

(a) Utilizing available school shop facilities for initial or basic trade training, through special late afternoon or evening classes, taught as work relief projects by needy unemployed persons qualified to teach the special field.

(b) Utilizing available private factories, industries, or plants, at times when they are not in regular operation, as places to hold training classes, taught by needy unemployed.

(c) Using public libraries for training youths to function as librarians and enabling the libraries to be kept open for the public a greater number of hours a day.

Co-operation Needed.

"This undertaking will need the vigorous co-operation of the citizens of the several states," said the President.

"It is recognized that the final solution of this whole problem of unemployed youth will not be attained until there is a resumption of normal business activities and opportunities for private employment on a wide scale. I believe that the national youth program will serve the most pressing and immediate needs of that portion of unemployed youth most seriously affected at the present time."

The NYA is a definite step toward solving the problem of unemployed youth in America. What will be done about the remainder of the six or seven million unemployed youths in other parts of the world is being considered by Geneva's International Labor office, with the object of doing away with the discontent that often results in serious social dangers. It is particularly worried about the method which is being used to a wide extent by many European nations—military conscription. Forced labor camps and incorporation of young men in other organizations more or less of a military character it deplores:

"Attendance at such unemployment centers should be strictly voluntary, should exclude any idea of military training, and these centers should only undertake work which under prevailing economic conditions would not be carried out by workers in normal employment."

Serious Problem.

In the ILO, subjects usually receive two discussions, one when they are first called to attention, and another the following year, after all the available information has been gathered. This question is considered too urgent to hold over.

The real seriousness of the problem, according to the ILO, "is to be found in the particularly unfortunate consequences of continued idleness for young people, more than older persons. If adults, after long years of work, are unable to face the difficulties of life, on the other hand how can young people on their own resources successfully resist the demoralizing effects of prolonged unemployment?"

The remedies for the situation, as held up by the ILO, are pretty much the same as the plan which the President has outlined for this country. They include work-relief, job placement and apprenticeships, and vocational training and retraining.

The ILO suggests that the minimum age for leaving school and being admitted to employment should be set at fifteen years; that there should be more technical schools, and that its plan, similar to the President's, should be carried out.

It will be interesting to see what effect the President's NYA will have on the youth of our nation. Says he:

"The yield on this investment should be high."

Citizens Paid to Live in French Communes

Just the spot we have been seeking all our lives. Towns where no taxes are paid and where on the contrary one is paid to live there.

It may sound like a fairy tale. Yet it is a fact, confirmed by official documents, that 24 French communes in the Jura mountains, on the Swiss border, with a population of about 10,000, pay no local taxes. Instead each inhabitant receives a yearly dividend, ranging from 100 to 200 francs.

The explanation is quite simple. In years gone by these communes became the proprietors of spruce and fir woods in the vicinity. These woods are exploited in businesslike fashion by each commune so well that there is a profit after all the communal expenses have been paid. This profit is divided among the inhabitants.

La Chaux des Crotenay, one of these communies, which is an attractive mountain resort, may be taken as one of the best examples. During the present century nobody has paid any local taxes. Instead, each inhabitant, including women and children, has received a yearly check averaging 150 francs.

Further, each family has been furnished with free firewood and, since the allowance has been quite generous, half of it has generally been sold, adding to the dividend check.

Whenever a citizen of the commune desires to build a house, he is given a free plot of ground. Also free stone and sand. Finally, the village doctor is subsidized by the commune and, according to the contract, he has reduced his fees.

Many square miles of Jura forest land are owned and exploited by the communes and the villages have literally gone into the wood-cutting and wood-selling business. The profits are devoted to municipal expenses.

The dividend-paying villages are naturally proud of this unusual distinction, and, as naturally, newcomers who may seek to become permanent inhabitants to get their share of the booty are not welcomed cordially.

Sartorial Evolution

Our aboriginal forefathers were in need of abundant hair, for they braved nature in the raw. Body-covering was used only when necessary for protection against extremes of weather or against foes. Modesty in displaying one's limbs arose out of the fact that the habit of wearing skins gradually solidified into a social custom; co-maturing with the clothes-habit was tonsorial affability. Whereas, formerly, body hair was a material advantage for the body, it slowly molded itself into an aid toward masculine and feminine beauty.

SEES INFLATION A SLOW PROCESS

A Real Danger for the Future, Col. Ayres Tells Banking Groups.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—Present prospects do not indicate that inflation severe enough to cause further dollar devaluation will come soon in this country, but as an ultimate development it seems to be a very real danger, Leonard P. Ayres, Vice President Cleveland Trust Company, said here tonight in an address before the Graduate School of Banking. He believed this statement to be true "unless the government enters frankly upon a policy of issuing fiat money with which to meet its expenses." At present that does not seem to be in sight, he said.

The Graduate School is operated jointly by the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University to offer advanced studies for bank officers.

"We have so enormously increased the capacity of our banking system for credit expansion that it is difficult to see how we could have a vigorous business revival without having it develop into a credit inflation," Colonel Ayres declared.

Inflation a Slow Process

If inflation does come it will be a slow process, he said, pointing out that in Germany, France, Belgium and Italy it took about five years to develop from the time when the governments entered upon policies of financing large peace-time deficits by bank credit up to the time when the public generally began to spend money rapidly because of fear that it would still further depreciate in purchasing power.

"If we are to go through such a period here it would seem likely that it might last rather longer than the corresponding periods did abroad," he said. "Its beginning would date from the spring of 1933 when we left the old gold basis for our money and entered upon the policy of financing large governmental deficits by the sale of Federal securities mainly to banks rather than to private investors.

"The method that we are following is the one that proved disastrous in Europe for in all those countries including Germany, the increasing issues of money that caused the inflations were not mere printing press issues of fiat currency, but were secured by government bonds and notes discounted at the banks. Nevertheless, the process is inherently a slow one."

Among the clearest lessons taught by the European experience, Colonel Ayres asserted, is that there are "no good hedges against inflation." He added:

Did Not Lighten Debt Burdens

"One of the strange facts about these inflations is that while they destroyed the values of most existing debts, they did not succeed in lightening the debt burdens of either the people as a whole, or of the corporations.

"Inflation destroys the value of bonds and mortgages and so confiscates the property of these holders of obligations and hands it over to the shareholders and the equity owners. However, it introduces so many new economic difficulties that these share and equity holders are at once forced to incur new indebtedness so that when stabilization comes the problems of debt are about as troublesome as they were before, or even more so."

The five requisites of inflation were listed by Colonel Ayres as first, a period of sustained active business; second, a rising stock market; third, real credit expansion; fourth, greater outflow of gold "than we can tolerate which would force us to cut our currency entirely free from gold"; and fifth, continued large budget deficits in government operation.

A PROPHECY

Significant economic developments to be expected in the next decade are listed by a prominent business writer as follows: (1) Higher standard of living. (2) Continued advances in technical processes of production. (3) Factory built houses, better and cheaper than hand made houses. (4) Somew at cheaper money. (5) Faster travel. (6) News printed by radio. (7) Mechanical cotton picker, revolutionizing the South. (8) Cheaper electric power. (9) Better distribution of goods; more chain stores. (10) Another depression five or six years hence, preceded by an inflationary boom.

TWO QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Why is it that one farmer raises 100 bushels of corn to the acre, and the other one, on the other side of the fence, raises 25 bushels to the acre? Why is it that one farmer produces 100 pounds of pork on five bushels of corn, and another uses 25 bushels? Not until power machinery, scientific principles of soil fertilization and restoration, rotation of crops, diversification of crops and economical feeding are applied to the farm, will the farmers' problem be solved, says a farm authority.

BANKING READY

NEW YORK. — There is abundant evidence that banks are in an unusually favorable position to finance a period of industrial growth, says the June issue of "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association.

An official survey on June 10 indicated that the Government of the United States, through its loans, was the potential owner of more than half of the existing world stocks of American cotton.

PRACTICE HAS BEGUN FOR "THE BOHEMIAN GIRL"

Practice for the "Bohemian Girl" has begun. Monday night about 60 people from all over Hancock County met at the C. D. of A. Hall in Garner to practice the choruses of this famous opera. Mrs. Bennett of Mason City, one of north Iowa's most noted teachers of voice, was the leader. Several people tried out for solo parts. Accmplished musicians from other communities will entertain after each practice. Tuesday night Earl Deam and wife, of Mason City, appeared in two violin numbers and a girl's trio sang.

The committee would like more men, women, boys and girls to join this chorus. The training received is well worth the time spent. The next meeting will be next Monday, July 22nd, at 8 o'clock in the C. D. of A. Hall in Garner.

MOSQUITOES, STABLE FLIES IMPEDE IOWA FARM WORK

Abundant rainfall and continued high humidity in most sections of Iowa have made conditions favorable for serious nivasion of mosquitoes, plant lice, fleas, stable flies, buffalo gnats or black flies and other small winged pests.

Besides the great discomfort—although more or less temporary—caused human being by these pests, there is the danger of possible malarial outbreaks and livestock losses believes Dr. Carl J. Drake, state entomologist.

Some farmers report that working in certain fields it not only very difficult because of the large numbers of mosquitoes, but also that their horses suffer severely from the constant attacks of stable flies. Attacks of the flies are especially severe about the horses ankles. In northwest Iowa farmers are reported as having been forced to stop work in the fields near streams because of the presence of black flies or buffalo gnats, considerably smaller insects than mosquitoes but whose bites are more toxic. These tiny insects can kill chickens and livestock if the pests are present in large enough numbers and their attacks are prolonged.

To control mosquitoes, Dr. Drake advises that their natural breeding places—such as temporary pools—be drained if practicable; if not he recommends use of an oil-pyrethrum spray. This spray as made up for large parks and city use, consists of 4 gallons 20 percent concentrated pyrethrhm, 5 gallons 40 percent cocoanut oil soap, 50 gallons water and 200 gallons 32,36 gravity fuel oil. These amounts may be reduced to permit use on the spray in small quantities. The soap and water should be mixed first and thoroughly agitated for about 15 minutes, then add the oil and pyrethrum, continuing a slow stirring for 10 or 15 minutes. This spray mixture should be used within a half hour, otherwise the oil may separate from the rest of the ingredients This spray, if applied lightly, can be used on garden pools and temporary ponds without fear of causing destruction to animal or plant life; it is not poisonous to human beings. Pools abundantly stocked with fish are not bothered with mosquitoes. Stable flies breed mostly in the edges of old straw piles where moisture is retained. To control these piles Dr. Drake recommends that the piles be restacked to avoid the usual layer of loose straw around the base of the stack—where the flies' eggs are laid.

For detailed information on the control of the above pests write to the Department of Entomology, at Iowa State College, Ames.

TELLS HOW BANKS AIDED PROGRESS

Economist Describes the Ways Banking Institutions Have Contributed to Development of United States

OMAHA, Nebr.—Privately owned banking, despite its faults, has served America well, William A. Irwin, Professor of Economics, Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, declared in a recent address here on "Banking in a Changing World."

"Under the leadership of individuals banking has helped to bring this country to a foremost place in economic development among the nations of the world," he said. "The small community has been developed by the individual bank. The frontiers of America have been pushed forward by the help and counsel of the individual banker. The shocks of wars and depressions in a century and a half have been withstood with the assistance of the individual banker.

Change May Be Necessary

"It may be that we have reached a tide in the affairs of America when new methods are needed. It may be that we have come to a point where the individual should be submerged for 'the greatest good of the greatest number.'

"It may even be that complete centralization of the banking system has become an economic necessity in our complicated social life. But the banker ought to be satisfied that these things are so before he should give up his fight for the system we have known. We came to greatness under that kind of banking; we should not give it up without unmistakable proof of the absolute necessity of such a change."

The American Pattern

Professor Irwin said that the proposal which has been advanced for coordinating banking operations in the national interest under "a 'Supreme Court' for banking is typically American and ought to have the most serious consideration of those elements which are clamoring for political control, which is typically un-American." It is not wise, he said, to oppose changes as such, but that bankers should "see to it that change, if and when it does come, shall preserve all that is good in the past and stick as closely as possible to the American pattern of things."

Banking is properly a conservative profession, he pointed out, and should cling to practices and principles of banking that are, and always have been fundamentally sound.

"It is to its credit that so large a group of its members never faltered, even in boom times, in their allegiance to those sound principles," he declared. "We probably owe our salvation from chaos to that fact."

BANKS AND COLLEGE LAUNCH NEW SCHOOL

Aims to Offer Studies in Advanced Banking Subjects to Bank Executives—Public Duties of Banks Stressed

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. — The Graduate School of Banking, an unprecedented educational project, operated under the joint auspices of the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University, with 220 enrolled students from 35 states and the District of Columbia, inaugurated here in June its first resident session.

The states represented and the number of registrants from each were as follows: Alabama, 2; Arkansas, 2; California, 2; Connecticut, 9; Delaware, 3; District of Columbia, 6; Florida, 2; Georgia, 3; Idaho, 1; Illinois, 8; Indiana, 2; Iowa 1; Kansas, 1; Kentucky, 2; Louisiana, 3; Maryland, 1; Massachusetts, 9; Michigan, 5; Minnesota, 1; Missouri, 5; Nebraska, 1; New Jersey, 31; New York, 50; North Carolina, 8; North Dakota, 1; Ohio, 7; Oklahoma, 1; Oregon, 2; Pennsylvania, 32; Rhode Island, 1; Texas, 5; Virginia, 6; Washington, 1; West Virginia, 1; Wisconsin, 4; Wyoming, 1.

The annual resident sessions of the graduate school will be supplemented between periods by continued extension work for the students at their homes. The purpose of the school is described as being to offer in a three year course a comprehensive approach to an advanced study of the various administrative problems in banking and trust institutions. The teaching proceduro is a combination of the case system and the lecture discussion method.

The Curriculum

The curriculum embraces banking administrative problems and policies, bank investment problems, legal and managerial aspects of trust business, legal phases of bank administration and economic problems in the field of money and credit. The public relations and responsibilities of banks and methods for meeting these obligations are emphasized in the courses.

It is planned to set up similar schools in cooperation with other universities in various parts of the country. The school will add 200 registrants each year for two years until 600 are enrolled.

The trustees of the Educational Foundation of the American Bankers Association have set aside funds from the foundation to grant 100 loan scholarships of $150 each to qualified applicants for attendance at the school.

MUSSOLINI CALLS WAR WITH ETHIOPIA UNAVOIDABLE—"REVOLT" IN HOUSE.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
©, Western Newspaper Union.

STANDING atop a cannon, Benito Mussolini told 15,000 Black Shirt volunteers and the world as well that in the matter of Ethiopia "We have decided upon a struggle in which we as a government and a people will not turn back. The decision is irretrievable."

W. P. George

Unless Emperor Haile Selassie gets right down on his knees to Il Duce, the war in his dominion will begin in September when the rainy season ends. No one expects the "king of kings" to submit tamely, so other nations are advising their nationals in Ethiopia to get out of the country. William Perry George, the American charge d'affaires at Addis Ababa, was authorized by the State department to advise American citizens to leave, or take whatever other steps he deemed necessary to protect their safety. Nearly all these Americans are connected with Seventh Day Adventist and United Presbyterian missions.

Mr. George transmitted to the emperor the rather curt reply of the American government to his majesty's appeal for aid in stopping Italy. Secretary of State Hull, writing by authority of the President, told the emperor the United States was "loath to believe" the two countries actually will engage in warfare as they are both signatories of the Kellogg pact. The note also pointed out that the arbitration proceedings might arrive at a satisfactory decision.

The chances that war might be averted by the arbitrators seemed slight. Those gentlemen met again at Scheveningen and their session was disrupted by the Italian representatives when a spokesman for Ethiopia set forth the fact that Ualual, scene of the bloody clash last December, is well within the Ethiopian border.

Apparently the British have given up trying to check Mussolini and are now devoting their efforts to plans for getting British and British Indian subjects out of Addis Ababa on short notice. Troop-carrying planes at Cairo and cruisers, sloops and troop ships at various near east ports were being made ready for this service.

France evidently intends to let Italy go ahead with the Ethiopian adventure, and, like the United States, is not inclined to participate in an economic blockade of Italy such as was unofficially suggested by England.

REVOLT in congress against alleged dictatorial attempts of the administration reached a climax when the house, by the decisive vote of 258 to 148, rejected the "death sentence" in the utility holding companies bill as passed by the senate and demanded by the President. The record vote came on a motion to substitute the house bill placing utility holding companies under regulation of the securities and exchange commission for the senate bill which prescribed the dissolution of the holding companies of more than first degree beginning in 1940.

Rep. Brewster

The adoption of this motion killed the "death sentence." After substituting the house bill for the senate bill, the perfected measure was passed by a vote of 322 to 81.

Immediately after this action, the house voted unanimously for an investigation of alleged lobbying by both the supporters and the foes of the utility measure. During the debate on the bill it was frequently charged that the capitol was swarming with utility company lobbyists, and then came two serious accusations against the other side. Representative John H. Hoeppel of California, Democrat, asserted an unnamed administration lobbyist had offered to get California's relief allotment increased if Hoeppel would vote for the bill as the President wanted it. This didn't greatly impress the house, but later Representative Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, Republican, charged that Thomas G. Corcoran, a young brain truster who is co-author of the administration bill, had threatened cessation of construction of the $37,000,000 Passamaquoddy dam project in the congressman's district if Brewster should vote against the "death sentence."

Mr. Brewster said he did not believe the President was aware that such tactics were being used by his aids or would countenance them, and Rankin of Mississippi and Moran of Maine defended Mr. Roosevelt. But the President's contact man, Charles West, and Postmaster General Farley's lobbyist, Emil Hurja, had been so active among the house members that the resentment of the lawmakers was aroused and they glady directed that the lobbying charges be investigated.

CRITICS of the President's program have made up their minds that he is deliberately building up a "crisis" which will provide excuse for a demand for constitutional amendments in the campaign of 1936. Their conviction was strengthened by Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Congressman Samuel B. Hill, chairman of the interstate commerce subcommittee, urging the passage of the Guffey coal bill regardless of doubts as to its constitutionality.

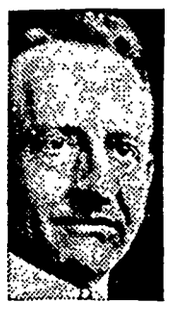
President Roosevelt followed the suggestion of Attorney General Cummings that the legislation should be put through congress because "the situation is so urgent," and that the question of constitutionality should be left up to the courts.

The President, admitting that coal mining is in itself an intrastate transaction, nevertheless wrote that the final test of the validity of the Guffey bill would depend upon whether production conditions directly affect, promote, or obstruct interstate commerce. The Supreme court, in the Schechter NRA case, quoted a previous opinion that mining, manufacturing, and other forms of production were as local in their character as the production of crops, and hence beyond the reach of congress.

THE secretary of the treasury appeared before the house ways and means committee which was trying to formulate the new tax bill wanted by the administration, and declared that, depending on the rates of taxation adopted, the measure might bring in as much as $1,000,000,000 a year or as little as $118,000,000 annually. As the representative of the administration, the young secretary declined to advise as to the rates, though the Republican members of the committee tried to pin him down to details. The legislation outlined by the President includes taxation of inheritances and gifts, higher surtaxes on million dollar incomes and graduated income taxes on corporations. It is believed the committee's bill will not go outside these limits.

Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader, predicted that congress either would recess and reconvene in the fall or would put off enactment of the tax bill until the session beginning January 3 next.

IN THE battle between Senator Carter Glass and Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the federal reserve board, the former has, at this writing, scored the most points. The astute Virginian extracted from the Eccles-Currie banking bill most of the radical provisions that would have led to government or public ownership of the federal reserve system, and, indeed, practically rewrote the measure. Then his subcommittee handed it on to the senate banking and currency committee, which promptly gave the bill its approval, without a record vote, and after making only two minor changes.



Sen. Glass

Governor Eccles and Secretary of the Treasury Morganthau expected to be called before the committee and were prepared to tell why the bill would not suit the administration, but the committee didn't give them a chance.

As passed by the house, the banking bill would give autocratic powers over the banking system to a politically dominated federal reserve board; and the party in power would have the authority to force the twelve reserve banks to lend unlimited amounts to the national treasury. Under the bill as rewritten by Glass, reserve board members are to be appointed for 14-year terms and are to be discharged only for cause; chief officers of the reserve banks are to be chosen by their directors, subject to reserve board approval, for five-year periods, and the reserve banks need not buy additional government bonds unless they choose to do so.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, was the scene of a second "grass roots" convention of Republicans, the six states participating being Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. "To revitalize interest in the party" was declared the purpose of the meeting by George H. Bender of Ohio, permanent chairman. The attendance was large and enthusiastic and the resolutions adopted, like those of the Springfield conference, denounced the New Deal and called the voters to the defense of the country's Constitution and free institutions.

Under the surface there was a good deal of irritation, for the old timers in the party organization feared to lose their influence, perhaps with reason.

HUEY LONG'S conquest of Louisiana was completed when the legislature gave final approval to 25 bills designed to destroy local political patronage in the state and otherwise to strengthen the senator's dominance. He now has in hand all the weapons he needs for the elimination of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans and his followers.

OUR army lost an able and distinguished officer in the death of Maj. Gen. Stuart Heintzelman at the army and navy hospital in Hot Springs, Ark. The grandson and son of army officers, General Heintzelman was graduated from West Point in 1899. After service in the Philippines and China he was sent to France as an observer, and when America entered the war he held high staff assignments. He won the D. S. M. and was decorated by France and Italy. From the inception of the CCC General Heintzelman was in charge of federal reclamation projects in Missouri until last February, when he was given command of the Seventh corps area.

"AMERICAN COMMONWEALTH POLITICAL FEDERATION" is the high sounding title taken by the representatives of various radical organizations for the body which they organized at a conference in Chicago. The majority faction in the meeting issued a call for a national convention at which a new party shall be created, and until this is done the "A.C.P.F." will function. Its officers are Congressman Thomas R. Amlie of Wisconsin, chairman; John Bosch, Atwater, Minn., of the Farm Holiday association, vice chairman; Alfred Bingham of New York, son of former United States Senator Hiram Bingham, Connecticut Republican, executive secretary; and Prof. Paul H. Douglas, treasurer.

Production for use was the principal plank in the conference platform. Other planks declared for union wages for persons employed on relief projects and other labor objectives, for a "soak the rich" tax program, and against war.

The call for creation of a third party was opposed by Congressman Vito Marcantonio of New York city, and he withdrew from the conference together with several of his fellow townsmen. Communists were barred from the meeting, and this, too, caused loud protest. Senator Nye of North Dakota unexpectedly appeared and advised against formation of a new party for the 1936 campaign.

INVESTIGATION of the administration of the Virgin islands by a senate committee was certain to be lively. The very first witness heard, Charles H. Gibson, was threatened with jail by Secretary of the Interior Ickes for removing official documents from the files. Mr. Gibson, who was government attorney for the islands until Ickes ousted him, had testified rather vaguely against the regime of Gov. Paul M. Pearson.

Gibson testified that Governor Pearson had exceeded his authority under the law, was unpopular with a large section of the population of the islands, and was not frank in his administration. To support his testimony Gibson introduced several letters which were the documents to which Ickes alluded.

IF GEORGE, former king of Greece, returns to his lost throne it will be without Elizabeth of Hohenzollern who was his wife. This Rumanian princess has just been granted a divorce from George in Bucharest on the ground of desertion. There was no contest, for George, now living in London, paid no attention to the suit.

It was believed in Bucharest that Elizabeth will soon marry her secretary, Alauander Szanavy, a handsome forty-year-old Greek, and that they will run a model farm which Elizabeth bought recently for $3,500,000.

ALDERMANIC investigation of relief administration in New York city has brought a report from the committee recommending that relief workers be paid less than the wages in private industry, that "chiselers and parasites" receiving $24,000,000 a year of relief funds be prosecuted, and that "existence carpetbagging" by out of town relief executives be halted.

The typical weekly allowance to a single person to meet every need was reported as $7.30 a week, ranging upward for families to $19.50 for a family of nine. The number of persons on relief was reported as 1,400,000.

AGITATION in favor of a federal sales tax and for abolition of the "nuisance" taxes is the purpose of an organization called the Committee of Americans which is being formed by Charles H. Sabin, Jr., one of the organizers of the Crusaders. Mr. Sabin says the committee hopes to present to the President and congress a petition bearing a million names. He admits some of the wealthiest families in the country are represented on the committee but denies that it is to be regarded as a "wealth lobby" against the "tax wealth" program of the President.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER reached his ninety-sixth birthday and spent the day quietly on his estate near Lakewood, N. J., with his nearest relatives. There was no celebration of the anniversary, not even a birthday cake. According to his physician, Mr. Rockefeller is in better health than he has been for the past three years.

GEN. HUGH JOHNSON assumed his new office of federal works relief administrator for New York city. "Robbie," his ever present secretary, fended off the reporters for a day, but let them in then, and to them the general walled:

"I hate this thing! It isn't helping anybody, anywhere. When the source of money is cut off we'll be right back where we started. It's disheartening to sit here, knowing that when the funds are gone, the jobs will be gone."

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE proclaimed the establishment of an AAA adjustment program for the 1935 rye crop which will include benefit payments of amounts not yet disclosed. Representatives from 16 rye growing states met in Washington to discuss the program and outline plans for its operation.

Farmers from the principal wheat producing states met with AAA officials and gave their approval to a tentative flexible plan for the payment of benefits to wheat growers.

JAPAN'S beautiful inland sea was the scene of a terrible disaster that cost 104 lives. The steamer Midori Maru, crowded with holiday passengers, collided with a freighter in the foggy night and sank almost immediately. Rescue boats picked up 91 of the 166 passengers and 56 of the crew. All the victims were Japanese.

War Possible, Four Kinds
10,000 Million Questions
Our Large Gold Pile

Russian newspapers, speaking officially, accuse Japan of stirring up trouble along the Russian border, to "bring on grave complications."

Arthur Brisbane

A protest carries Stalin's warning to Japan that a continuation of these incidents "may have serious consequences in the relations of Russia and Japan, and peace in the Far East."

If Russia and Japan should have a serious disagreement, Russia's equipment in the way of submarines and airplanes, all within 400 miles of Tokyo, would probably enable other countries to stop worrying about Japan's military plans.

England does not approve of Mussolini's plans in Abyssinia, and the question arises, Would England close the Suez canal, the short cut for Italian troops and supplies to Abyssinia? Will Italian airplanes be forbidden to fly over the Suez canal area?

The answer as to closing the Suez canal by Britain would probably be no. England would not voluntarily provoke hostilities with Italy. She really wants peace. But, how easily war could come—French against German or English against Italian or Japanese against Russian!

Germany undertakes to establish a "family tree" for each of its 66,000,000 inhabitants, which means asking, answering, writing down ten thousand million questions.

The sensible answer would be, "I descend from Adam, with heaven knows how many mixtures in my blood on the way up," but Hitler would not accept that. Young couples getting marriage licenses are questioned: "What were your eight great-grandparents like? Did they have any Negroid or Jewish blood?

"Were they fond of telling the truth? Did they have imagination, driving power?"

Ten thousand million foolish questions would seem to set a new record.

The "greatest" country in the world, supposed to be the most intelligent, owns some tons of gold, called "worth" nine thousand million dollars.

We do not use the gold, or even invest part of it in adequate national defense, that would protect it. We are afraid some one may come, with better airplanes and submarines than ours, and steal it; so the government will dig a deep hole, far from the coast, put in it a huge safe, and hide away the gold lump, that is used only to impress the financial imagination of the world and keep foreigners from knocking down our currency.

Dolores Anne Diamond, only four, surprised teachers in a Schenectady kindergarten. She said the games for little children bored her, and she could recite the alphabet backward.

Dolores was moved to the first grade, and could have gone higher. She has the intelligence of a child of fourteen.

Usually it is better for a child to develop slowly and normally. The infant prodigy is usually dull later. Perhaps little Dolores will be an exception, like Mozart, and, at eighteen, as wise as Hypatia, with a happier ending.

Lloyd George, in spite of his seventy-two years, returns to active politics. He hates the "arid atmosphere of political controversy" and returns to active politics only because he believes that world conditions are growing worse, and "from the point of view of peace are worse than before 1914."

Miss Koutanova, Russian, twenty-one years old, jumped 25,426 feet from an airplane without oxygen apparatus and landed in a cabbage field after turning over four times before her parachute opened. She claims the female record.

Russia is teaching millions of young people to use parachutes, the first step in curing nervousness in flying. Here we have only a small handful of excellent pilots, but the masses of our population know as little about aviation as they do about "geometry in space."

Mr. Werner Kahn, district leader of "Hitler Youth," says Nazi doctrines have become Germany's real religion, and "the time must come when entry into the Hitler Youth organization will take the place now occupied by Catholic or Protestant confirmation." Furthermore, the young gentleman says, "I declare to all enemies of Hitler Youth that the fuehrer is our faith and national socialism is our religion."

Millions of us go through life getting little sunshine, rarely if ever looking at the stars, our interests not unlike that of the entomologically interesting tumblebug, that spends its life in the field, rolling little balls of manure into a burrow. He doesn't even realize that there is a sun, or stars, and many men are like him, although they may "own fine country places."

NO OCCASION TO BE ALARMED BY FEARSOME NAMES

If you are one of those nervous folks who get upset and frightened when the family doctor spiels off some of those jaw-breaking names, just make yourself familiar with the technical terms for some of the more ordinary aches and pains. Many times the old saw—the bark is worse than the bite—is true enough. For instance, if the doctor said the baby was affected by "advanced octaegia resulting in lachrimation" it would only mean that a severe earache was making the child cry. Just for fun memorize the following medical terms and spring them on your friends:

An earache is otalgia; backache, notalgia (do not confuse with nostalgia, meaning homesickness); headache, cephalgia; toothache, odontalgia; ribpains, costalgia; anl thighpains, meralgia. Any painkiller is an analgesic. Also, smallpox is variola; chickenpox, varicella; whooping cough, pertussis; and measles, morbilli. Near-sightedness is myopia; far-sightedness, presbyopia; crossed eyes, a strabismus, while total blindness is amaurosis.

If you blister, it is vesication, and if you have difficulty in speaking or swallowing, it is dysphonia or dysphagia, as the case may be. Anorexia means that you suffer from loss of appetite; a cacoethic condition designates merely a bad disposition, or a valgus signifies knees. Anyone who drinks milk galactophagus. A fat person is pose, but pufiiness denotes tumtion. A condition of laziness or laxation is nothing to be alarabout. It is only atony.—Pathfi Magazine.

The great state of Texas can boast of 30 species of frogs and toads; the Okefinokee region, with one-two-hundredths the area of Texas, has 20. With varied habitats to suit the requirements of different species; with unlimited breeding places in the cypress ponds, cypress bays, and prairies; with abundant rains in normal years, and with a warm and humid climate, the Okefinokee is a veritable frog paradise.

Let copious showers fall during a warm summer's day and by nightfall the bedlam of amphibian voices arising from the swamp waters and their tangled margins is beyond description. The field herpetologist's trained ear picks out of the din the shrill peeping of the oak toad, the droning roar of the southern toad, the plainly uttered "gliks" of the cricket frog, the insect-like chirp of the little chorus frog, the machine-gun bark of the pine-woods tree frog, the hogshead-thumping notes of the Florida tree frog, the deep, hollow roll of the gopher frog, the "clung" of the green frog, the pig-like grunts of the southern bullfrog, the clattering chorus of the southern leopard frog, the hammer strokes of the carpenter frog, and the lamb's bleating of the narrow-mouthed toad.

Alligators and Birds.

Men still living can speak of the times when it appeared as if "a feller could walk across Billys lake on 'gator backs." To this day the Okefinokee remains perhaps the best stronghold of our famous corrugated saurian. Suwannee lake in particular, where the alligators are protected, provides unequaled opportunities for making intimate studies of the habits of wild individuals.

Of the approximately 180 species of birds recorded in the Okefinokee region, scarcely one-half remain during the summer and breed. While some of these summer residents move southward with the approach of cool weather in the autumn, their places are more than filled by hardier species coming from the northern states and Canada to find a congenial winter home in the swamp.

By far the largest mammal of the swamp, and perhaps the most interesting, is the Florida bear. From early times it has attracted the swamp hunters—not so much because of any particular value of its hide and flesh as by reason of the thrill that comes from matching wits and strength with so formidable an animal. An additional reason for the pursuit of the bear is its numerous depredations on the hogs that range through the piney woods and the swamp borders. At a hog's prolonged squealing the residents become instantly alert, for it generally means that a bear has seized the animal and is making off with it toward the depths of the swamp.

Guns are hurriedly lifted from pegs on the cabin walls, the dogs are called together with the hunting horn, and the chase is on.

Primitive Life of the People.

For generations the sturdy, self-sufficient, and gifted people of the Okefinokee have led a rather isolated and primitive existence, some of them on islands within the swamp and others along its borders. They represent some of the purest Anglo-Saxon stock left in our country, though a few of the families have a slight mixture of French Huguenot and even Seminole Indian blood.

In ancestry, speech, folksongs, and general social ways there is a marked affinity between the residents of the Okefinokee and those of the Appalachian mountains. In each case there has been comparative isolation, tending to preserve the cultural heritage from Britain of several centuries ago. The picturesque regional vernacular contains various elements representing survivals from the Elizabethan age that have dropped out of general American usage.

The old-fashioned square dance, or "frolic," still holds sway here as a leading form of social recreation. The fiddle, the handclap, the footbeat, and the "calling of the set" by the leader all lend their aid to the rhythmic performance. The late fall days—the season of "hog-killin' an' cane-grindin'"—see these social expressions at their height.

NO SPARE ROOM

By LILLIAN MacDONALD

© Associated Newspapers. WNU Service.

"ONE thing does make me happy," said little Mrs. Lane.

"That's fortunate," said Simon, her husband. "What is it?"

"That we simply can't entertain relatives from the country. We literally couldn't put them up."

Simon took his pipe out of his mouth, looked solemnly around the 20 by 14 living, davenport-sleeping, dining room and grinned.

"Might try 'em in the bathtub," he said. "It's large for its size."

"Never," said his wife who was nice but not overweighted with a sense of humor. "No—we're safe. You see, I have six aunts, four cousins, seven uncles, two perfectly nice but enormous grandmothers and grandfathers, a mother and father; they're all large eaters."

"Say no more. I understand," waved Simon, who was hanging a picture. "How does this look?"

"Nice, but crooked."

His wife gently tilted it and put her head to one side. "This unpacking is awful. I'm hungry again already."

Simon sighed, vanished into the kitchenette and produced a delicatessen chicken, radishes and a bottle of beer.

They ate.

The bell rang vociferously.

Simon rose, wiped off chickeny fingers and went to the door

"Simon," his wife heard (she'd had presence of mind to dash for the bathroom with the remnants of food, and hide).

"How you've grown! I simply never would have known you. And married? I must see your wife. I hope she is worthy of you for you were always such a good, sensible boy."

Rapturous hugging and audible kisses followed. Hilda washed her hands vigorously, removed a black spot from her nose and hastily powdered it. Then she tiptoed to the door, holding fast to the handle.

"Hilda!" shouted Simon.

She entered to find the room usurped by the largest person she'd ever seen in her life.

Hilda smiled and came forward with hand outstretched.

"I am Simon's great-aunt Matilda Warren," said the invader. "I heard you were in town and so I made an appointment with my dentist (I have to get a new plate) and I just know you'll love to have me for a few days—until he gets through."

Hilda strove to master a groan.

"I'm terribly sorry but we have only one room. You see Simon is not rich, yet. He and I just managed this little place, which is cunning for two. But we eat and sleep and live and work, all in this little room."

"Have you no kitchen?" said the great-aunt. Her tone sounded menacing, somehow, but it might have been imagination.

"Simon, come show Mrs. Warren the kitchen" in a stifled voice from poor Hilda.

"A closet that's all it is! Ridiculous to try and keep healthy in such an absurd way. Er, have you no bathroom?"

"You show her the bathroom," in anguished tones from Simon.

"H'm A nice big tub. Now, children, it seems to me I could make myself right comfortable in that bathtub for the few days Doctor Jones will take to fix my plate. Now, just don't say a word. I'll take my blankets I always take around with me, for one can never tell if hotels and boarding houses are really clean and sanitary. I always take two blankets and I've this nice steamer rug, used when poor Uncle Warren was alive, and we went to Europe (dear, how sick I was!) Well, we'll fix it fine. Here," she opened her suitcase and threw out the formidable but spotless blankets, a Navajo rug, the steamer rug and assorted pillows.

"No, you just get me a light dinner, a steak (only see it's thick) and a few potatoes and cauliflower and some nice oranges and cake (I only want a light dinner) will do fine! I'll help you with the rest of your unpacking and seems to me you might have done without a piano until you had a bigger apartment and then you could have had the stove outside that closet and been better able to keep house; but I guess you will be able to manage, Hilda. You might give me a tune, something lively; and I will fix that steak myself as soon as Simon brings it in. I'm never so happy as when I'm cooking a good dinner." She stopped breathless, while Hilda merely gasped.

"But Aunt Matilda, there really isn't room. You'd be most frightfully uncomfortable. You couldn't sleep in the bathtub, possibly. Really you couldn't. It might drip and give you rheumatism."

"Now just you leave everything to me. I'll fix everything and here is a nickel, for I must find the exact time from Doctor Jones about my plate." Somehow she swept the hapless couple aside, and found the telephone. "Where'd you put the nickel?" she cried.

"It's not a nickel telephone," said Hilda. "Call anyone you want."

"Telephone service goes with the rent, I suppose. I've heard of it. It's nice to feel you won't be out of pocket by my stay, anyway."

Simon looked at Hilda, speechless. Behind his great aunt's back he kicked at her blankets. "Sh! She'll kill you if you mark them! I don't believe fat people are always so good-natured and your great aunt is worse than all my poor relatives put together."

Great aunt beamed. "Doctor Jones says he'll fix it all within a couple of days," said she. "Now let's get busy. I don't like this dull brown paper and those pictures look awful queer to me. What are they?"

"Japanese prints," murmured Hilda. "A good American picture is good enough for me. Heathenish, they look. Why not try and sell them for a few cents and get a good, cheerful landscape with a few nice cows, or a little girl's head."

"We like them, Mrs. Warren, and perhaps, as you are good enough to think you can rest comfortably for two nights in a bathtub, you won't mind our keeping our prints where they are."

"Keep what you like, my dear, only I think it makes people depressed and queer when they live with queer things, that's all."

"Where is she?" whispered Simon, entering with the ingredients for the "light" meal.

"In the bathroom making her bed. I simply won't make up beds in bathrooms, nor will I be responsible for barbarians." As Simon looked a trifle hurt, she flew to him and putting her arms around his neck whispered, "I'm sorry. But our scheme for no spare room scarcely seems a success."

"I forgot Aunt Matilda. She only comes to town for her plate about every four years, dear, that's all. Anyway, she will stay only one night. I'll see to that."

"But how, Simon? We can't murder her. Nothing else would get her out."

"Listen. When I was a kid I walked in my sleep."

"Well?"

"I might get up early and turn on the shower."

Hilda giggled. "Oh Simon, you mustn't. It might kill her."

"You don't know Great Aunt Matilda. I do."

Stones Reveal Viking Visit to Minnesota in Year 1362

Belief that a tribe of ancient Norsemen visited this territory in the Fourteenth century was voiced by F. T. Gustavson, Pequot, Minn., nationally known anthropologist, after a study of several stones at Cormorant lake, near Detroit Lakes, Minn., known as the "Norse Anchor Stones," write a Detroit Lakes United Press correspondent.

After viewing the relics, Gustavson declared that the runic inscription on the famous Kensington Runestone fits them entirely. The inscription reads:

"Eight Goths and 22 Norwegians on exploration—journey from Vineland westward. We had camp by two skerries one day—journey north from this stone. We fished one day. When we returned home we found ten men red with blood and dead. Ave Marie. Save from evil! Have ten of our party by the sea to look after our ships in 14 day journey from this island. Year 1362."

Gustavson explained that a day's journey meant at that time the distance traveled by boat along the coast of Norway, about eighty miles.

"The lake with the 'two skerries' is Cormorant lake," he added, "while the sea where the ships were left is probably Hudson bay. The party must have come down the Nelson river, Lake Winnipeg, and the Red river, and by this stream to Cormorant lake—where vestiges of the Norsemen still remain."

Tell-Tale Nails

An experienced doctor, when feeling the pulse of a patient, will often assist his diagnosis by a casual glance at the finger-nails. The healthy nail is renewed once in 110 days, but the rate of growth is retarded by disease. Nails are highly specialized portions of the skin, and as such are subject to bodily ailments, of which they always show signs. Serious illnesses always leave distinct transverse grooves in the nails, which gradually disappear with new growth; also, broken bones and fractures leave deep ridges which do not disappear for 18 months or more. People constitutionally strong have large, heaped-up nails, and thick nails usually denote a strong personality—though the converse does not hold good.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Endearing Terms in Stones

The favorite engagement ring of the Nineteenth century was set with gems whose initial letters formed a word of endearment such as "dearest" made up of diamonds, emeralds, amethysts, rubies, sapphires and turquoises. The idea of a sentimental message conveyed by the stones of a betrothal ring especially appealed to the Victorians. In 1862, when the prince of Wales tendered his engagement ring to Princess Alexandra of Denmark, it was set with stones whose initial letters spelled "Bertie," the prince's pet name. There was no gem beginning with the letter I, but the court jewelers substituted the jacinth.

Masons and Presidents

Presidents Washington, Jackson, Polk, Fillmore, Buchanan, Johnson, Garfield, McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Harding, Franklin Roosevelt were Masons. Fillmore is thought by some writers to have been initiated into the order at an early age but to have recanted during the anti-Masonic agitation. Claims of Masonic membership have been made for other Presidents, including Jefferson, John Adams, J. Q. Adams, Monroe, Tyler, Pierce, Lincoln and Grant, but without proof. In addition to these, Madison, Van Buren, W. H. Harrison, Taylor, Hayes, Arthur, Cleveland, B. Harrison, Wilson, Coolidge and Hoover were non-Masons.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

LETTER IN THE WALLET

"I AM searching for my brother."

The speaker had driven up to a farmhouse in Wet Mountain valley, at the foot of the Sangre de Cristo range in Colorado, and was telling his story to the farmer.

"George came West in 1860, eight years ago," he continued, "and after he left our home in Illinois we heard no more of him. I am very anxious to find out if he is alive or dead. I met a grocer in Denver who said that he sold George a bill of goods that year, and that my brother left some money in his care, saying that he would not need it in the mountains, and that he would come back for it in the fall, but he never returned. All I can learn further is that he was headed for these mountains."

The farmer shook his head. "I do not know anything about it," he said, "but you must stay here, tonight, and in the morning we will see."

The next morning Skinner and his host went through the valley asking questions, but no one knew anything about his brother. At last Skinner decided to go up into the mountains, on the chance that he might find some traces of the missing man, and to this end he hired a guide and spent the summer wandering about, following every likely lead, but without success.

Autumn came. It was time to return to the valley. On the way Skinner and his guide camped one night at timberline on the eastern slope of Horn's peak. Nearby stood the remains of a cabin, and Skinner idly explored the long-deserted place, finding nothing of interest but an old leather wallet, wound around with wire. This he put into his pocket to be examined at leisure.

During the night a snowstorm commenced, and in the morning the two men packed hurriedly and started for the valley. The wallet was forgotten for the time being, but sometime later Skinner remembered his find, and carefully opened it. Its contents caused his heart to leap, for it was a letter written by his brother George about six months after he left Illinois.

The letter related that George had found a wonderfully rich mine. He was planning a trip to "the settlements" to spend the winter outfitting for the next spring, when he planned to return to the mine. Realizing the hazards of travel through the mountains, George had given the location of his mine in this letter, which he was leaving in his cabin, and also asked that anyone who found it should notify his brother in Illinois.

Skinner said nothing about his discovery; but as soon as spring came he went to his guide of the previous year and said that he was anxious to begin his search where it had been broken off—at the old cabin on Horn's peak.

The location was not hard to reach; but when they arrived, they found everything changed. Snowslides had peeled the face of the slope; trees had been carried away, great rocks had slid down and others from above had taken their places. Nothing remained as it had been, and the cabin had disappeared entirely.

Skinner was greatly disappointed. Still, he thought, he might find something more in spite of the changes made in the scene, and so he and the guide spent the entire summer at the place in the hope of finding some further trace of George, or of locating the mine. But fall came again, and they had learned nothing. They reluctantly started back.

They followed a different route from the one they had taken before, and the trail led them along the face of a steep precipice. It was a dangerous place: rocks loomed high above them and the bottom of the gorge was far below, while the footing was narrow and insecure. One of the pack-burros began to plunge and rear, and finally it fell off the trail, rolling down into the depths below them.

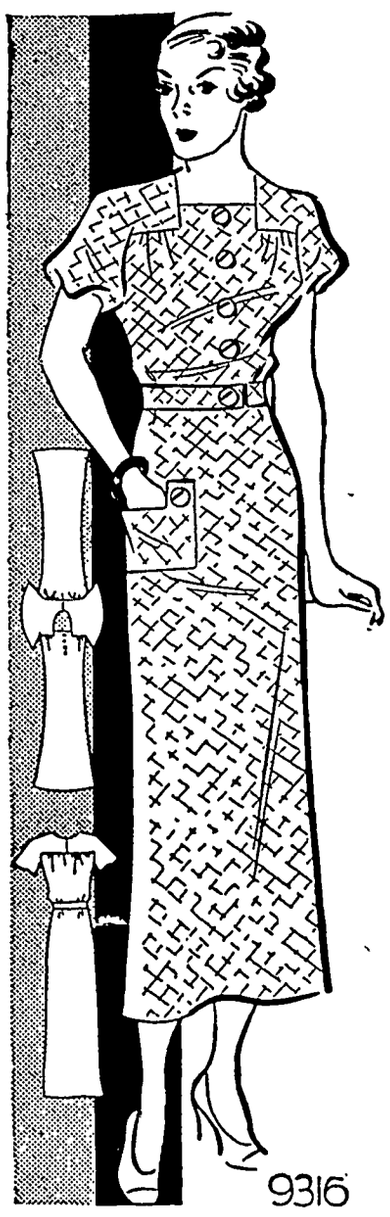
As soon as they could safely do so, Skinner and the guide climbed down to get the animal's pack, for the burro itself had been killed in the fall. As they approached the dead animal, they saw two skeletons, one of a man and the other of a burro, which had apparently been there for years.

It seems a coincidence too apt to be true, but when the articles strewn about were collected, a book was found among them which proved to be George Skinner's diary, and showed that the skeleton must be that of the missing miner. The diary referred to the wallet left in the cabin, and its last entry was apparently written the day after George left the mine. The camping outfit which had been packed on George's burro lay strewn about where the animal had fallen, and considerable gold lay nearby, showing that George's death had been accidental, and that no one had ever come across the body until the day, nine years later, when his brother made the discovery.

George Skinner's bones were interred where they lay, and his brother returned to Illinois. The next summer he came back, attracted by the idea of finding the lost mine, and for several years he spent some time in the search, but the snowslide had done its work thoroughly, and the gold remains hidden to this day.

Simplicity and Chic in Morning

PATTERN 9316



It's as fresh as the morning dew! And it was designed for all those clever women who like to put in a smart appearance at the very beginning of every new day. Three or four dresses made up by this pattern would solve all your house frock problems. And the expense will prove trifling. Moreover, this pattern has been designed so simply that to follow it will seem like a first lesson in sewing. The yoke and sleeves all-in-one with a bit of bodice fullness below, and the decorative pocket make this frock very smart indeed! Percale or gingham in gay plaids or small geometric designs would be effective. Add nobby cork or wooden buttons.

Pattern 9316 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards 36-inch fabric.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, Diagrammed Sew Chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

lemme Lady Returns From Trip Through East

ss SCHROEDER TELLS OF VE THOUSAND MILE TRIP

r Girls Spend Four Weeks On Of Canada and Eastern U. S.

(By Adela Schroeder)

fter four weeks of dashing t from place to place, trying to all things of historical and graphical interest, one returns e and someone asks, "What did see?" it is just a bit hard to er.

e four girls left Klemme June and headed for Chicago and t that night. During the four s we visited southeastern da, some of the larger cities g the eastern coast, returning e by way of the Natural Bridge inia, and Louisville, Kentucky.

e enjoyed being in Canada a t deal. The people were so dly, and really seemed to en- having tourists visit them.

hile we were at Niagara Falls the Canadian side, we visited Welland Canal, which is second s system of locks only to the ama canal. A native took in- t in our curiosity and took us the control rooms where the rator allowed us to open the es to empty a lock for an on- ing ship.

t Ottowa, the capital city of ada, we were taken through the es of Parliament, and also the adian Military school.

hen we entered the province of bec, we soon found that we e in a French speaking country. of the highway signs were writ- in both French and English. e signs were common: Relent—Slow Down; Ecole—School; ez—Stop.

n the highway from Montreal Quebec we noticed many way- shrines. Our guide in Quebec us these had been used in the by pilgrims as they walked to various National Shrines. Oc- onally a plain black cross with inscription on it marked the where someone had met death.

was not uncommon to see oxen d for drawing carts and plowing. reat number of dog carts could be seen. We were there during strawberry season. All along way children were standing h boxes, cups, or pails filled h wild strawberries, trying to them to the tourists.

Both Montreal and Quebec have y beautiful cathedrals and rches. In Quebec there are no public schools. Most of the ools are church schools and the are private.

ust as we had visited the cathe- ls in Canada, so also we visited cemeteries and former battle unds in New England. In Con- d, Lexington, Salem and Boston re-lived the scenes of the Revo- ionary War. Every village in w England has some historic rker dedicated to the Sons of the volution.

n New York City we visited dio City, climbed to the top of Statue of Liberty, and took a t trip around the Island of Man- tan, trying to imagine how this ce, with its many skyscrapers, ked when it was purchased from Indians.

t so happened that just after had entered Independence Hall Philadelphia on July 8, that the yor of the city, with other no- les, entered, carrying a wreath ich they placed upon the Liberty l commemorating the One Hun- dth Anniversary of the Cracking the Bell.

We all liked Washington, D. C. was interesting for us to compare it with Ottowa, the Canadian capital. Of course we "sat in" on a part of a session of the Senate and of the House.

On our way home, we took the skyline drive in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia and visited the Natural Bridge near Roanoke.

In Kentucky we visited Bradley's Idle Hour Farm where we saw a number of the famous Kentucky horses. We also visited the Great Onyx Cave one hundred miles south of Louisville.

During all of the 5,000 miles we traveled nothing seemed quite as inviting as the good black soil and the waving corn of good old Iowa.

MOST OF OATS NOW IN SHOCK IN HANCOCK COUNTY

The past week or so better than half of the oats in Hancock County was cut and shocked. The ballance of the crop should be well finished here this week.

Old timers tell us that the crop this year stands the thickest in the fields since 1895. In that year an exceptionally big small grain crop, as well as corn, was raised.

In some places here the oats was actually so thick that a full swath could not be cut by the binder, as the oats elevated so thick that the binding mechanism could not handle it properly.

Corn Looking Fine

Hancock County corn fields as a whole look very good and present indications point to a large crop. The hay has been exceptionally good this year.

State Fair Will Be Bigger and Better

PLENTY OF ENTERTAINMENT AT STATE FAIR THIS YEAR

Big Night Shows Feature Of Annual Iowa Fair

Des Moines—Special: Plans for the largest evening entertainment program ever presented by the Iowa State Fair and Exposition were completed here today at a meeting of the executive commitee of the state fair board.

Running through seven nights of this year's Iowa State Fair, from August 23 through August 29, the evening programs will include:

The world's fair "Festival of Light, in which batteries of powerfull searchlights, fireworks and smoke cloud effects paint sky pictures in elaborate colors; The third annual Iowa State Fair rodeo and stampede, in which prizes have been increased to the point where this will be one of the largest rodeos in the west in 1935; Night horse racing on the illuminated state fair track. The lighting installations have been stepped up nearly 50 percent, making this now the most brilliantly lighted track in the midwest; A three ring circus, embracing thrill features and circus acts of all kinds; A fireworks display of oldfavorites and new features; Music by a dozen different bands and orchestras.

All of these features wll be included in the entertainment program every night of the fair, officials announced today.

In addition, night horse shows will be featured on four nigrts, from Aug. 26 through Aug. 29, and on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 25.

HANCOCK COUNTY PAID $7,624 OLD AGE PENSION TAX

Des Moines—Collection of the 1935 old age assistance tax reported by the State Comptroller's office as of July 15, totals $1,631,454.31.

Citizens of Hancock county paid a total of $7,624 of this amount. Although the tax became delinquent on July 1, 1935, remittances continue to be made by the county treasurers throughout the state, and the above totals will be somewhat increased during the remainder of the year.

There also will be available for the use of the Old Age Assistance Commision during the fical year ending June 30, 1936, the appropriation of $1,000,000 made at the last session of the legislature. There too, is a probability of federal aid through the social security act passed by both houses of Congress and now in conference, but the amount is uncertain.

Under the law, the 1935 old age assistance tax is now available for distribution on pension awards, which activities will start within the next two weeks, according to Byron G. Allen, superintendent of the Iowa Old Age Assistance Commision. Nearly all of the tax collected will be needed to take care of the 10,000 pensions now in effect. Mr. Allen announces, that, on the strength of the million dollar state appropriation, about 6,000 additional pension awards will be made within the next two ro three months, starting soon after August first.

This will increase the total of pensions in effect to 16,000, nearly half of the eligible applicants. After that point, awarding of additional grants will depend on the availability of funds, each million dollars taking care of 6,173 pensions per year at the present average of $13.50 per month.

Corn Starting To Tassel

A number of corn fields in the vicinity of Klemme have made a rapid growth the past week and several fields show a large number of stalks starting to tassel.

LIME IS NEEDED FOR SUMMER AND FALL ALFALFA SEEDING

Farmers contemplating the summer or fall seeding of alfalfa ought not neglect the application of limestone merely because of the high moisture content of the soil or other favorable growing conditions, advises County Agent Oberhauser.

A great many alfalfa failures can be attributed to a lack of lime in the soil. Fully 50 percent of the soils in Hancock county are acid and in need of lime for the best growth of alfalfa or other legume crops.

To determine whether a particular field is deficient in lime, Mr. Oberhauser suggests that half-pint samples of soil be taken to a depth of 7 inches from high, medium and low points in the field and sent to the county agent's office for a test. The samples yill be tested free and the sender advised as to the amount of lime needed.

Where lime is to be applied to either stubble ground or ground that has been under summer fallow the application should never be mado until after the soil has been plowed though such land need not be plowed for summer seeding. The lime should be disced in and care taken that it is thoroughly mixed with the top soil.

Fall wheat ground that is to be seeded to clover or alfalfa the following spring should also be limed before th wheat is sown, but not until after the ground is plowed.

"DATED" HOT DOGS

Under a recent ruling, part of the adventure of the open road has been removed. The humble hot dog is being refined. No longer can one bite into one of the tasty roadside titbits and wonder what he is eating. The federal authorities have ruled that a frankfurter, to rate as a U. S. No. 1, must be firm and of uniform length and thickness. The preferred color is a wine shade and it must be resilient, also have a "pleasant and appealing odor and a delicate and appealing taste." That is all to the good. But when it is specified that it also shall be free from sinews, gristle, and cartilage, and must contain no beef hearts, head meat, snouts, tripe or stomach, that seems to be going too far in the way of reform. Just what is there left to put into an honest frankfurter, anyway? — Country Home.

Zambi, monkey mascot of the steamer, Delaray, was successfully operated on for appendicitis.

Very Low Prices For Corn Are Extremely Unlikely This Fall

VERY LOW FALL CORN PRICES ARE NOT LIKELY

Though still largely dependent upon Nature's whims, stocks on hand and crop prospects indicate that farmers need not expect extremely low corn prices this fall. At the same time, they should not anticipate unusually high prices for their 1935 crop, believe extension economists at Iowa State College.

At present several factors indicate that the supply of feed grains next year may not be far from normal in relation to livestock numbers. Though corn production will undoubtedly be higher than it was last year, extremely low stocks reduce the possibilities of an over supply, despite the reduced livestock numbers.

July 1, stocks of corn for the United States as a whole amounted to 200 million bushels. In 1933 the stocks were 630 million bushels July 1, and in 1934, 475 million bushels. In Iowa the contrast is even more striking with the July 1 figure this year at 40 million bushels as compared with more than 140 million bushels both in 1933 and 1934.

For a true picture of the entire situation, however, the U. S. D. A. crop estimates should also be considered. July 1, crop conditions looked like an outrun of 2 billion bushel of corn in the United States This compares with an average of around 2½ billion bushels and only 1⅜ billion last year. Iowa's indicated yield is about 290 million bushels, 100 million more than the actual harvest of 1934 but far below the average of around 400 million.

These crop estimates take into consideration the possibility of probable low yields and poor quality from frosts if the latter occur at normal dates this fall. If frosts are late and growing conditions good during the remainder of summer yields might be larger than predicted.

In view of these conditions, the economists believe it quite possible that the prospective low price for corn this fall may not materialize. A high price such as that of last December cannot be expected, but neither are the 15, 20 and 25 cent depression corn prices to be looked for.

SON OF KLEMME LADY IN NAVY AT SAN DIEGO, CAL.

Donald Baack, son of Mrs. Alma Baack, of Klemme, a short time ago enlisted for service in the United States Navy and is now stationed at San Diego, California. Donald likes it fine and enjoys the many experiences he receives.

Mrs. Baack last week subscribed to The Times to have it sent every week to Donald. No doubt he will enjoy getting hime news regularly every week.

Work Progressing At Creamery

The work of building an addition and remodeling at the Creamery is progressing in fine shape and workmen will soon have every thing completed. The new addition which is a brick, will make plenty of room for testing, weighing and an office for the secretary. A new brick front, which extends clear across both the new addition and the old building greatly adds to the attractiveness of the plant.

"Country Needs More Wind," Says Ye Ed

SEA-FARING BANKER, PRINTER MECHANIC TAKE TO WATER

The work shop of the Klemme Auto Co. the past week was alive with activity and nautical terms filled the air as saws, hammers, welding torches and electric drills created a din that resembled a ship under construction at the Navy Yard. This was all because Asa and Fred Arnold and R. A. Jorgenson decided that it was more cave-man like to propell a boat with sails rather than chug around the lake with an outboard motor. So the Editors motor boat was changed to a sailing schooner and launched with full sailing rigs on Clear Lake Sunday.

Everything was rosy. Wind was cheaper than gasoline and the life preservers stowed aboard were not needed. The craft with the sea-going Klemmeites sailed serenely on and the experience was being thoroughly enjoyed.

.....Then the air ran out of wind and the men were becalmed in waters several miles from the home port. What to do? "All men man the oars," shouted the skipper, "heave ho hard ahead." They did! About that time along came Dr. Tice and son in their motor boat. Recognizing the Arnolds as belonging to his tribe, Doc tossed a hawser aboard the schooner and towed the outfit to shore.

Horse laughs echoed from the timber as the sea-faring banker, mechanic and printer hove into view.

What this country needs more than a good nickel cigar is plenty of wind for sea-going land lubbers.

Nice Shower Tuesday Morning

A nice shower of rain fell in and near Klemme early Tuesday morning. The rain was welcomed as the ground is getting dry and the vegetation was in need of moisture. The rain delayed grain cutting for a time, but most of the grain was pretty well out of the way here.

NELSON-BERGMANN NUPTIALS HELD AT DANBURY, JULY 16

Pastor Lakota-Ledyard Churches Weds Minister's Daughter

Tuesday afternoon, July 16, at three o'clock, at a very pretty wedding service in the church at Danbury, ocurred the marriage of Miss Clara Bergmann, youngest daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Bergmann to Rev. Harvey Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Nelson of Klemme.

Preceeding the single ring ceremony, Mrs. Schrunk played Liebenstraum and Miss Helen Kemp sang "Because" and "At Dawning." The bride's father, Rev. Bergmann, performed the ceremony.

The bride was dressed in white satin and lace with a long flowing veil of tulle, and wore a lace cap, carrying a bouquet of white lilies. Her maid of honor, Miss Delpha Meythaler, of Earlville, wore a floor length dress of blue organdie and carried a bouquet of talisman roses and blue delphinium. Marlene Munson, neice of the bride and Erdene Nelson, neice of the groom, were flower girls, bearing baskets of mixed bouquets. They were dressed in peach organdie. William Gauger served as best man and Willis Thurow, cousin of the bride was the usher.

Following the service a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents and a delicious buffet luncheon served to about 35 guests.

The groom needs no introduction as he has spent all of his life around Klemme with the exception of four years spent at Morningside college in Sioux City and three years at the theological school in Boston, from which he graduated this spring. The bride is not a complete stranger here, as her father served as pastor of the Methodist Church in Klemme a number of years ago. She also is a graduate of Morningside college and the past two years taught in the Quasqueton schools.

They will make their home in Lakota where the Rev. Mr. Nelson will serve as pastor of the Lakota and Ledyard charges. Their many friends join in congratulations and wish them much success in their wedded life and work.

Gruetzmacher Apartment Nearing Completion

The apartment rooms which Frank Gruetzmacher is having built in the east part of his store are being completed. The large room which is being remodeled was formerly used only for a storage room. The remodeled room will give them an apartment with a large living room, dining room, bed room, kitchen, bathroom and a small storage room. The apartment will be modern in every respect and will be a comfortable place to live.

World's Oldest Stone Arch Railroad Viaduct

At Relay, Md., stands a viaduct that has rendered one hundred years of steady daily service carrying the heaviest trains. It is the Thomas viaduct of the Baltimore and Ohio line, the oldest of its kind in the world, spanning the Patapsco river outside of Baltimore. The 103-year-old Atlantic locomotive and Imlay coaches in use in the 1830s are here contrasted with the new streamlined train—the Royal Blue—that began using the bridge the other day on the Washington-New York route.

Venezuela Honors Major of Marines

Maj. Chester L. Fordney, United States Marines (left), who is on duty in Chicago as commanding officer of the Central Reserve area, has just been decorated by the republic of Venezuela with the "Medallo de Honor, de Instruccion Publica." The medal was presented to the major by Senor R. Carlos Lebret (right), consul of Venezuela in Chicago, at a dinner in the Adventurers' club. The decoration was awarded in recognition of the scientific results of the Settle-Fordney stratosphere ascension in 1933, of which Major Fordney was the scientific observer, and also in recognition of the contributions to education of the mathematical exhibits at the Century of Progress exposition of which the major was executive officer.

NATION BECKONS SOCIAL PIONEERS TO NEW FIELDS

In the Civil war period it was Horace Greeley who bade young men, "Go West." Many of those who had worn the blue in the great conflict sought the frontier in the hope of finding livelihood and then going on to fortune. It was their presence which made the West different from the East in ways which have never yet been reconciled.

For modern youth there is no great area of land awaiting settlers. If a college graduate seeks a place upon a frontier he must select the only frontier that is open. He must become a social pioneer in the field where urgent problems are to be taken apart and then recast in a form that shall be workable. An entire nation is waiting for adjustments in its vital affairs.

These new degree holders are equipped psychologically for the work that demands attention. During four formative years they have realized day after day that human arrangements good enough in the past have failed to continue the comfort and the security of which America has boasted.

By slow and painful steps the most able of the young people will make their way to positions of authority. As the opportunity appears they will apply their talents to the reorganization of the country in which they will be dominant.—"Uncle Dudley," in the Boston Sunday Globe.

LET US MAKE YOUR VACATION TRIP SAFER

BEFORE you start on your vacation trip, let us completely inspect your car. There is no charge for this service and it will assure you of a safer and more enjoyable trip.

For the convenience and safety of car owners Firestone has established more than 500 Auto Supply and Service Stores throughout the country, and thousands of Firestone Dealers are also equipped with complete Auto Supplies and complete Service Departments, to test and service your tires, brakes, batteries, spark plugs, in addition to power lubrication and crank case service.

AVOID THE DANGER OF BLOWOUTS

Firestone removes the danger of blowouts by preventing their main cause—internal friction and heat. This is accomplished by Gum-Dipping.

THERE ARE THREE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THAT WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM OF WHAT TIRES TO BUY:

1 "Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

— Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes.

For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death.

2 "Are they blowout-proof?"

—Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Not one of the 33 drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles, averaging 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind.

3 "Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

— Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile. In fact, unequaled mileage records of thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

Equip your car with a set of Firestone Gum-Dipped Non-Skid Tires, the safest tires ever built and avoid the dangers of skidding and blowouts.

You Always Get Better Quality at No Higher Price when You Buy a Firestone Tire with the Firestone Name and Guarantee—LIBERAL TRADE-IN ALLOWANCE FROM THESE PRICES
1 University tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.
2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.

Whre Only Kings Own Cars

In Nepal, the country extending for 520 miles along the southern slope of the Himalayas in northern India, the sanctity attached to kingship is still so strong that only members of the royal family are permitted to own automobiles. By special concession certain high officials of Nepal are permitted to own cars, but other than these officials and the family of the king no one, no matter how wealthy, may own a car. Because of this restriction the country, with a population of more than 1,000,000, had only several hundred automobiles when the last figures were obtained.

MAKE NO CLAIM OF "SURE" CURES FOR HUMAN ILLS

Can all children be immunized against infantile paralysis as against diphtheria and smallpox? That is the question which the nation's anxious mothers have been asking of Dr. William H. Park since the director of New York's health department bureau of laboratories announced the discovery of a new vaccine for the disease. In the Parents' Magazine, Doctor Park answers with a qualified, "No, not yet."

"To begin with, the process of obtaining vaccine is costly and complicated," explained the doctor. "We can make only from 200 to 300 doses a week in the laboratories of the department of health, and we have not perfected methods of storing it for future use. Of course, if we had more money, we could produce more vaccine. As it is, there is not enough to inoculate every child in the United States. So distribution of the vaccine must necessarily be limited now to those who have actually been exposed to the disease and to groups of children under five years of age whose reactions can be studied over a course of years."

In addition to cost and complication, Doctor Park declares that science is hampered in its efforts towards wholesale immunization by its own lack of knowledge.

"We know that poliomyelitis is caused by a virus which we believe enters the nervous system, not the blood stream, through the nerves governing our sense of smell. We think there are 'carriers'—people who carry this virus from one to another. We believe it is not carried by insects nor have we found any indication of any other source of infection. We know that 80 per cent of the adults are immune."

Five months is the usual duration of an epidemic, and Doctor Park is hopeful the new vaccine will protect inoculated children through one siege of the epidemic at least, if not for a lifetime.—Kansas City Star.

Wood and Cotton Supply Material for Cellulose

Cellulose is the fibrous matrial that acts as a sort of skeleton for all plant life. Its most plentiful source, wood, is about one-half cellulose. Cotton, its purest source, contains over 90 per cent of it, relates Thomas M. Beck in the Chicago Tribune.

The uses of cellulose are widely varied. Those based upon its fibrous nature are so well known that they scarcely need mentioning. The longer natural fibers, such as those of cotton, flax, ramie, jute, sisal, and hemp (but not wool nor silk, which are proteins), are woven into fabrics of various kinds. The shorter fibers, represented chiefly by wood pulp, are useless for textile purposes, but they have the property of matting themselves together to form sheets of paper.

Since cellulose is built up out of sugar molecules, it would appear to be logical to use it as a food. Unfortunately, it is completely beyond the powers of the human body to digest it. But the digestive systems of herbivorous animals are equal to the job of breaking it down into its original sugar components so that it can be assimilated. Consequently we are able to use it indirectly as food in the form of animal fats and carbohydrates.

Soy Bean Classed Among the Leading Food Plants

The soy bean has been described as one of the most important food plants in the world. It contains all the elements necessary for a balanced diet. Ground dry, it yields flour from which bread can be made; ground wet and curdled, it forms a curd that may be substituted for meat. Plucked green, it may be used as a vegetable rich in vitamins; fermented, it yields sauces; pressed, it produces oil for use in cooking. It is food for cattle. The bean cake makes excellent fertilizer. In addition to its food properties, the soy bean and its by-products have a multitude of industrial uses, ranging from a paint ingredient to a rubber substitute. Manufacturers of paint have found that soy bean oil can be blended with linseed oil in the preparation of paint, and that the paint film is made glossier, tougher and more durable. Since the oil is semi-drying it cannot be used in its entirety. The oil from about ten bushels of beans is required to paint the average farm house or barn, it is said.—Indianapolis News.

Wild-Life Diseases

The old ideas that wild animals in their native environments are always healthy, and that they die only from old age, attacks by predators, or pursuit by hunters and trappers, have been proved erroneous, says the United States bureau of biological survey. Disease is found among animals in the wild, and the fact that fur-bearing animals and game birds frequently develop to a larger size when propagated, free from disease and parasites, suggests that when forced to seek their own livelihood and protection the animals must endure many hardships. Some of these are fatal, others merely stunt their growth. The dwarfing is especially noticeable in overpopulated environments and is found to be caused by insufficient food, disease, and parasites.

"Endemic," "Indigenous"

The terms "endemic," "indigenous" especially in biological usage, are synonymous. One botanist, for instance, may describe a tree as "indigenous in California"; and another referring to the same tree, may say it is "endemic in California." There is a tendency from the medical view to limit the use of endemic to the resultant of conditions distinctly local, but not necessarily irremovable; as the bubonic plague is endemic in India, but (probably) is removable by the extermination of the rats. Whereas indigenous would indicate the resultant of irremovable conditions, as, say, of climate. —Literary Digest.

Fear May Cause Disease

In certain types of persons, emotional disturbances such as intense fear sometimes cause gastric ulcers and toxic goiter, writes Elizabeth Switzer, Oxford, Ohio, in Collier's Weekly. And in dogs, sound alone, such as that of a trumpet, is known to produce changes in the blood count, particularly an increase in the bacteria-killing leucocytes, when previous sounds of the trumpet have been accompanied by injections of antitoxin.

Orchid, Gardenia Not Mentioned

The orchid and gardenia, popular modern floral gifts, observes the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, are not even mentioned in the dictionary of flowers, where a tulip signifies infidelity, the arbutus "inseparable love," wild balsam "impatience" and barberry branch "ill temper." The blue bell is "constancy," the cornflower "delicacy," the cowslip "winning grace," the daffodil "unrequited love," and the dandelion "coquetry."

National Dish of Scotland

The haggis is composed principally of sheep's liver, beef suet and minced onions mixed with oatmeal finely ground and toasted slowly until it is light brown. All this is seasoned with cayenne, salt and black pepper and mixed to a pudding consistency with beef gravy or broth. The mixture is then sewed into a sheep's stomach and boiled slowly for three hours. It is served very hot without garnish.

After selling a building in Wall Street district for more than a million dollars and having the signed contract in his possession, the seller said to the buyer: "By the way, I forgot; we have two kegs of brown soap in the basement; wouldn't you like to buy those, too?"

In an investigation of why a Chinese cruiser recently fired on two other vessels said to be deserters, found several explanations. Some of the offending officers and crew said the shots were fired as a salute; others said they were fired as awarning; a third group denied that any shots had been fired. Anyway, no one was hit.

Curses! Curses!

A pale, proud girl turned to the big heavy-browed mna, who was gazing intently at her. He held a glittering knife in his hand. "Have you no heart," she asked in low even tones.

"No," he growled.

Many Different Kinds of Synthetic Dyes Are Used

There are many different types of synthetic dyes, from the standpoints of both the chemist and the dyer, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune. The earliest coal tar colors were either acidic or basic in nature, and so were well adapted to combine with the basic or acid groups in silk or wool, but were not so useful for cotton. Cotton frequently is dyed by mordant dyes, in which cases a metallic hydroxide, usually that of chromium, is used as a sort of adhesive between the fiber and the color; or else by the substantive dyes, which show an inexplicable affinity for cellulose.

The fastest dyes, however, and therefore the ones most frequently used, are the sulphur and the vat dyes. The former are dyes of unknown composition formed by cooking certain colorless coal tar derivatives with sulphur; they are soluble in sodium sulphide solutions and are applied to the fabric in such a form, after which they are fixed by oxidation. The vat dyes, of which indigo is an example, are reduced chemically to water-soluble, colorless substances, which are applied in solution to cloth, and then, on exposure to air, changed back into the insoluble colored material. The acetate rayons present a problem in themselves; however, there have been developed a number of dyes that can be applied to them, but to them only.

Lamu Called Dying City Also Hill of the Devils

From Mombasa to Lamu in the archipelago off the mainland of East Africa an avenue to the queerest island in the world is a point that interests visitors.

Lamu belongs to the Sultan of Zanzibar, and is rented from him by the British government.

Called by mainlanders "the dying city," Lamu was once the center of a large Arabic and Persian civilization, according to the American Express company. High Arab buildings, with copper plated doors, line its streets and, defying gravitation, lean over the right-of-way in such manner as to give it the appearance of a covered passageway.

Behind the living town is a hill where hundreds of mansions lie half buried under the drifting sand. People of Lamu call it the "Hill of Devils" and refuse to accompany visitors to the area.

Lamu women walk under a movable tent called shiraa, which in prosperous days were carried by slaves, but are now supported by four small sticks which the women hold as they walk. Like many other Lamu customs, it has been handed down from ancient times almost without change because of the absence of any outside influence on the life of the island.

Beds of Other Lands

Considering that about one-third of our lives are spent in bed, it is not wonderful that much trouble and expense are devoted to our sleeping places. In this country, observes a writer in the Montreal Herald, the healthy mattress has almost ousted the feather bed. French beds are noted for their hardness and German beds are very short. Many Norwegian beds are made to pull from recesses. The hammock rules in South and Central America. The Indians of Guinea plait most beautiful hammocks of grass. The Japanese lie upon matting laid on the floor, with a stiff, uncomfortable wooden head-rest—a bed of torture to travelers from other lands. The Chinese use low bedsteads, often elaborately carved. Their only mattresses and coverlets are made of matting.

Greenwich Royal Observatory

Greenwich Royal observatory was founded in 1675 primarily for the purpose of improving navigation but soon became the time base for England and some other countries. It was not until 1884, however, that representatives of 26 countries met in Washington and decided the astronomical day for the world should also begin there at noon. This astronomical day must not be confused with the calendar day which arbitrarily begins at the International Date Line.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Queen Victoria's Dolls

Charles Morris' "The Life of Queen Victoria" says: "We are told that at one time she was the proud possessor of 132 dolls. Although very ordinary little Dutch toys, many of them with painted wooden faces, they have all been preserved with other mementoes of the childhood of England's remarkable sovereign. Most of the dolls represent ballet dancers of the Queen's childhood in costume."

Ophir

Ophir was a seaport or region from which the Hebrews in the time of Solomon obtained gold. The precise geographical situation has long been a subject of doubt and discussion. It was probably in India or perhaps southern Arabia; at any rate, it appears from scriptural mention of the place that it was accessible by water from the towns on the Red sea.

Salt Universally Taxed

Salt is not only one of the most important articles in the daily diet of mankind but one of the earth's most plentiful substances. Yet today it is so universally taxed that it continues to be a luxury, in fact the first luxury, of two-thirds of the human race.—Collier's Weekly.

SERVICE

A few years ago service interruptions of an hour or more were common and caused little if any comment. Today the occasional momentary interruptions, which are unavoidable, bring prompt and vigorous complaint.

The high grade service which we now provide as contrasted with the more or less intermittent service of a few years ago has been made possible by the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars by this Company. We have purchased all of the available new equipment for the improvement of service and have replaced other equipment with that of the most modern design.

These expenditures have been made during the past few years in the face of reduced revenues and propaganda that threatens the very existence of this business.

TRADE TREATY WITH RUSSIA STIRS SHARP ATTACK ON SECRETARY HULL.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
©. Western Newspaper Union.

TWENTY months of apparently futile moves to revitalize the commercial relations between the United States and Russia, and then suddenly Washington announces that the two nations had concluded a one-year trade agreement under which the Soviet Republics agreed to increase their American imports by 150 per cent. In return for purchases of $30,000,000 worth of American goods Russia is to be granted wide tariff concessions by the United States.

Secretary Hull

Russia will buy railroad equipment, machinery for making new automobile models and other products of heavy industry. In addition the Soviets will buy cotton. The railroad equipment is needed badly for modernization of a weak transportation system.

In return Russia expects to sell sausage casings, certain grades of iron ore, manganese, furs and dairy products in large quantities to the United States.

The pact, concluded by the exchange of notes between Ambassador Bullitt in Moscow and Maxim Litvinov, commissar for foreign affairs, provides for no further loans to Russia and makes no mention of the more than $700,000,000 in debts contracted by former Russian governments. It is in line with Secretary Hull's policy of trade agreements. For these two reasons especially it is attacked by many Republicans and not a few Democrats in congress. Senator Pat McCarren of Nevada was one of the angriest of these gentlemen. He declared Secretary Hull was a "prize diplomatic dupe" and announced that he would demand an immediate modification of the reciprocal tariff act to rescind powers under which Hull is negotiating such treaties. Key Pittman, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, also is earnestly opposed to Hull's trade program.

WHEN one witness before the house ways and means committee, opposing the President's new tax program, called congress a "rubber stamp," Chairman Doughton and other Democrats declared they had been insulted and would hear no more from the witness. Nearly every one else they heard was as insistent in denouncing the proposed tax bill but more tactful. Most of them represented various sections of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Then the committee apparently decided that it really would be a rubber stamp, for it quit work on the tax measure for the time being and, according to report, left the writing of it to certain brain trustees of the Treasury department. The public hearings had been noisy, full of bickerings and probably of no use whatever.

Administration leaders then began planning for postponement of the proposed tax legislation until the winter session. It was said President Roosevelt had consented to this course provided a bill can be agreed upon before adjournment that shall be acceptable to all the groups whose objective is redistribution of wealth by taxation.

The prospect of an early adjournment was so pleasing to the house that one member, Deen of Georgia, was given a veritable ovation when he made a speech telling how tired the legislators were.

FIFTY thousand dollars was appropriated by the house for investigation by the rules committee of lobbying for and against bills affecting utilities interests. Representative Rankin of Mississippi declared that Representative O'Connor of New York, chairman of the committee, was unfit to conduct the inquiry because he was antagonistic to the administration. O'Connor, rising to reply, was given an ovation by the house, and promised the investigation would be thorough and impartial.

T. G. Corcoran

Already the committee has begun its work, the first witness being Representative Brewster of Maine, who declared Thomas G. Corcoran, New Deal lawyer, had tried to force him to vote for the "death sentence" provision in the utilities bill by threats of stopping work on the Passamaquoddy project. Corcoran was then put on the stand and denied the main features of Brewster's story, whereupon the Maine congressman shouted, "You're a liar." Corcoran explained with facility his activities in behalf of the utilities measure. He said he was assigned to help with the original drafting of the bill "through a direct request from the President." Senators Wheeler and Rayburn, he said, asked him to help bring about passage of the bill.

UNOFFICIALLY and informally, the general opinion seems to be that the Wagner labor disputes act is unconstitutional and will be so declared by the United States Supreme court when that tribunal is called on for a decision. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, urges labor leaders to pay no attention to claims that the law is invalid.

"Leading legal authorities of the nation are of the opinion that the act is Constitutional in every respect," he wrote, but added in a letter that he expects a court test and that the American Federation of Labor will get "the best legal talent."

Even if the Wagner law is knocked out by the Supreme court, the administration believes it has a plan that will avert at least 90 per cent of the usual number of strikes, walk-outs, lock-outs and other disorders. It is being launched in Toledo, Ohio, and has been called the "Toledo plan" because it was conceived by Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady when he was trying to settle a dispute in that Ohio city.

It has no sectional characteristics; carries no federal compulsion, and rests solely upon the willingness of workers and employers in every city that adopts the plan, to abandon the harsh economic weapons of old and substitute peaceful discussion for violence.

Mr. McGrady explained the plan this way:

A panel of business and labor leaders of equal number is chosen with a federal official to act as chairman. This official presumably would be one who has made a record in the regional labor service setup under the national labor relations board.

The employer would continue to bargain with his workers as usual. In event of a disagreement between them the workers agree not to strike and the employer agrees not to lock out or discriminate against the men as the issue is carried to the panel.

This group debates the problem and if it is unable to agree the heads of the business and labor representatives on the panel and the federal chairman continue seeking an avenue of settlement. If they are unable to agree then an appeal is made direct to the owner of the business involved and the head of the union controlling the workers.

SENATOR HUEY LONG has the political fate of his chief opponent, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans, in the palm of his hand. But he is forcing the people of the city to put the mayor out. A majority of Walmsley's followers, tired of the conflict, formally deserted him when the commission council adopted a resolution endorsing recent statements of two commissioners calling for the city to make peace with Long. The mayor, standing almost alone, declined to yield. He told the council he "would not deal with men who have been called 'crooks and thieves' by every member of the commission council."

T. Semmes Walmsley

In a caucus preceding the council session, 13 of Walmsley's 17 ward leaders voted for his resignation "for the good of the city." The mayor told them he was "going to stick from h—l to breakfast." Senator Long received a committee of the seceders and said he would call a session of the state legislature to force Walmsley out of office within 24 hours after the "old regulars" obtained approval of a majority of the city's voters for a petition requesting the mayor's removal.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT led various of his cabinet members, leaders of the majority in congress and captains of the New Deal on a week-end outing that was at once dubbed "the kiss and make up excursion." For a lot of these men had been snarling at one another in the physical and political heat of recent days in Washington and the Chief Executive evidently thought it time the quarreling was ended. The entire bunch went to Jefferson island in Chesapeake bay, Mr. Roosevelt on his yacht Sequoia and the others on a fleet of boats.

Cabinet members included were Vice President Garner, Postmaster General Farley, Attorney General Cummings, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Secretary of War Dern, and Secretary of Commerce Roper. Speaker Byrns headed a congressional delegation including Senators Tydings, Pittman, Robinson, Copeland, Dieterich, Walsh, Gerry, Duffy, and Radcliffe.

Relief Director Hopkins, No. 1 Brain Truster Tugwell, and Treasury General Counsel Oliphant also were in the party.

NEWSPAPERS of northern Italy intimated that Premier Mussolini might abandon his projected war with Ethiopia if he could find a way of backing out without losing face. But the Roman public was quite sure the duce's aggressive policy would be unimpaired. This opinion was strengthened by the sending of more troops to East Africa.

Secretary of State Hull entered the picture again with a rather mild statement expressing America's abhorrence of war and confidence in the Kellogg pact. The Italians didn't like this at all.

WHEN Chinese rivers overflow they do the thing in a big way. The Han, which joins the Yangtse near Hankow, broke through the dikes and rushed through the densely populated land, drowning about 10,000 men, women and children. The city of Hankow was imperiled and soldiers and civilians were working desperately to keep the levees from breaking.

CONDEMNATION of private land for the purpose of clearing out slums and replacing them with low cost housing units does not come within the eminent domain powers of the government, according to United States Court of Appeals of the Sixth District, at Cincinnati. The ruling, upholding the opinion of a lower court, at least cripples one of the ambitious PWA schemes fostered by Administrator Ickes. However, Mr. Ickes announced they were not going to stop the work because of restrictions but would have to modify the form somewhat. The court's opinion was given by Judges Moorman and Hicks. Judge Florence Allen dissented.

ONE of the hottest scraps of the year developed between Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Senator Tydings of Maryland over the inquiry into the administration of Gov. Paul M. Pearson in the Virgin islands. The secretary accused the senator of "whitewashing" a witness before the Tydings committee; and the senator retorted by advising the secretary to "confine yourself to the duties for which you have been appointed." Both of them were thoroughly angry and Tydings in a letter accused Ickes of seeking "cheap publicity."

Sec'y Ickes

Federal Judge T. Webber Wilson of the Virgin Islands had given testimony that exasperated Ickes and the secretary demanded that the judge be removed from office for "official misconduct." Then Ickes wrote to Tydings a letter carrying his charge of "whitewashing" and saying of the judge's testimony: "There was no cross-examination to test his truthfulness, and if any statement ever needed such a test, it was his."

Judge Wilson had told the committee that there had been "administrative interference" with his court and that Morris Ernst, counsel for the Civil Liberties union, while a guest of Governor Pearson, had threatened to put him "on the spot" in the press unless he granted a rehearing to a government employee accused of theft.

Tydings accused Secretary Ickes of "gross deceit upon the American people" by stating in an Interior department press release that Paul C. Yates, administrative assistant of Pearson, had been discharged, when "you know and I know that Mr. Yates had resigned five days before your press release was issued."

ELEVEN states of the Far West are to be represented in the next and third "grass roots" conference of Republicans. It will be held in the Yellowstone national park August 23-24, according to Mike Reynolds, state director of the Young Republican League of Montana. He said George Olmstead, Des Moines chairman of the young Republican committee, and Col. Theodore Roosevelt were planning to attend, and that among those invited to speak were Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Representative Hamilton Fish of New York and Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey.

MOST notable of recent deaths was that of Lieut. Col. Alfred Dreyfus of France, central figure of the famous "Dreyfus case" of some 35 years ago which kept France in a turmoil for four years. Dreyfus, a Jew, was then a captain and was tried and convicted of selling military secrets to Germany. He was a prisoner on Devil's island for four years and then was pardoned because it had been established that he was the innocent victim of plotters and traitors. Dreyfus served his country again in the World war.

PERHAPS it was the summer heat in Washington; perhaps there was a lot of pressure from the direction of the White House. Anyhow, the backbones of the house Democrats, recently so stiff against "dictation" by the administration, weakened most noticeably when the house took up the redrafting of the Tennessee Valley authority act. Nearly all the recent "rebels" among the Democrats fell into line and the bill was shorn of every major provision that was objectionable to the President.

This victory greatly heartened the administration forces, and they pressed forward to try for another in the conference on the utilities bill. Also in the senate they carried on a determined fight for the amendments broadening the powers of the AAA. Senators Borah and Byrd were the chief opponents of the New Dealers in this latter battle.

THOUGH the naval treaties of Washington and London have been abrogated by Japan, the American government still keeps its eye on the maximum permitted for our navy by 1942 and is making a determined effort to reach it, much to the delight of the "big navy" men and of citizens generally who believe in adequate preparedness.

Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson has announced that a ship construction program has been decided upon which calls for the construction of 12 destroyers and six submarines. These are in addition to the 15 destroyers and six submarines for which bids have been advertised and will be opened next month.

The airplane building program calls for 555 new planes during the current fiscal year. Of these, 282 will be replacement planes for those now in service and 273 will be new craft. Two airplane carriers and six cruisers now under construction and scheduled for completion in 1937 are to house some of the new planes

Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH

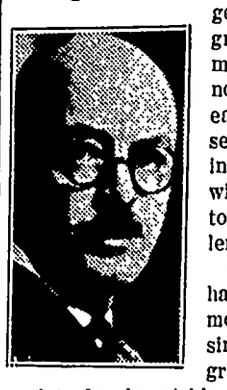
RABIES

Because the so-called dog days are in August, many people think the danger of rabies is greatest in the summer. But this is not so. The disease occurs at all seasons of the year; indeed, the cold winter months seem to increase its virulence.



Cases of rabies have decreased most encouragingly since Pasteur, the great French scientist, developed his vaccination treatment against rabies in 1884—a treatment that since has been used throughout the world, and is known everywhere as the "Pasteur treatment." But there are still too many cases of rabies. In the months of December, January and February of this winter 1,057 persons were reported bitten by dogs in Chicago alone. Of these, 28 dogs tested for rabies, showed evidences of infection.

In cities the greatest danger is from stray dogs; in the country districts the danger is from the bites of home dogs that may have been infected by stray dogs roaming the neighborhood.

The infection in rabies is carried in the saliva of the animal or person who has it. That was established as early as 1813. It is a wound infection. One usually gets it through a bite, but if one already has an open wound and the saliva infected with rabies touches it, one may develop the disease, although not bitten. Bites on the bare skin, therefore, are more dangerous than bites through the clothing for then the cloth may soak up the saliva. Bites on the head and neck are most serious, as the virus travels along the nerves to the brain, and these parts of the body are the shortest distance from the brain. I have read stories of children attacked by mad dogs where an older person running to the rescue, and unable to get between the dog and the child, has managed to throw a coat or other heavy cloth over the child's head, so that the dog's teeth have sunk into the cloth. Such persons have done the wisest thing possible in the emergency.

Rabies is most common in dogs, although all animals are susceptible. Even birds may get it. The mortality rate is practically 100 per cent if the person contracts rabies and the Pasteur treatment has not been applied in time.

Fortunately the incubation period is a long one, from two weeks to eight weeks, and sometimes even longer, so there usually is time for the Pasteur treatment to be effective, if the treatment is not delayed too long. Formerly there were only a few cities in this country where the Pasteur treatment could be given, thus necessitating a long, expensive and anxious trip on the part of an infected person. Now, however, it is not necessary to leave home. Any accredited doctor can administer the treatment.

When a dog, frothing at the mouth, is on the loose, snapping at other dogs and at children, there is usually panic in a community. Mothers run out snatching their children in; neighbors telephone frantically to each other; if men are at home, they form an emergency committee; the police are called. It is lucky indeed if someone doesn't use a gun. Using a gun is decidedly wrong, unless there is no other way of stopping the dog. Every effort should be made to capture the animal alive, for it is important to know whether the dog is really mad.

This is the proper treatment of the dog, according to a bulletin issued by the Illinois department of public health: "The dog should be securely chained or confined in a safe place and provided with his regular food supply during an observation period of two weeks. The early symptoms of rabies in a dog are variable. He may be unusually friendly or may develop a limp in one leg, or his voice may become hoarse and he may appear to have a bone or other foreign object lodged in his throat. It is dangerous even to attempt the examination of such an animal, and he should be observed by a veterinarian. If the dog remains well and healthy throughout the two weeks, he may be released and any person whom he may have bitten need have no fear of rabies resulting from the bite. If, on the other hand, the dog should manifest the symptoms of rabies during the observation period, he should be killed so that the head may be detached without mutilation, packed in ice in a double tin-lined container and expressed to the laboratory." It cannot be shipped parcel post. States and municipal laboratories are equipped to make this examination.

A person bitten by a dog should go to a physician immediately. He will clean and dress the wound properly, and if the dog is known to be rabid, he will start the anti-rabic treatment at once. Home remedies should never be relied on.

It is estimated that there are 40,000,000 dogs in this country. If we embarked on a vigorous campaign to exterminate the strays, and then would vaccinate all pet dogs in infected districts, we could virtually stamp out rabies.

SEAFOOD DISHES SUMMER'S CALL

Hard and Soft Shell Crabs Are Delicious.

By EDITH M. BARBER

SUMMER is seafood season, although the individual oyster must be exiled from our tables during warm weather. The soft shelled crab will do its best, however, to make up for the absence of the oyster.

I prefer crabs sauted in butter rather than crumbed and fried in deep fat. I do not understand why crabs are more expensive at most restaurants when prepared "a la meunlere." Home preparation this way is not only easier, but perhaps slightly less expensive.

Hard shelled crabs are sometimes boiled with herbs and spices and served hot or cold in the shells. You will certainly need fingerbowls after breaking them and eating them with the fingers. Probably, the most popular way of serving these crabs is deviled. You may buy the crabmeat "picked." Ask the fish man for the shells which are then stuffed with crabmeat mixed with a very well seasoned white sauce. Buttered crumbs are sprinkled over the top, and they are then baked.

The deep sea scallops which are larger than others are now plentiful, and can be crumbed and fried as oysters are, or they may be broiled and served with a rich sauce.

Clams of the little neck or cherrystone type, served with a cocktail sauce, make an appetizing first course for dinner. Clams casino are baked in the half shell with bits of minced bacon, onion and green pepper and will solve the luncheon or supper problem on occasions. Sometimes they are baked on beds of rock salt and served in the pie plates in which they were cooked.

Of all the shellfish, we perhaps have the greatest appreciation for the lobster which is now at the height of its season. Although never an economical dish, it is cheaper now than you will find it at any other season of the year. Nothing is better that hot broiled lobster with a butter sauce, although some people prefer it cold with mayonnaise. And of course there is lobster Newburg which needs no praise when it is well made.

Deviled Crabs

1 pound cooked crab meat
4 tablespoons butter
5 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
½ cup cream
Salt. Pepper
Paprika
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup buttered crumbs
12 crab shells

Look over crab meat. Melt butter; add flour and when blended add milk and cream slowly. Stir constantly and boil one minute. Season. Add lemon juice and crab meat. Fill crab shell with above mixture, cover with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit; until golden brown.

Soft Shell Crabs

Fold back the tapering points which are found on each side of the back shell of the crab and remove spongy substance that lies under them. Turn crab on its back and with a pointed knife remove the small pointed pieces at lower part of shell. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs, fry in deep fat and drain. Serve with sauce tartare or dip in flour and saute in butter.

Broiled Scallops

Wash and drain the scallops and let them dry thoroughly. Dip scallops in fine crumbs, egg, and crumbs again and arrange on ovenproof plates. Pour melted butter liberally over the scallops. Arrange a strip of bacon across the plate and place under the broiler fire for from five to ten minutes until the bacon is crisp and the scallops are tender. Serve on the plate on which they were broiled.

Steamed Soft Clams

Wash and scrub clams thoroughly, changing water several times. Put into large kettle, allow one-half cup water to four quarts clams; cover closely and steam until shells partly open. Serve with dishes of melted butter. Serve the liquor left in kettle in glasses or cups.

Clam Fritters

24 soft clams.
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
Paprika
1 cup milk
½ cup clam liquor
2 eggs
Salt and pepper

Make a batter of flour, baking powder, salt, milk, clam liquor and well-beaten eggs. Chop two dozen soft clams, season with salt and pepper, add to the batter and drop by tablespoonfuls into deep fat. Cook until light brown, drain on soft paper.

Lobster Newburg

2 tablespoons butter
Salt, pepper, paprika, nutmeg
1 cup cooked lobster meat, diced
2 tablespoons sherry
2 egg yolks, beaten
½ cup cream

Melt butter in double boiler; add lobster and cook three minutes, stirring constantly. Add seasonings and sherry and cook one minute. Mix the egg yolks and cream. Remove from fire, add cream and eggs and beat until smooth. Return to fire and cook until mixture just begins to thicken, about one minute. Remove from heat at once and serve on toast.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALL

THERE are some little courtesies in telephone conversations which are appreciated decidedly by those who are called up. For instance the person who calls up does a kindly thing when she discovers first of all whether the time is opportune. It is an easy matter to say:

"Is this a convenient time? Am I interrupting you in your work? If I am, won't you give me a ring when you are free, or I can call you again later on?"

Then the person called up can say frankly whether the time is well-chosen or not. She can do it graciously and another time can be set.

"Thank you so much for asking me this, as I am in the midst of something important. If I may I will call you back. If you are not going to be at home in about half an hour, call me whenever you can later in the day. I shall be home."

Unless it is interrupting the person disadvantageously, it is friendly to take the call when received, even though you have to say, "I have just a few moments, and shall be delighted to talk with you even though it may not be for very long."

Party Line Courtesies

It is a courtesy to others on a party line to make all calls reasonably short. Also when there are indications that the wire is wanted, it is gracious to say:

"I think some one wishes to use this line, so I am going to say good-by now." To this may be added, "I still have some things I want to talk over with you, so I'll call back later," or, "Will you call me back when you have time?" It is also a courtesy to say then, if you are going to be out, when you will be at home to receive the call.

One thing, frequently forgotten when making a long call, though wire is for individual and not party lines, is that some one may want to call you or the person at the other end of the line. It may be something delightful for you or the other person, will miss out if you cannot be reached at the moment. Or it may be a call from some one who is in town, and will not be able to talk with you soon again. Or it may be some important business matter that one of you should attend to about immediately and cannot be reached. So long conversations over the telephone are not advisable.

Make Decisions Quickly

Making decisions is one of the things every person has to do. Some people make them very quickly, seemingly without even giving matters their due consideration. Yet this does not indicate that they have poor judgment. It may be that pressure of business or a job has trained them to decide quickly. When a person has scores of decisions to make daily, as so many heads of business concerns do, they cannot ponder long over any one. When important decisions are to be made, they concentrate on them, and what appears to be a quick decision may be but the result of quiet thinking for some time.

The person who figuratively hems and haws over each trifling decision is laying up trouble for herself. No one's judgment is perfect, and sometimes mistakes will occur even after much mental worry before coming to the settled opinion. A quick decision will prove just as satisfactory. To permit oneself to weigh each trivial decision as if it were a mighty problem, weakens one's powers of decision. It is a waste of needed energy, to use as much of it deciding matters that are non-essentials.

Parents are well advised when they encourage their little folk to decide things for themselves. For example, let a child decide what frock it will wear among those which are suitable. It may be that the color is the only difference between two, set out for the child's choice. The spending of one's first penny or two—a week's allowance, is as momentous to a child as the expenditure of many dollars a week, when judgment has matured. The habit of making decisions is best nurtured all along the way from childhood to maturity, when it begins early.

When a child feels a decision has been wrong, he may worry, and wish he could reverse it. It is at such times that parents can help the child to realize that he is learning to discriminate, and that his judgment is growing. Encourage the child to decide quickly and then feel it is through.

Background for Maple

Maple furniture is greatly enhanced by appropriate wall colors, as the store displays demonstrate. Light blue is especially effective for bedrooms. Yellows and tans bring out the mellow quality of the wood. The fashionable white-painted walls also make a striking background for maple.

Painted Designs

In the earliest Colonial times, paint was used extensively for applying floral designs to chests and other pieces of furniture.

Although little blood has yet been shed, there has been a major casualty already in the clash between Ethiopia and Italy. It appears that the Pact of Paris, otherwise known as the Kellogg pact and the Treaty for the Renunciation of War, is about ready to be buried in an East African grave.

Kellogg Pact to Be Buried

With an eye toward the dispute between Ethiopia and Italy, Secretary Hull of our State department has proclaimed anew America's belief in the sanctity of the treaty arranged during the term of office of Secretary Frank B. Kellogg and Foreign Minister Briand, of France. He has said very definitely that the United States looks to both Italy and Ethiopia to live up to their obligations under that treaty because each nation is a signatory thereto.

But, while Mr. Hull's pronouncement must be regarded as a most commendable thing and his attitude must be accepted as properly representative of American conscience, the fact that the United States expects the two nations to live up to their obligations does not insure that result. Indeed, there is every reason to believe that the Kellogg pact is about to become, if it has not already become, just another scrap of paper.

In frequent conversations, one hears the question asked: Why is the United States taking such interest in the controversy between Italy and Ethiopia? Those nations are thousands of miles away. They represent little that has a direct contact with our economic or political life as they stand today. Why, then, should the American government interest itself in that controversy except on a basis of the American people's natural love for peace?

The answer is simple. One can go back through history and discover where every important war had its beginning over issues of no more concern to other nations directly than the issues between Ethiopia and Italy.

One must become a bit disturbed in examining the political structure obtaining throughout the world today. It is in the nature of a keg of powder. Japan and Russia are at bayonet points because Russia feels Japan is expanding in the Far East and is seeking eventually to take over a portion of the territory so long under control of the Russian Bear. Besides there is a Chinese question in the Far East with the Japanese encroachment upon Chinese affairs. This condition has left a bad taste in the mouths of many statesmen and it will be influential if and when there is a realignment resulting from the crisis in Africa.

President Roosevelt has taken some notice of the plaint of members of house and senate who have been feeling the effects of Washington's intense heat. He has partially redefined the list of "must" legislation that he wants passed before congress adjourns. Heading this list, of course, is the tax legislation and it is more than intimated that he will not agree to an adjournment until a new tax law has been passed and signed.

Revises "Must" List

Mr. Roosevelt also is inclined to insist that congress enact the bill which will deny corporations or citizens the right to sue the federal government on account of losses allegedly sustained through the government's gold policy. This legislation, from the administration's standpoint, is imperative because unless courts are denied jurisdiction in such suits it is an undoubted fact that there will be many of them filed before congress reconvenes next January. Thus, if the administration desires to avoid serious court battles in the face of the Supreme court's decision in the famous gold cases, it must prevent the filing of those suits. Once they are filed, an act of congress cannot prevent the rendering of a final decision and the adjudication of damages if any are found.

Another measure which the President wants enacted is the banking act of 1935. It has undergone considerable revision at the hands of the senate sub-committee, presided over by Senator Glass of Virginia, but the latest word from the White House is that the administration will not insist upon the radical provisions originally written into the bill by Governor Eccles, of the Federal Reserve board. The Eccles plan, it will be recalled, was regarded by many as certain to result in placing control of the banking structure in a politically minded Federal Reserve board. The Glass revision is considered to have eliminated that danger.

The President has encountered a serious obstacle in the banking bill, however, that is related to political questions. As the bill now stands, banks would be permitted to underwrite issues of corporate securities, that is, to act as agent for the sale of those securities. Mr. Roosevelt is seeking to find some way by which the underwriting bank can be prevented from investing its own funds in those securities, a danger he regards as grave.

A SPOT FOR TWO

By M. B. TOMSON

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

HASTILY the girl attached herself to his arm just as he was sauntering through a doorway.

"Darling, you've got to rescue me," she said gaily.

For a moment there was a trace of amused surprise on her face as she saw his puzzled glance.

"My error," she laughed. "Sorry. I thought you were some one else. But you'll do. I've only got to be rescued from some one who's had designs on my toes most of the evening, and I simply can't afford to lose them this early in the season."

There was about her the poised confidence of the attractive female whose garb and face are impeccably right and who knows it.

"Come and talk to me while I give the outraged toes a rest," she invited, leading him to an unoccupied corner.

She seated herself in a deeply upholstered chair, tossed a ravishingly beaded bag on the tiny table in front of her and glanced across to where he had seated himself.

"Anyway," she said, "I've seen you before somewhere."

"Somewhere, I know," he prevaricated charmingly.

"Let me see." She was thoughtful. "At the Brayton's last week, perhaps?"

"I was there," he acknowledged.

"I, too, but I left before the excitement. Were you still there when Dora's jewels were discovered missing?"

"Unfortunately, no," he shook his head ruefully.

"I always miss out on the excitement."

"So do I," she sighed.

"Anyway, that's probably where I saw you. And now that we're out of that beastly jam, tell me about yourself."

"Nothing much to tell," he said promptly.

"I really don't belong to all this."

He glanced in the vicinity of palms, orchids, gardenias, orchestras and gala evening ensembles.

"I'm Harry Gordon, just a chap from the wide-open western plains. I came East to take some post-graduate work at Cornell and somehow or other my name was placed on the list they use for the stag lines at these brawls. That's how I blossomed into higher social circles where I dance to pay for my supper."

She appraised him thoughtfully.

Darned good looking, he was. And his dress suit fitted him faultlessly.

"You might tell me who you are," he suggested.

"Cynthia Baden," she smiled.

Baden, he thought quickly.

Yes, there was a Baden somewhere in the back of his mind. Rather on the fringe they were, if he remembered rightly and he probably did.

Money? Yes, he was sure of that.

"It was my good fortune that it turned out to be me to whom you ran for rescue instead of the person you thought I was," he sighed contentedly.

"The evening I rescued a very beautiful lady will be one of the memories I'll cherish when I go out West again."

"You're not going West too soon, are you?" she smiled at him provocatively.

"Any time I'd go would be too soon . . . now," he assured her gallantly.

"There, I knew you were a kindred spirit," she said approvingly, placing a white hand on her throat.

"It was just fate that . . ." she paused suddenly and fingered her throat.

Her eyes were suddenly apprehensive.

"My . . . my pearls," she gasped; "they're gone!"

Thank God his facial muscles never betrayed him.

"Your pearls?" he repeated with exactly the right intonation to meet the circumstance, while his face bore the exactly required touch of surprise and solicitude.

"Oh, I say, are you sure?"

But his brain worked nimbly and coolly as always.

Something queer about this, he reviewed swiftly.

Danny had placed the pearls in the agreed jardiniere, where he had recovered them deftly.

Then as he was about to make an unobtrusive getaway, this girl, the evident owner of the pearls, had tackled him.

Coincidence? Well, it was too pat for comfort.

Too, she had mentioned the Brayton's where he and Danny had pulled that other stunt. No question about it.

She knew or suspected something.

Either Danny or he had slipped up somewhere.

Get the pearls back to her. Only way.

It was unthinkable to be caught red-handed.

Danny and he had too good a racket to mess it up by a blunder like this.

Cynthia stared helplessly at him.

"What shall I do?"

"Stand up," he said gently, "and shake your dress. Maybe they dropped inside."

They hadn't.

"Now look under the cushions and back of the chair," he instructed, quickly dropping to his knees in order to search under her chair.

As she turned, obedient to his bidding, his hand paused lightly on her beaded bag, opened it, and with the ease of long practice, deposited the pearls in less time than it takes to tell about it.

"They're not here," she turned to him and he was sure there was suspicion in her gaze.

"Certain you wore them tonight?" he asked solicitously.

"Yes," she hesitated; "Yes, I am."

"Suppose you call up home first and check up," he suggested briskly.

"Mistakes do happen. If they're not there, we'll report it immediately."

He was sparring for time.

When she reported her loss officially, it would be a simple matter to suggest almost into thin air that her bag be inspected and the suggestion would be carried along.

Nobody would remember where it originated but under the circumstances, everyone would take credit unto themselves for their perspicacity.

"Tell you what," she said, collecting herself; "here, give me a piece of paper and a pencil. You call up my house for me, like a lamb," she said, writing busily. "Ask for Suzanne. She's my maid. If she isn't there, ask for Lumpkins, the butler. Ask him to look around my dresser.

"There's the number and all the information," she handed the paper to him hurriedly.

"While you attend to that, I'll have somebody check up on anyone who may have left suddenly. See you later."

On his way towards the hall, Dandy Jim concentrated on what was the wisest move for him now.

He had evidently allayed her suspicions.

The Dandy had nerve.

He'd telephone and then return and make his report.

He would be free from all suspicion and because the pearls were in the possession of their owner and would be found practically immediately, he wouldn't have the police to cope with.

"Where's the telephone?" he asked of a liveried attendant.

He walked into the telephone closet and glanced at the piece of paper he had carried carefully crushed in his hand

Momentarily his control over his facial muscles relaxed and he cursed silently but fervently as he absorbed the message.

"Thanks for the pearls, Dandy. The person they really belong to hasn't discovered her loss yet, and I'm on my way before she does!"

Save Fur Life in Canada; Hope to Aid the Eskimos

The increasing demand for fur and the consequent high fur prices prevailing up to the end of the last decade saw the establishment of a string of trading posts along Canada's Arctic coast. The coming of the trading posts brought about a decided change in the normal life of the Eskimo. From a nomad following the sea, the walrus, the spawning fish and the migrating caribou for his humble necessities, he devoted more and more time to the hunting and trapping of fur bearers, with gradually lessened time for his own natural pursuits. To the game supply of the country the introduction of modern high-powered firearms and unlimited supplies of ammunition proved serious.

Tremendous inroads were made into the ranks of the fur bearers, while the migratorial routes of the caribou, one of the mainstays in the domestic economy of the natives, changed with consequent distress to the Eskimos. The Dominion government has watched these changes with growing concern lest the natives, confined to one line of hunting, might be seriously affected by the periodic fluctuations in the number of fur bearers and by changes in the fur market.

With the object of broadening the basis of subsistence of the natives, especially in view of the rapid advance of mining in the northwest territories, the department of the interior has taken steps not only for the conservation of the wild life by the establishment of native preserves and the strengthening of game laws, but by the experiment of introducing semi-domesticated reindeer into the Canadian north.

A study of the reindeer industry in Alaska and a survey of possible reindeer grazing areas in Canada's far north was undertaken in 1926, and this was followed in 1929 by the purchase of 3,000 picked deer from herds in the Kotzebue sound area of western Alaska.

King of Beasts

In accord with the popular idea the lion is called the king of beasts. Yet, King Leo has a master among the animals, says Pathfinder Magazine. Those familiar with African big game say the buffalo has no quarrel with the smaller and weaker animals but he will attack the flesh-eaters such as the lion, leopard, hyena, etc., on sight. He also regards the white man as an enemy but pays little attention to the natives, since they leave him strictly alone most of the time. The lion appears to realize that here is a greater power and unless cornered gives the buffalo a wide berth. Like most animals, however, the buffalo has one great fear. He is scared of fire.

Shadows

Every one of us casts a shadow. There hangs about us a sort of penumbra—a strange indefinable something—which we call personal influence, which has its effect on every other life on which it falls. It goes with us wherever we go. It is not something we can have when we want to have it, and then lay aside at will, as we lay aside a garment. It is something that always pours out from our life, like light from a lamp, like heat from flame, like perfume from a flower.

POULTRY FACTS

LATE CHICKS MUST MAKE FAST GROWTH

Birds Need to Develop in Eight, Ten Weeks.

By Roy S. Dearstyne, Head of North Carolina State College Poultry Department.—WNU Service.

Chicks hatched in the late spring require more careful attention than those hatched earlier in the season. Hot weather and the danger of infection with disease add to the difficulties of raising late chicks.

The aim in good chick development is to secure a rapid growth during the first eight or ten weeks, with the birds attaining a weight of about two pounds at the end of this period.

After this time, growth proceeds more slowly while the birds are storing a reserve in their tissues to take care of the demands made upon them in the egg-laying season.

If hot weather is allowed to check their early growth, the birds may not reach a normal size. They also miss the abundant supply of tender green feed available earlier in the year.

Warm, moist atmospheric conditions appear to increase the spread of coccidiosis among small chicks, it is observed.

Care should be exercised not to overheat or underventilate houses in which late chicks are being raised. However, the houses should not be allowed to chill on cold nights.

The chicks should be turned out into the sunshine whenever the weather is suitable. Rigid sanitation should be practiced. Droopy and undeveloped birds should be culled out, since they are not likely to develop into good birds and they also may be disease carriers.

During the hot months, a range shelter which can be readily moved provides a good method of protecting the chicks from the heat while allowing them to graze on green stuff. Cod liver oil or alfalfa leaf meal should be added to their diet if they do not get an abundant supply of green feed.

Vaccinate Chicks at an Early Age, Expert Warns

Vaccination against infectious laryngotracheitis, commonly called bronchitis, can be done any time after chicks are six weeks old, says Dr. F. R. Beaudette, professor of poultry pathology at the New Jersey College of Agriculture, Rutgers university.

Since it is convenient to apply both pox and bronchitis vaccines at the same handling, however, it is well to vaccinate at an early age, Doctor Beaudette has found, because the reaction from pox vaccination increases somewhat with the age of the bird.

Vaccinate when the broilers have been disposed of and at a time that will be suitable for all eggs. Pox vaccination should be completed, if possible, before the birds reach the age of three months.

Use Poultry Houses

Young pullets should be taught to roost in the permanent quarters as soon as possible. Changeable weather with cold, damp nights may cause an outbreak of roup and colds in the flock which will set the birds back considerably in their laying. If they are under cover at night the flock owner will not have to worry about them. Before the birds are to use the permanent equipment and houses, all should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected with a good reliable germ killer. There is no profit in putting healthy birds in unhealthy surroundings.

Feed for Ducklings

Young ducklings can be raised successfully on a mash composed of bran, shorts, and cornmeal, equal parts, with 10 per cent beef meal added, and 5 per cent bone meal, says the Montreal Herald. This should be moistened and fed to the ducks—just what they will eat up clean in ten minutes. Small ducklings should be fed about six times daily. It is a good policy to scatter some coarse sand over the feed just before giving it to the birds.

Laying Soft Shell Eggs

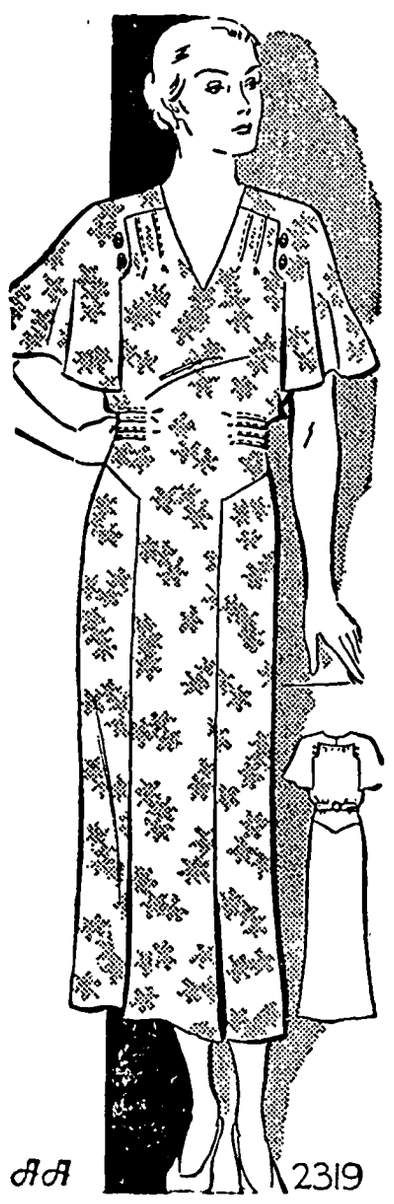
The reason why hens lay eggs with soft shells is either because they are overfat, and are not assimilating their food, or because of a lack of shell making material, such as oyster shell or lime. If hens are overfat feed less and give occasional doses of epsom salts. If these birds have intestinal worms it may be the cause of the leg weakness, particularly if they are in a rundown condition. Pullets often lose the power of their legs when they are just coming into lay.—Montreal Herald.

Reduces Weight of Eggs

Exceedingly high temperatures may reduce the average weight of eggs from the flock by as much as 15 to 20 per cent. Studies in the flock at the Kansas experiment station indicate that this decline is likely to be noticeable at temperatures above 85 degrees, says a writer in Successful Farming. There was more variation in the weight of the albumen and the shell than of the yolk. The birds were more sensitive to sudden temperature changes than they were to gradual changes.

BIDS DEFIANCE TO HOT WEATHER

PATTERN 2319



The hot weather brings us to the problem every woman of generous proportions must cope with—how to keep cool and fresh looking on those wilting days? Well—Looking Cool goes a long way, and pattern 2319, with its loose, easy cape sleeve, soft treated waistline gives you a mighty cool outlook on life. And very flattering, too, are the graceful folds of the cape that does wonders to equalize proportions. The darts over the bust and at the waistline cleverly contrive to avoid a too-fitted look at the strategical points. Pick a summery printed voile or other sheer.

Pattern 2319 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 30, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 30 takes 3¾ yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York.

AUG. 3 LAST DATE TO ADJUST ACREAGE IN CORN TO COMPLY

Corn-hog contract signers in Hancock County whose compliance checkup reveals an excess corn acreage have until Aug. 3 to remove the surplus acreage from production. Field work in connection with the checking of 1935 corn compliance has been completed in every township in the county. A total of forty compliance supervisors measured the corn acreage on each farm.

The checking was accomplished early in the season this year so that producers would have an opportunity to plant excess acres to some other crop. It also affords an opportunity for the county committee to cancel contracts in cases of ineligibility and non-compliance.

Crown New Champs at State Fair

Des Moines, Ia., Special: Many new national, regional and state champions will be chosen in contests scheduled for this year's Iowa State Fair, Aug. 21-30. A perennial favorite will be the old fiddlers' contest, to be held Aug. 23 and 24. Other contest events include the Midwest National Horseshoe Tournament, the Iowa Amateur Baseball Championship Tournament, the team pulling contest, the state 4-H kittenball tournament, the Iowa Baby Health contest, the 4-H boys and girls' health contest, and the Iowa boys and girls' airplane building contest.

The Misses Helen Easton, Mariam Zeiger and Jean Carr of Garner, and Miss Marjorie James of Thornton visited Marie Stille one afternoon last week. On Friday afternoon the same group was joined by Mason City friends and enjoyed swimming and a picnic lunch at Clear Lake.

WANT FREE ADVERTISING

The state liquor commission has employed a press agent to send out publicity to the newspapers. The liquor commission does no paid advertising and just why the newspapers should fill their columns with articles which in reality promote the sale of liquor, and constitutes the most valuable advertising medium available, is a mystery to us. We can think of a lot of things that we could donate our space without giving it to the liquor business from which we know we would derive no benefit.

Beautifies Farm Home

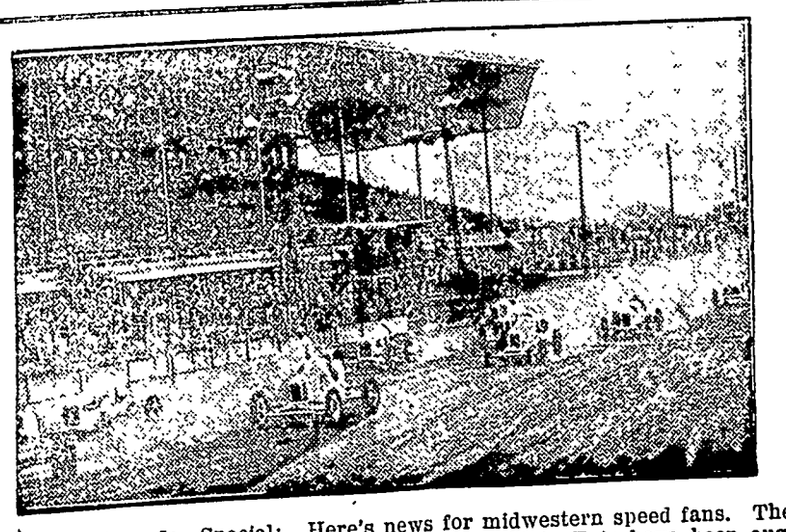
Three Days Auto Races at Iowa State Fair



Des Moines, Ia., Special: Here's news for midwestern speed fans. The famous national circuit auto races at the Iowa State Fair have been augmented this year to include three days of races, instead of the customary two days of former years. This makes the Iowa State Fair speed classics the biggest event in national auto racing circles for the late summer season. Auto racing days at the State Fair will be Friday and Saturday, Aug. 23 and 24, and Friday, Aug. 30. The above picture shows part of the big field getting away in the National Circuit sweepstakes event at last year's State Fair.

Stubble Fields Give Good Chance To Attack Weeds

FORMER KLEMME GRAIN MAN SELLS IOWA FALLS BUSINESS

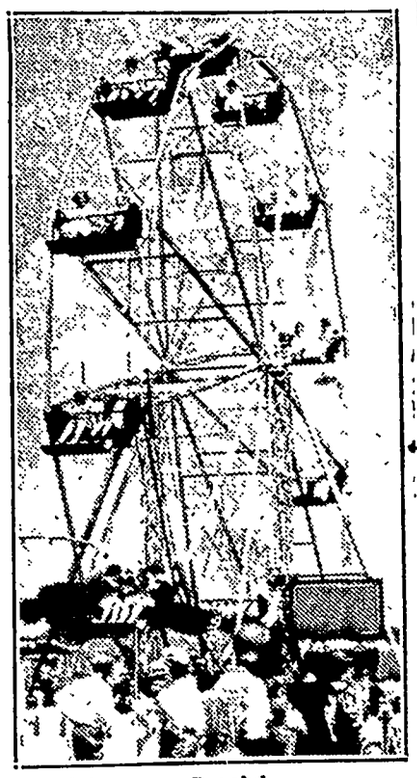
M. O. Hocum and daughter, Helen, visited with Klemme friends a short time Monday morning and called at the Times on their way to Clear Lake.

The Hocum family lived in Klemme several years ago when Mr. Hocum was in the grain business here, and when he sold out to the newly organized Klemme Co-Operative Grain Co, he moved to Iowa Falls where he purchased a grain and coal business.

A couple of weeks ago Mr. Hocum sold his business. His health has not been the best for several months and h plans to take a complete rest before entering business again.

Both of Mr. Hocum's daughters, Avis and Helen, are home with him. Avis is a stenographer for an Iowa Falls law firm, and Helen, who will be a senior in high school this fall, has just returned home from a six weeks tour. Miss Helen is an accomplished dancer and entertainer, and she was with a company of young ladies from Des Moines who played at Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and other cities in the middle west on a special six weeks tour.

Plan Children's Party at State Fair



Des Moines, Ia., Special: Over 25,000 Iowa boys and girls are expected to be the guests of the Iowa State Fair, free of charge, during the annual Children's Day festivities at the opening of the exposition here, Friday, August 23. The fair management has issued a blanket invitation to all boys and girls under fifteen years of age to attend the fair, free, on its opening day, and an elaborate program for the day has been set up, including daylight fireworks, circus features, and other attractions.

Editing a paper without ruffling anybody's feelings is like fishing without a hook on your line—you get lots of recreation but no result.

Times Want Ads Bring Results

Last week Mrs. Chas. Medaus ordered a "farm for rent" ad to be run two issues in The Times. On Monday she ordered the ad discontinued as she said she had more inquiries than she could attend to. The day after the paper was in the mail she had six prospects.

Anyone who has a farm for rent this year can get plenty of good renters if they will but use the Times want ad service.

Mrs. Medaus was highly pleased with the result. She has a good farm, fine buildings and good workable soil and has a chance to pick a good renter from the prospects obtained by the ad.

While small grain stubble fields are standing bare during the remainder of the summer and fall is an excellent time to attack any noxious or other bad weeds which may be growing there, advises Dr. R. H. Porter, Iowa State College, extension plant pathologist.

The weeds are often weakened if the small grain stand has been heavy and some most effective eradication measures can be practiced during the hot weather of August and September.

In case the area of infestation is small the use of chemical sprays will probably be the most efficient means of control. Either straight sodium chlorate or a special chlorate product known as "Atlacide" may be used for this purpose and is most effective when not applied until early September, after the plants have had an opportunity to produce some foliage.

In case the stubble ground is being used for pasture, cattle should be kept away from the sprayed areas for 3 or 4 days after the applications.

For larger areas of infestation a system of summer fallow and crop rotation is advised. The ground should be plowed and worked for at least a month when either alfalfa or winter rye may be sown. Alfalfa is the more highly recommended of the two, but in case the land is to be put into corn the next year rye will prove more advisable.

BROTHER OF MRS. KEEPER KILLED IN ALASKA

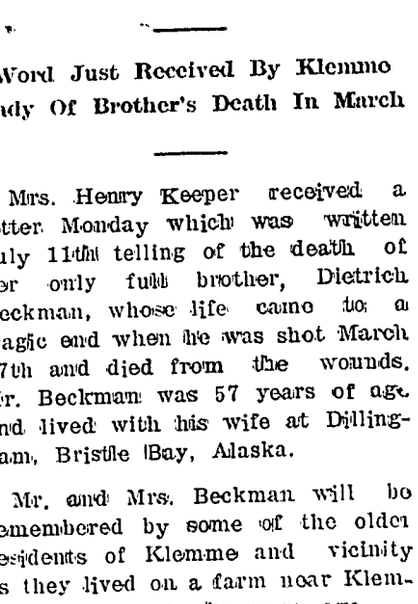
Word Just Received By Klemme Lady Of Brother's Death In March

Mrs. Henry Keeper received a letter Monday which was written July 11th telling of the death of her only full brother, Dietrich Beckman, whose life came to a tragic end when he was shot March 27th and died from the wounds. Mr. Beckman was 57 years of age and lived with his wife at Dillingham, Bristle Bay, Alaska.

Mr. and Mrs. Beckman will be remembered by some of the older residents of Klemme and vicinity as they lived on a farm near Klemme some twenty-six years ago

Recently a "use-no-slang week" was put in force by one of our colleges—and the result was that none of the students were able to make themselves understood.

Canadian Champ Enters Fair Races



Des Moines, Ia., Special: The Canadian national champion, Emory Collins, will challenge the American auto-racing title of Gus Schrader in the three days of national Circuit auto racing, scheduled for this year's Iowa State Fair here on August. 23, 24 and 30. Collins filed his official entry with the State Fair Board this week, and Schrader entered the State Fair meet several weeks ago. More than forty of the most famous drivers in the country are already included in the entry list.

RUTH stared at the invitation, red lips curving, blue eyes sparkling with joy.

She had known Irene Howell so slightly that she had not dreamed of being asked to the great Howell-Twining wedding. Probably Andrew wouldn't feel he could go. But she must go. With somebody. With Mr. Fink, Mrs. Fink was sure to be asked. She and Irene had belonged to the same bridge club.

It seemed to Ruth that she was really getting into the swim at last.

Five months before she and Andrew were strangers to everybody here. Then she had chanced upon Mrs. Fink. Andrew and Mr. Fink worked at the same place. Andrew said Tom Fink was a good fellow.

Just at first Ruth thought she didn't like Inez Fink, but after a while she got used to the sharp-eyed and sharp-tongued woman. From this acquaintance had come Irene Howell's invitation.

"It means a lot to us in a way," she told Andrew at dinner.

"A man is known by the company his wife keeps. The Howells are way up. So you see. Mrs. Fink says—"

"Never mind Mrs. Fink. What I want to know is how much this wedding is going to set me back," Andrew said bruskly. "For a present, I mean."

"No present. We're only invited to the church."

"I see. Well, I can't make it, possibly. Fink isn't going either. I suppose you and she can trail off together. Got enough to wear?"

"Sure." Ruth smiled. "Except a hat."

"I knew there'd be a something short." Andrew pretended to groan. "Remember my insurance premium comes due the first of the month. I've got to meet it if it takes a leg. Every cent will count till that is seen to."

Ruth saw no prospect of getting a new hat.

Mrs. Fink ran in.

No, Tom wasn't going to the wedding either.

"You and I can trot along together," she said. "I've just finished cross-stitching my new white silk with orange and black. It's swell. Now show me what you are going to wear."

Ruth brought out her blue crepe Mrs. Fink inspected it with a careless glance.

"It'll do if you get a smart hat to wear with it. Folks always look at your hat first. If you've got a snappy chapeau you can get away with any old rag for a dress."

Ruth flushed hotly.

The blue dress didn't look the same to her after Mrs. Fink got through with it.

Ruth tried it on three times.

Each time she felt more keenly the need of that new hat. She tried to change the trimming on her best hat, but it had faded underneath.

Mrs. Fink made her go over and see the white silk cross-stitched with black and orange. It was charming. But the hat Mrs. Fink had got to go with the dress took Ruth's breath away. It was the hat of her dreams. She bit her lip, trying to keep down a pang of envy as Mrs. Fink carelessly twirled the hat on her hand.

She let Ruth try on the hat. And the way Ruth looked in it! It made her blue eyes bluer, her cheeks pinker, her hair brighter.

That night she dreamed about the black hat.

Next morning Ruth was all excitement. She hurried with the dishwashing. She put the tiny home to rights with deft, swift motions.

The wedding was at noon.

At then minutes to eleven when she was all dressed ready to go the telephone bell rang. Mrs. Fink had called up to say hoarsely that her throat was getting worse every minute—she couldn't go.

"I'm so sorry! It's too bad! That lovely dress! That elegant hat! Is there something I can do for you, Mrs. Fink?" Ruth's voice was full of honest concern.

"Oh, I've got everything to doctor with. Say, Ruth! You can wear the hat if you want to."

"Oh, Mrs. Fink! Do you really mean it? You aren't joking, are you?"

"I should say not! Stop in on your way past and get it."

Ruth had always made it a rule not to borrow or lend unless there was real necessity for doing so. Andrew was dead set against the practice himself.

They had started out in their married life to be independent, square and conservative. Up to this moment they had both fulfilled the conditions of their little informal contract.

But now Ruth yielded to the lure of the hat.

She saw no harm in wearing it, especially as her friend had so kindly offered to loan it.

She was very happy when she put the hat on her bright head. She failed to notice Mrs. Fink's rather odd little smile.

The hat made her brave enough to go to the church alone.

More than one person looked admiringly at her slender young figure as she passed.

When she entered in at the portal of the stately church she had an air of having just stepped from one of the stately automobiles that were constantly gliding up to the curb. In fact, she seemed to belong to that particular automobile which had a silver ornament on its radiator cap, rather than the stout old lady who had to be assisted down the step.

It was a wonderful wedding, all that a wedding should be—lovely flowers, music, perfume, pretty clothes, exquisite bride and six bridesmaids looking like a bouquet of spring blossoms. Ruth herself had been married in the front parlor of her parent's small house far away and her mother had made the wedding cake. But she knew nevertheless what it was to take the vows of wifehood. Her heart beat fast and tears dimmed her blue eyes as she listened. She wished Andrew was with her. And she forgot her borrowed hat.

The sunshine was gone by the time she left the church. She hadn't gone two blocks before the first raindrop spattered down. Automobiles dashed past. But Ruth had no money for taxi hire even if there had been a taxi in sight.

Faster and faster fell the raindrops.

Faster and faster sped Ruth toward the safe shelter of Mrs. Fink's.

Folks on the sidewalks, at windows became aware of a flying figure in drenched blue crepe, bareheaded, holding a too large hat under a fluttering rag which had been a chiffon flounce.

White, wet to the skin, breathless between haste and anxiety, Ruth at last came to Mrs. Fink's. Mrs. Fink was lying down. But she sat up quickly enough as Ruth burst in.

"Good gracious. Ain't raining?" exclaimed Mrs. Fink. Then she began to laugh. "I got that hat on trial," she said. "I knew one of the salesgirls at Hawtrey's. I told them I wanted to keep it until my husband could see it. Tom couldn't tell a French hat from one I'd made myself. I was going to wear it to the wedding and take it back. And now"—she paused significantly.

"Of course I'll pay for it," said Ruth.

Her call was not pleasant.

She was obliged to stay at Mrs. Fink's until the storm ceased.

Then she stole home—to count up her available cash. Meanwhile Mrs. Fink promised to telephone to Hawtrey's.

The hat was more expensive than Ruth had dreamed. She had to appeal to Andrew. Andrew had to borrow from Fink, who said shortly that he didn't see how women showed so little judgment in buying clothing—he was sure his wife was always beautifully dressed on very moderate cost. Andrew knew what Ruth had just told him. But he kept silent.

Mrs. Fink was ever after extremely cold to Ruth.

Not long after the Finks got into a little difficulty through Mrs. Fink's methods of buying. They left town. Andrew got Fink's job, which brought in more money than his own. But in spite of their added good fortune Ruth was even more conservative and thrifty than she had been before. That much she had learned from Inez Fink.

Bossy Has Better Memory Than Dobbin, Tests Show

Cows are just as clever as horses. Bossy's timid and backward disposition keeps man from recognizing her mental ability. Temperament differences and intelligence similarities between these two favored domestic animals have recently been revealed by tests at Cornell university by Dr. L. Pearl Garner as part of a series of experiments on the nature of learning in man and animals, says Science Service.

Cows not only learn as easily as horses but remember better what they have learned, it was discovered. Among the six breeds of cows used in the test the best "milker" was also the best learner.

The learning problem for the cows and horses was to find breakfast when it was hidden in one of a row of three boxes under a black cloth. Altogether 41 cows were tested with 850 trials and 62 horses with 1,234 trials.

The cows were timid and fearful. Many were so afraid that they preferred to go breakfastless rather than attack the strange thing. Although most of the horses pushed into the cloth during the first four trials, only about half the cows dared to do this.

Yet when the scores were all in it was found that both horses and cows had the same average of seven boxes opened before the correct one in 22 trials. Cows made mistakes in the method of attack less frequently than horses, who nudged the box that was already open.

Ten of the cows who had learned the problem were re-tested after a year during which they had had a vacation from the experimenting. Their retention for a year was much better than that of horses over a period of three to eight months, it was found.

Thackeray's Dread

The novelist's great fear is that he may write himself out, his invention might become weary. Thackeray told the world how he himself felt this fatigue and how he often wished he could get some one to do "the business" of his stories. The love-making parts of "the business" particularly annoyed him, and made him blush, in the privacy of his study, "as if he were going into an apoplexy."

Fearful Sultan of Turkey

No monarch ever lived in greater fear of his life than Abdul Hamid, sultan of Turkey, 1876-1909. Although Yildiz palace in Constantinople was highly fortified, his private rooms contained trap doors, mirrors set at angles, loaded revolvers and lifelike wax models of himself—in various positions—which he hoped would fool assassins and receive the knife or bullets intended for him.—Collier's Weekly.

"By Golly, I Got It! I Got a Way Out of Going to School Circus Day."

Poetry

By James J. Montague

I REMEMBER reading, rather skeptically, a poem by Don Marquis, which after reciting the trials and tribulations of various foreign countries closed with: "They had no poets, and they died." I was minded to remonstrate with Mr. Marquis about this assertion. I doubted the dependence of civilization upon mere rhymesters. On doctors, yes, sometimes. On butchers and grocers, certainly. But why poets? How could they keep a race from extinction? I looked upon the fellow who said he would rather write the songs of a country than make its laws as wobbly in the bean. And then to give Mr. Marquis a break—I aim to be fair minded—I began trying to think of any poetry which had ever done any good in the world. To my astonishment I located one of them inside of fifteen minutes of intensive cerebration. It was a piece by Rose Hartwick Thorpe, and if by any chance you are not familiar with the works of the lady, the name of it was "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight." It is quite an exciting poem, with a happy ending. It tells how a young woman whose lover is about to be executed—it doesn't say what for—at the ringing of the curfew, climbs up into the old church tower, grabs the clapper of the bell, and when the sexton pulls on the rope, swings to and fro, so there isn't any ringing of the curfew that evening, and Cromwell, who breaks into the poem just at the right time, lets the young fellow off.

So now I will explain how that poem, years after it was written, really contributed to human happiness.

The circus was coming to town, and it was coming on a week day. It had come on a week day now for four or five years. And if you had suggested to a parent of that time that it would be a nice thing for him to write to the principal and tell him you couldn't go to school on circus day, on account of the patent necessity of going to the circus he would not have been able to control his astonishment—or his temper. As to taking in the night performance, well, bed time was half past eight o'clock every night, and how was anybody to get around that?

For two weeks I had tried to catch a cold—just a severe enough cold to keep me out of school, but with no luck. I went to school without my rubbers, sloshing through the gutters on the way, but nothing happened. I slept in a draught—and in those days sleeping in a draught was regarded as a wanton invitation to destruction. Still nothing happened. I even thought of falling out of a tree and breaking my arm, but that would have kept me out of ball games for the rest of the summer, so I abandoned the idea.

And then, taking my moody way to school one morning I met Bill McMorrow. Naturally we fell at once to discussing the situation, but without any luck, till suddenly Bill's reader slipped out of his grasp—a grasp which the seriousness of the situation had rendered nerveless and shouted:

"By golly, I got it!"

"Got what, the book?"

"Naw, not the book. I got a way out of going to school circus day."

"You ain't really?"

"Sure I have. Lissen. You know that piece I gotta speak next Friday?"

"The one about the Curfew and all that?"

"Yeah, that's the one. Suppose the old bell don't ring on circus day morning. We don't haff to go to school, do we?"

"But how can you stop the bell ringing? Me an' you and Shep an' Carl Parker an' half a dozen others can't keep that janitor from ringing the bell?

"We ain't big enough. And besides if we are to throw him and tie him wouldn't we all get sent to jail?"

"I ain't meanin' to tie him," said Bill. "But supposin' the bell don't ring, then what?"

"But why won't it ring?"

"Because it won't have no clapper into it, that's why."

"Gosh! That's right. But how would you get the clapper out of it."

"Lissen. Tonight you an' me will go down to Waughtal's blacksmith shop an' hook one of them big pairs of pinchers he holds the horse shoes with when puttin' the caulks onto 'em, an' then we'll climb up into the belfry the night before circus day, an' we'll just plumb pry that clapper out of the bell.

"The janitor's deaf, so he won't know whether it's ringin' or not, an' the principal he's pretty deef, too, an' never starts from his home till the first bell, an' the teechers that gets there first will wait for him, an' when he don't come they won't know what to do unless'n they go up to his house an' ask him is he sick or something, an' by that time it will be too late to find us, because we'll all be down lookin' at the parade."

The logic was convincing. Those were the days before telephones were invented, and when the hard faced creatures called truant officers were unknown.

At nine o'clock that night I slid down the section of the lightning rod that was near my window, and a minute later saw a dark figure swarm the fence that surrounded his house.

"Got the pinchers?" I said.

"Here they are."

"How are we going to get into the school house?"

"They don't ever lock the doors. What is there in a school house that a burglar can want?"

A reasoning mind, had this companion of mine.

The school house door creaked as it swung open, but there were no passers by to hear it.

Cautiously we climbed to the top story, and made our way up the ladder that led through a trap door to the belfry. Then for an instant we fell back in terror. A swarm of baby bats, left there while their parents were forth in the search for food, fanned the air about our heads, and emitted squeaks that curdled our blood. Even the intrepid Bill started down the ladder. Then his hand encountered one of the creatures and he observed "Pooh, bats." But I, scared cold, was glad to notice that his voice trembled.

Well, there is nothing much more to tell. It was heavy work prying that clapper out, and once, when the pinchers slipped in Bill's hand it hit the bell, which gave forth a solemn single toll which sent us scurrying for the door.

But at last we got it out, and to make assurance doubly sure, took it home with us and buried it deep in our back garden, where, for all I know, it still remains.

All manner of theories were expressed around our breakfast table as to why the bell didn't ring. But when at last the principal had gathered his wits together and sent the janitor on a house to house campaign there were no children to be found at home. Nor were they to be found till supper time that night, when they all hungered to tell of the wonders they had seen, but held their tongues till asked where they had been, and then replied: "Oh just walkin' around town, and wishin' we could of gone to the circus."

And so dear reader, if you, like me, have held the value of poetry in light regard, here is one truthful instance of its value to humanity. For had it not been for Rose Hartwick Thorpe, a hundred or more deserving little children would never have seen a truly marvelous circus.

Australia's National Bird

In the old Colonial days, immense flocks of emus, the national bird of Australia, roamed over the inland plains. Although still to be found in large numbers in some districts, they have become rare in places where they formerly abounded. The emu is one of the most interesting inhabitants of Wilson's Promontory National park, in the state of Victoria. Here they are "tame wild birds," says Nature Magazine. The emu figures in the Australian national coat of arms, and is to be found on all Australian stamps, supporting King George's head at one side of the stamp, while the national animal, the kangaroo, decorates the opposite corner of the postage.

Malice Aforethought

The phrase "malice aforethought" is used sometimes in law as a translation of the Anglo-French malice purpense or prepense. An early example of its use occurs in the acts of parliament of Edward VI (1547). In those days and later "malice prepense" designated "premeditated malice; hence, a wrong or an injury planned beforehand and deliberately carried out."—Literary Digest.

Happy Vacation Period Brings Joys and Duti

Now that vacation days are here, children feel a marvelous freedom from restraint, and from tasks. It is a period of readjustment, just as much as is the beginning of school in the fall. It is well for parents to appreciate this, for by so doing they will spare themselves and their offspring some difficult moments.

Many young children will be inclined to rely upon mother to direct their time by suggesting games, or little helpful tasks made attractive through the idea of relieving her of work. The rest will strain at the leash of any restraint, believing that as school was their expected and peculiar occupation, that vacation means all play and no work. They will be irked by requests to do minor jobs, quite within their ability, or to run errands, however few, or, perhaps, even to have pleasant suggestions about recreational diversions.

It requires careful thought on the part of a mother to prevent the children from leaning on her too much, in the first instance, and from becoming a bit too aloof, in the second. It is well for the mother to have it definitely understood that she expects to be told when any one of the children goes out, and where the place is. Many adults believe it is a wise precaution to leave such word at home, since sometimes it is desirable or necessary to get in touch with them, and some one in the house should know their whereabouts.

It is well, also, to expect children to be home promptly for meals—which then should be served promptly. If the children find themselves unexpectedly invited to meals at their friends, then the telephone should be used to inform the hostess of their plans—and in younger children permission should be asked and granted, if possible, or refused if necessary. Mothers' plans may have to be adjusted to suit the changes, or perhaps children have forgotten other engagements and must then be reminded of them.

Children can learn, in tender years, that the home is a circle made up of different units, and while each individual has the right to individual freedom there remains a circle of wide latitude there remain duties of the family, which should be respected. There must be consideration, and vacation days can teach this, however old or young the members.

"Three Score and Ten" No Longer Life's Span?

The roll of reputed centenarians includes Zorro Mohamed, the Turk, 156; Old Parr, an Englishman 152; "Uncle Johnny" Shell of Kentucky, 134; Krassinski, a Pole, 132; Mrs. Catherine Brickland of Ireland, 123; and "Mother" Stayne, a German, 122. Of these, probably "Old Parr," who is buried in Westminster abbey, is the best authenticated case of longevity, states a writer in London Tit-Bits.

The Centenarians' club, founded five years ago by that great student of longevity, Dr. Maurice Ernest, has 120 honorary members, proved centenarians, on its roll; but it exists mainly for the purpose of investigating means by which healthy existence may be prolonged beyond the century mark, and for circulating all available information on centenarianism. It is, in fact, mainly a corresponding association on the subject it represents, and boldly claims that man has it in his power to prolong his life, provided he observe certain simple rules of living. In any case, Doctor Ernest believes firmly that the Psalmist's span of "three score years and ten" is definitely out of date.

Bothersome Error

The typographical error that leads to more insanity than all others combined occurs in the sober appraisal of world affairs, where "cosmic" comes out "comic."

Not Constitutional
Flies and Black Magic Kilkenny Cats, Again
Pickings for Lawyers

In Boston, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals decides, two to one, that the "New Deal" process tax on cotton is unconstitutional. The judges decide that "the power of congress to regulate interstate commerce does not authorize it to tax products either of agriculture or industry merely because their production may indirectly affect interstate commerce."

Arthur Brisbane

This most important decision, if not upset by the higher courts, will upset, decidedly, the plans of the administration in regard to financing bigger incomes for farmers.

Universal Service says Abyssinia will not take Mussolini, his airplanes and armored tanks "lying down." Abyssinian sorcerers, dealers in black magic, will work against Italy. What is more dangerous than magic, Abyssinian fighting chiefs will use the poisonous tsetse fly against Italian soldiers. These flies, feeding on decayed animal matter caught in the teeth of sleeping crocodiles, get the tsetse germs from the blood of the crocodiles and plant them in the blood of human beings and cattle.

Slow death by "sleeping sickness," leaving the body almost a skeleton, follows the tsetse bite.

Two cats hung over a line must fight. The Kilkenny story proves it. Mussolini has committed himself to war, and once a dictator speaks positively it is unsafe, politically, for him to back down, especially when other nations interfere, as France and England have interfered. To retreat might cost Mussolini his prestige.

Difficult also is the position of Haile Selassie, emperor of Ethiopia. His hold is not firm. Important chiefs, heading various Abyssinian tribes, would like his job. If he should avoid war by yielding part of his territory to Mussolini, as advised by England, resulting complications might include assassination, common in tropical countries.

The United States Chamber of Commerce objects to the income and inheritance tax program, calls it confiscation. The question involved seems simple:

Does the property of the United States, result of thrift and intelligence, belong to the people that created it, or is it only held in trust by them for public use by those that for the time being exercise powers of government?

Owners of stock in Paramount-Publix Moving Picture company, once selling on the market at $100,000,000 and more, now worth about nothing, learn that in some windup proceedings lawyers ask for $3,600,000. That seems a good deal, but you must remember that one New York lawyer—he will not object to being mentioned—the skillful Louis Levy, once got more than $1,000,000 for settling a sad misunderstanding between a prosperous gentleman and a certain "little lady."

Figures do not lie, but they surprise you. For instance, in the year 1801 the government of the United States had 126 employees. Today it has 700,000 employees, an increase of 5,000 per cent. The number of congressmen has risen since 1801 from 128 to 531, a little more than 400 per cent, while United States population has increased 2,500 per cent.

The increase in population is due to mothers, the increase in government extravagance is due to politicians.

Austria seems not quite certain that she has had enough of the Hapsburg royal family, that has ruled and misruled an intelligent people for so long. The state council cancels a decree that banished Hapsburgs and took their property. Young Archduke Otto, pretender to the throne, may now return to Austria. He and his mother will find themselves rich, the confiscated imperial properties returned.

Young Otto, a handsome boy, with a somewhat peevishly conceited expression, may occupy the throne. Self-government is not easily learned. Austria, Italy, Germany, have discovered that, not to mention the U. S. A.

Anti-Semitic riots in Berlin included the usual cowardice that accompanies display of religious hatred, no matter by what race or religion. The "proud Aryans" bullied, beat and kicked Jewish men and women indiscriminately.

Washington reports a "whispering campaign" concerning President Roosevelt's health. It will be a very small whisper if the whisperers stick to facts. The President's friends will be glad to know that his health is excellent, has never been better since his Presidential work began. A constitution able to withstand and conquer such an attack of illness as the President has withstood need not worry about a few political annoyances.

100 PER CENT

NOT long ago I visited a friend, the personnel director of a large eastern firm. Her observation was keen. The interest of my visit centered around her summation of the 100 per cent business woman. Would you change these figures if you were hiring a young person of character in your business?

Mental Adequacy	15%	Initiative	12%
Health	15%	Cooperation	10%
Personality	15%	Industry	10%
Appearance	13%	Punctuality	10%

My job resembles a physician's, she said laughingly, "one look at the patient tells more than several reference letters." During her first interview she glimpses the individual's attitude toward life by what she calls "four success signals." They are:

a. What is the poise of the head?

b. Does she look as well going as coming?

c. Does she use or abuse the king's English?

d. Has she personality plus?

Posture was her first signal. Few people realize how self-revealing posture is. The set of one's head on the shoulders bespeaks one's degree of ambition, or lack of it. A straight front look reflects one's self-confidence. Too much self-confidence, however, is as bad as none, for that approaches conceit.

Appearance was second. Well-groomed does not imply expensively gowned. It implies, however, neatness, care in detail and cleanliness. Those who are careful, clever, and chic are "sartorially smarter" than some others who count figures into four columns for their year's wardrobe. More self-respect can be bought for 25 cents in a shoe shop, where heels are straightened, than any place in the wide world. This makes one look as well going as coming. Earrings and rouge can never reach as far in this matter of toilet, as a healthy well-kept skin.

The third was an unusually high hurdle—mental adequacy. My friend almost despairs at the linguistic paucity prevalent today, even among our college graduates. The English language and the "American slanguage" are farther apart than the ocean wide.

The fourth and last X-ray test was the most subtle. "I have several ways of proving the innate refinement of my visitor," she said, "this I call personality plus. Absolute indifference to my telephone conversations brings her score one. I watch her emotional reactions and self-control when she discusses with me her hobbies, how she spends her leisure time, or the qualities she likes best in her new friends."

These four success signals recall what Emerson said: "What you do speaks so loudly I cannot hear what you say!"

THREE REASONS

"HOW did you like my sermon this morning," inquired the young theologue of the little old Scotch lady walking slowly and totteringly on a cane out of the little village church one Sunday morning. "I did na like it," she responded with full vigor and conviction. "I did na like it for three reasons!" "What are they"? inquired the young student preacher becoming more and more interested. "Weel," said the little old lady, stopping and planting her cane in front of her with a definite grip as if to punctuate her forceful sentence, "first, ye read it, second, ye didna read it weel, and third, it was, . . . it was," she began hesitatingly as if to spare his feelings, "it was na worth the readin'."

Splendidly did this young theologue respond. Clasping her hand he said, heartily, "thank you, indeed, for your help; I am the one getting a sermon this morning instead of giving one."

Years went on, the young theologue in time became one of the golden orators, and great men of the cloth of his time. Always when speaking before a group of youth, he never failed to mention the greatest friend of his youth, as he loved to call the little old Scotch lady who, by her unafraidness and sincerity, up-stepped him professionally, for as he left the church that morning, he vowed secretly to overcome each criticism the little old lady had given in her three reasons.

Our friends are truly those who care enough to tell us of our faults because they love us more, not less.

I remember talking with a lovely young woman student, who had only one bad fault as I could see, nervously biting her fingernails. "Mary," I said to her one day, "I have something to say to you that will be worth pure gold to you, but you will have to ask me for it!" She looked out of the window and then turning suddenly, she said, "please tell me, for I know you do want me to succeed." I did tell her and also suggested a remedy even at a cost to her to keep her nails beautifully manicured until she mastered this habit. In a month she came gratefully smiling to show me her progress.

"Life is only an adventure in understanding." If hearts are willing to give and receive, mutual benefit comes to each from the other.

Figures Reveal Marked Decline in Birthrate

The United States is fast becoming a nation of oldsters, Dr. O. E. Baker of the bureau of agricultural economics reports.

With fewer births every year and immigration constantly lessened, "there are now about 10 per cent fewer young children in the country than there were five years ago and about 17 per cent more persons over sixty-five years of age," according to Doctor Baker.

Continuation of this trend will bring about a decreased population after the 10-year period ending in 1945, the doctor predicts.

"Decline in births has been from nearly 3,000,000 in 1921 to about 2,300,000 in 1934," Doctor Baker said, but added: "A temporary blossoming in 1933 of many marriages postponed because of the depression might have caused more than the average number of births in 1933."

However, he said, weddings in 1934 were back to pre-depression numbers and "births seem unlikely to increase after 1935."

The birth decline is greater in cities than in rural areas, the investigator found, because of the greater monetary outlay necessary to raise a child in the city.

The most backward group about having children is the "so-called middle and upper classes." Doctor Baker decides:

"Families of professional classes have 5 to 10 per cent fewer children than those of business men, business men about 25 per cent fewer than skilled workmen and skilled workmen 30 per cent fewer than unskilled laborers."

Huge Farm Displays Mark '35 Fair

Des Moines, Ia., Special.

The quick comeback which midwest farms have staged this summer, following last year's drought, will be reflected in one of the finest farm produce displays ever witnessed at the Iowa State Fair, exposition officials said here this week. All available exhibit space for collective county exhibits and individual farm exhibits has been reserved for over two months. Entries in the corn and small grain show, and the fruit and produce show are also record-breaking. This year's Iowa State Fair will open with a full program on Aug. 23, continuing through Aug. 30.

Baseball is New State Fair Event

Des Moines, Ia., Special: Iowa's first statewide Amateur Baseball Tournament will be held at the 1935 Iowa State Fair. The tournament at the fair will pick the team to represent Iowa in the national tournament the last week in September. District tournaments, now in progress throughout the state, will choose the eight district champions, who will compete in the finals at Des Moines. Games will open at the State Fair on Aug. 22, continuing through Aug. 25.

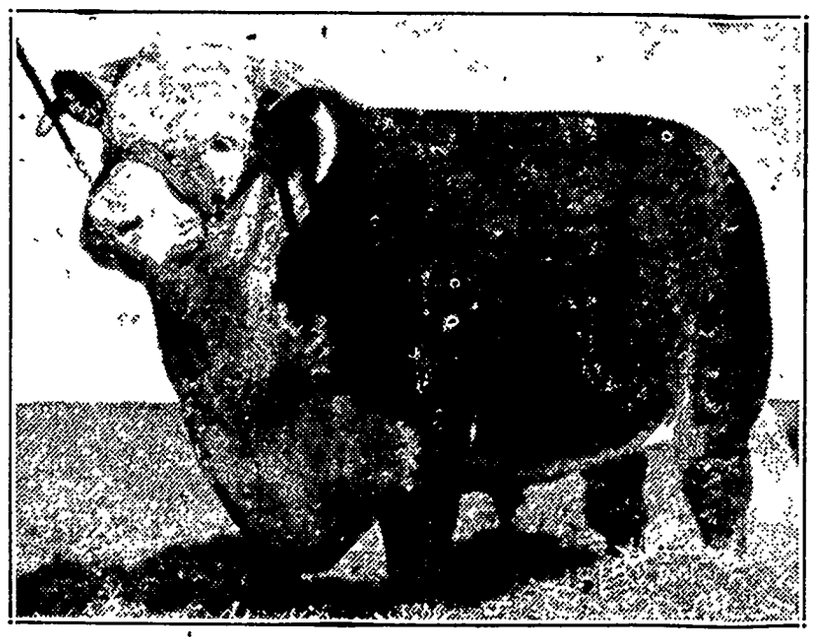
Children Free at Iowa State Fair

Des Moines, Ia., Special: Every boy and girl under 16 years of age is invited to be the guest of the Iowa State Fair, free of charge, at the big annual State Fair children's party to be held the opening Friday of the fair, Aug. 23. The program includes daylight fireworks, band concerts, and a variety of other entertainment. Over 25,000 youngsters are expected to attend the celebration the opening Friday of the fair.

State Fair Rodeo this Year Greatest in West

Des Moines, Ia., Special: Visitors at this year's Iowa State Fair, Aug 21-30, will have the opportunity of witnessing one of the greatest Rodeos to be held in the midwest in 1935. With big increases in prize money, the State Fair's third annual Rodeo and Stampede has attracted the pick of the most famous riders, ropers, and bulldoggers in the country. Offerings for broncho-riding, bulldogging and calf-roping carry top purses of $900 each. The rodeo contests will be featured at the State Fair for seven nights.

Increases Seen in National Stock Show at State Fair



Des Moines, Ia., Special: With the National Shorthorn Show being held at this year's Iowa State Fair, plus the largest 4-H Club stock show to be assembled in the United States this year, plus a score of other special livestock events, the Iowa State Fair management predicted this week that this year's livestock show at the fair would set new national records. Literally every section of the United States is already represented in entries, which will compete for upwards of $70,000 in cash prizes. Over two million dollars worth of prize livestock is expected to be on display when the State Fair opens with a full program on Aug. 23.

New York Stock Exchange a "Gentlemen's Agreement"

The New York Stock exchange is a voluntary association of some 1,100 members, not incorporated, and has a written constitution, says the Indianapolis News. A president, a secretary and a governing committee of forty members, with absolute power, are the chief functionaries. It is housed near where 24 brokers met under a cottonwood tree opposite No. 60 Wall street, May 17, 1792, and signed an agreement as to the rates of commission to be charged. This association met irregularly at the Tontine coffee house, Wall and Water streets, and in 1817 a stock exchange along present lines was developed. In 1827 it was located at Merchants' exchange in Wall street, on the site of the old custom house. Thence, in 1854, after having moved to 43 Wall street and back again, it found a place at William and Wall streets; in 1856 at Lord's court, at William and Beaver streets, and in 1865 at Broad, New and Wall streets.

In 1869 it absorbed the Open Board of Brokers, and after the demise of the Gold board in 1879, bought the latter's premises and enlarged its own structure. Memberships or seats pass by sale, if the applicant is approved by the membership committee.

The price of a seat rose from something over $2,000 in 1871 to $34,000 in 1882, dropped to $20,000 in 1892 and since that time it has touched the $95,000 mark. The business of the exchange is by word of mouth, and dependent on individual good faith. A member's seat is responsible for his debts to the other members, in case of his failure.

Spaniels "Allrounders" in Hunting Dog Family

Spaniels are all members of one family, but a close study of their history fails to reveal any earlier mention of this active, sporting dog than that in Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales"; "For as a spaynel she wol on him lepe."

From this point, writes Maj. Mitford Brice in Answers Magazine, there are innumerable references to spaniels in books, and the household records of Henry VIII mention money paid to "Robin, the King's Majesty's Spaniel Keeper," for "hair cloth to rub spaniels with."

The most authoritative of all the ancient books is the "Treatise of Englishe Dogges," by Queen Elizabeth's physician, Doctor Caius, founder of Caius college, Cambridge. This was written in Latin in 1570, and the "Aquaticus or Spaniell which findeth game on the water" figures as one of the two headings under which all dogs are classified.

There scarcely exists a more popular breed than the merry Cocker or Cocking Spaniel, who, as a result of his great usefulness in woodcock shooting, acquired this name in 1870. Even though he prefers hunting to retrieving, his allround ability and hardiness are not easily surpassed.

Conch Used as Fish Horn

A musical blast on an enormous conch shell announces Bermuda fish peddlers. Now and then they give the shell a lusty toot, so that every housewife within a mile has time to run down to the roadside before they arrive. Most popular sea-food in the winter are spiny lobsters, large crawfish caught at night among the coral reefs. Their antennae often have a span of four feet, and their meat is so delicious that the supply barely fills local demands. Next to lobster in the favor of Bermudians are rock-fish, hamlet and other fish suitable for chowders. Recipes for this fish vary throughout the islands, resembling New England dinners in their diverse contents.

West Highland White Terrier

The West Highland white terrier, a small dog standing 8 to 12 inches at the shoulder and weighing 14 to 18 pounds, is distinctive because of his long, shaggy, white coat. This coat should be about 2½ inches long, hard and straight, with a dense, furry undercoat. The ears are small, pointed and erect; the eyes medium-sized, dark hazel, slightly sunk in the head and widely set apart; the tail 5 or 6 inches long, straight and held gayly in the air. The nose, roof of mouth and pads of feet are distinctly black in color. The dog has an appearance of a small, game, hardy terrier, strongly built, deep in chest and back ribs, straight back and powerful quarters on muscular legs.

Taller in the Morning

You're a bit taller in the morning than you are in the evening. You see, there are discs of cartilage—elastic-like substance—between the pieces that make up your backbone. During the day these discs are compressed by the weight of the body, and you shrink a little. During your night's rest the discs expand again and you regain your full height. With a grown man the difference between morning and evening height is half an inch or more. —Pearson's Weekly.

Electron and Positron

An electron is not so much a material particle carrying an electric charge as it is an ultimate particle of negative electricity itself. Consequently it could hardly be charged positively. There is, however, a somewhat similar but nevertheless distinct particle known as the positron, or positive electron. It has the same weight as the electron and a charge of equal magnitude but opposite sign.—Chicago Tribune.

Dainty Edelweiss Called Bride's Flower of Europe

According to Swiss stories, only the brave and the pure may find and pluck the edelweiss, a little white star-shaped mountain flower, notes a writer in the Washington Star.

Many poems and songs have been written about the little flower which grows high up in the Alps and the Pyrenees, and perhaps it is because of these stories that the edelweiss has won the reputation of growing only in remote and inaccessible places where he who would pick it must be daring to venture.

Only part of these legends are true, for the edelweiss is grown in many English and American gardens. It is a hardy little flower, kin to our daisy and black-eyed susan, and it flourishes with very slight encouragement.

On the other hand, left to its own devices, the edelweiss takes only to its favorite mountain heights, where it wears a little fuzzy coat as if for warmth against the icy mountain blasts. High up on rocky cliffs, it thrusts its roots into the cracks of limestone rocks and blossoms in a profusion of starry white flowers surrounded by wooly leaves. Its center is clustered and yellow.

But whenever and wherever it is domesticated, it invariably doffs its fuzzy cloak of hair and assumes the more commonplace texture of its garden neighbors.

Because of its romantic history the edelweiss has been much sought and much picked, until now it is protected by law in most of the Swiss cantons. Like the orange blossom in the United States, it is the bride's flower of Europe—a symbol of purity. Literally translated, its name means "noble white."

Goths, Teutonic People, Warlike and Unsettled

The Goths were a Teutonic people who in the First century A. D. appear to have inhabited the middle part of the basin of Vistula river, in what is now Poland. They were probably the easternmost of the Teutonic peoples, says the Boston Post.

According to their own traditions, they had come originally from what is believed to be Sweden. They do not enter into Roman history until the Third century when their frontier seems to have advanced considerably farther south. The Gothic peoples were warlike and not very settled, consequently they had probably not developed agriculture to any great extent.

From the Third century until well into the Seventh century the Goths were constantly at war with the Romans, and a great part of the Roman territory was conquered by the Goths, who were in turn overcome by the Roman culture, and the Gothic identity therefore disappeared.

Bakers Dozen

The "baker's dozen," which means 13 instead of the regular 12, had its origin in England long ago. Then, as in many countries at the present time, bread was sold by weight. But many bakers would "short-weight" their customers and a heavy penalty was inflicted for this practice. The city of London made a special provision for such cases. After the baker had weighed out the order the law said that he should add another piece of bread so that there would be no chance of dispute as to the quantity purchased and thus the risk of incurring the fine would be avoided. Thus 12 pieces of bread and the one extra which was added for surety's sake came to be known as the "baker's dozen." The thirteenth was known as the "vantage loaf," and the expression "baker's dozen" is still used in both England and America to mean good measure.

Travels of Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln's first American ancestor with the name Lincoln settled in New England. The last male descendant of President Lincoln bearing the name died in New England. Thus the story of eight generations of American Lincolns opens and closes in a New England setting, says Lincoln Lore. Abraham Lincoln made two visits to New England, one in 1848 and the other in the spring of 1860. One was a political mission in the interest of the Whig party, and the other, which had as its objective a visit to his son, Robert, then in school in New Hampshire, should also be set down to Lincoln's political advantage.

Can Grow New Parts

Spiders grow new legs with no apparent pain or difficulty, snails can replace eye-bearing tentacles when they are lost, lizards grow new tails and jaws, crabs new claws, and some few creatures can even replace lost heads, says Pathfinder Magazine. Among the warm-blooded animals, however, these regenerative abilities are very limited. Most young birds are able to grow new beaks, but the ability takes its most outstanding form in humans in the growing of new fingernails.

Ancient Marriage Proposal

One of the oldest recorded proposals of marriage in the world was found by members of the German Institute of Archeology working in Anatolia. The message, from the widow of the Pharaoh Tut-Ankh-Amen to the Hittite King Shuppiluliumash, reads: "I am very young and beautiful. I do not desire remarriage with a man of my own country. Send me one of thy sons, and after marriage with me I shall make him King of Egypt."—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Postage Stamp Size Was Cut to Reduce Expenses

John Wanamaker, while postmaster general of the United States, instituted many economies, and in 1890 asked for bids on postage stamps of a much smaller size than had been used in this country in the preceding 20 years, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune.

There was no valid reason for using large stamps, as many countries, Great Britain, France, and others, had always used small stamps for the ordinary postal rates. The change must have been to the public advantage, for only the slightest difference will be found between those stamps of 1890 and all the regular issues since that date, and any attempt to return to the large ones of the '80s would be opposed.

All the regular postage stamps issued between 1890 and the latter part of 1901 are closely related in design, even though they were the product of two engraving establishments, and despite the fact that there were some changes in colors and in paper. Those printed prior to 1894 were made under contract by the American Bank Note company, which had been low bidder for each four-year period since 1879, while those printed after 1894 were made by the government itself, through the agency of the bureau of engraving and printing, a division of the Treasury department. The bureau had printed many revenue stamps, but until this time had not attempted to print postage stamps. Its success is evident, for since that date no private company has been invited to submit bids in competition with the bureau.

U. S. Does Not Own Land Used for Panama Canal

Strictly speaking, the United States does not own the territory through which the Panama canal runs, says a writer in the Indianapolis News. Its tenure might be described as a perpetual lease. By the treaty signed at Washington November 18, 1903, Panama granted to the United States "in perpetuity the use, occupation and control of a zone of land" ten miles in width for the construction, maintenance and operation of a canal. Panama further granted to the United States "all the rights, power and authority within the zone" which "the United States would possess and exercise if it were the sovereign" of the territory, to "the entire exclusion of the exercise by the Republic of Panama of any such sovereign rights, power and authority." As "the price or compensation for the rights, power and privileges granted" the United States agreed to pay Panama the sum of $10,000,000 in gold coin, and also an annual payment during the life of the treaty of $250,000 in gold coin, beginning nine years after the exchange of the ratification of the treaty.

The United States could not legally transfer its rights in the Canal Zone to another nation without Panama's consent, under this agreement.

Decorate Rickshaw Men

City ordinance in Durban, South Africa, requires that rickshaw men paint their feet white, but the multi-colored, ornamental headdress is their own bright idea. It's the rickshaw idea of advertising, being based on the theory that the more outrageous the costume, the more plentiful the customers. Their hats are adorned with the horns of steers, gay feathers, snake skins and natural flowers. Most of their pay is dissipated on millinery upkeep.

Jury Holds Fish Inquest

There is a jury of eight "good men and true" in Birmingham whose duty is to hold inquests on—fish, says Pearson's Weekly.

They get busy when it is suspected that fish consigned to the city fish market from various ports is "on the turn." If the fish is bad it is condemned by these men, who are called the fish jury. They act as a protection to the general public, and by inspecting doubtful fish they also render service to the fish merchants and the city's official fish inspector.

Lured Men From Water

Older than Rome, Sorrento in Italy, goes back to the days of Greek mythology. A Phoenician colony older than Tyre, it was here the sirens dwelt who lured men from the water. This gave the town its name—Syrentum, then Surrentum and Sorrento. Its power of attracting men, and women too, in these modern days, has never been lost. It has only changed its motive and given life for death, and joy for sorrow.

Largest Chunk of Gold

The United States bureau of mines says that so far as it knows the largest piece of gold ever found was a chunk from a deep mine in Chile, weighing 4,000 troy ounces, or 330 avoirdupois pounds. The largest loose piece was a Beyer and Holterman nugget found at Hill End, New South Wales, in 1872, weighing 630 avoirdupois pounds gross and containing 193 pounds net of gold.

Garden Toad Valuable

An ordinary toad, fully matured and sound in wind and limb, is worth $20 to a gardener, according to Prof. A. F. Coventry of the University of Toronto. He does not guarantee that such a price can be obtained, but gives the assurance that every toad has a value not always recognized as an insect destroyer.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

National Press Building — Washington, D. C.

Washington.—President Roosevelt knows and those close to him realize that sometimes something more than a laugh is required to kill off a rumor. That is one of the reasons why the President is planning if and when congress adjourns to make an extended tour of this country. He knows of rumors going about the land that his health is not up to par and he is taking this method of disclosing to the American people by action rather than word the answer that he is physically fit.

A Laugh Not Enough

Whoever occupies the White House is continually subjected to whispered rumors as well as open assertions of one kind or another. Some, as in this instance, reflect on the health of the chief executive. Others, as happened within the last quarter of a century, reflected on the personal habits and practices of the President. Still others have related in times past to personal fortunes and financial dealings of the man in the White House. Usually these "whispering campaigns" are of a derogatory character. No one ever knows exactly how they start nor is it ever possible for observers to put a finger on the rumors as they float by. It is a condition that seems to be bred by prominence of the individual about whom the rumor mongers can operate because people are always interested in what a President of the United States is doing.

In the current instance the "whispering campaign" was largely unknown to Washington until summer resort residents began returning to the city. They brought back all sorts of stories that were being circulated in distant places concerning Mr. Roosevelt's health. The gossip, for that is what it appears to be, spread like wild-fire in Washington and became of so much concern that it crept into one of the White House press conferences.

"Mr. President," one of the 200 correspondents present asked, "are you in a little bad health?"

The chief executive's answer was the laugh which has endeared him to many people. He was just back from a short cruise aboard a yacht in Chesapeake bay. His face was sun-tanned. He leaned back in his chair and demanded to know what the correspondents thought about it. I think that the news dispatches from Washington that night indicated rather clearly what the correspondents thought about the state of the President's health, for surely none of these dispatches indicated any particular alarm.

Nevertheless, the rumors continued to go and a good many thousand people apparently believed that Mr. Roosevelt had broken under the strain of his New Deal presidency. So, before the summer is over millions of Americans probably will have an opportunity to see for themselves just as the correspondents saw at the press conference that the President still has his smile; that his hair is no more gray than when he took office in 1933, and that his countenance shows no earmarks of the strain which every President of the United States finds an inherent part of that job.

Let People See for Themselves

One trip upon which Mr. Roosevelt has set his heart is a tour to the Pacific coast and return. It will provide an opportunity for several millions of Americans to see him and a lesser number to hear him speak. It will carry him through territory which contains probably about half of the nation's population.

It is well recognized in Washington that no amount of denials by informed persons or any amount of second-hand testimony is sufficient to squelch malicious stories of the kind that have been circulated about the President. The eye witness is the only one who is prepared to discredit such stories and, unless present plans are revised, the eye witnesses will be many this summer. The President probably will make other trips during the late fall and early winter as well. Plans for these are still in the making and their length and number depends somewhat upon the date of congressional adjournment.

The program fits well into the Roosevelt methods. In the 28 months of his tenure the President has done a considerable amount of travel. He has made three cruises on the yacht owned by Vincent Astor, two of which lasted more than two weeks each. He traveled to the east coast of Canada in June, 1933, aboard the craft, Amberjack, and returned two weeks later aboard a navy ship. Last year, it will be remembered, he visited Haiti, Puerto Rico, the Virgin islands, Colombia, the Panama canal, Clipperton island, and Hawaii. On his return from that cruise he crossed the Northwest, making several speeches before reaching Washington.

In 1933 and in 1934 he visited Warm Springs, Georgia, the colony where victims of infantile paralysis are nursed back to health and with which the President, because of his own affliction, has had much personal connection. In returning from the 1934 visit to Warm Springs, Mr. Roosevelt stopped at Muscle Shoals, Norris dam, and Birmingham for personal visits to points and things which interested him. All of these trips have been in addition to periodical visits to his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., and, apparently, all that he needs to add to his mileage this summer is a period of comparative calmness in Washington.

If superficial appearances count for anything, the administration is actually making moves designed to reduce the federal treasury's deficit. It is yet too early to tell definitely what the plans are and administration spokesmen are strangely quiet about them but there are certain signs and portents which may be examined in the effort to determine which way the government is headed in respect of the gigantic expenditures for public works, relief, and general government costs.

To Reduce Deficit

While congressional committees continue to examine tax questions with a view to enactment of legislation that will increase federal revenue, the President and his advisers have taken steps to cut down the drain on the treasury.

The first and probably the most important of these moves is the announcement that on November 1 federal aid to those people unable to work will cease definitely. Relief Administrator Hopkins announced after a conference with the President that the relief policy will be changed on November 1 and that the various states, counties, and municipalities will be expected after that date to look after that segment of the population known as the unemployables. These are people who for one reason or another cannot earn their own living by work.

Previously Mr. Roosevelt had directed his fiscal advisers to make a thorough study of relief requirements for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1936. While this is almost 11 months away, the President told newspaper correspondents that he desired to know as early as possible what the burden of relief would be in the future. His announcement was interpreted as having a connection with budget requirements and prospective revenue under the proposed new tax legislation.

Earlier, Public Works Administrator Ickes had made known that the program of public works expenditures for improvement of the Mississippi valley and its rivers had been abandoned. It will be recalled that the National Resources board had recommended extensive improvements to be carried out from public works funds in the hands of the public works administrator. These involve vast sums. Now, it is made to appear that the PWA and the administration have in mind some restraint on expenditures of that character and that hereafter gigantic allotments of a public works or improvement character may be expected to be fewer in number.

The result of this will be, of course, to hold in the treasury some of the total of the $5,000,000,000 public works appropriation.

Reduction of the outgo for direct relief necessarily will be reflected in the remainder of the public works-relief fund and it is reported that other plans are in the making which will have as their prospective end a restoration to private employment of greater numbers of idle workers than heretofore have been contemplated.

Then, as another indication of administration intention to restore funds to the treasury and thus reduce the difference between income and expenses was an announcement by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. Mr. Jones made known that hereafter the RFC will not make loans to banks. He declared that the banking structure was in an excellent condition and that further aid was not required.

The fact which Mr. Jones did not mention in his announcement is, however, that the banks are exhibiting no particular desire to borrow from the federal government. The RFC already holds preferred stock in almost half of the banks in the country and these banks, according to RFC records, are liquidating their obligations as rapidly as they can do so. This is significant.

I have reported to you previously how slowly the administration plans for spending the $5,000,000,000 works relief fund were progressing. In connection with the Hopkins' announcement on relief and the President's relief survey order, it was disclosed that only approximately fifteen thousand persons have been given jobs since the money was made available. This figure does not include the additional list of recruits for the Civilian Conservation corps whose numbers have grown from 300,000 to 403,000. It will be recalled that provision was made in the $5,000,000,000 appropriation resolution for an increase of the CCC from 300,000 to 600,000. Thus, in two months, the CCC has had only about one-third of the total increase which was expected. Frankly, CCC enlistments have been so disappointing that the responsible authorities have changed the age limit in order to permit the maximum of entries into that service. Those in a position to know and who will speak candidly about conditions entertain some fear that the total ever will approach the 600,000 to which enlistments are restricted.

NAZIS OF GERMANY RENEWING FIGHT ON THE CATHOLICS AND THE JEWS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

DETERMINATION of the Nazis to put an end to "political Catholicism" in Germany and their consequent drive against Catholic youth organizations may bring on results more serious even than has the Nazi anti-semitism. General Goering, head of the secret police, gave out a warning to Catholic priests to be careful in their comments from the pulpit, and Franz Guertner, minister of justice, issued a decree threatening prosecution for any priest violating Goering's injunction. Throughout the country generally the Catholic clergy was cautious, but in Freiburg, Baden, where the Goering order had not been published before Sunday, the priests read in their pulpits a letter from the episcopate calling the Nazi action a violation of the concordat with the Vatican. To this charge the Nazis reply that the Catholics were the first to violate the concordat by making attacks on the Hitler youth movement in their parish papers.

Franz Guertner

This new "purge" by the Nazis includes a renewed crusade against the Jews and dissolution of the Steel Helmets, veterans' organization, in various provinces. The Jews are helpless and, if Julius Streicher has his way, will be all driven out of Berlin or segregated in ghettos. But the Steel Helmets, whose chief is Minister of Labor Franz Seldte, are likely to cause the Hitler government a lot of trouble. The organization's weekly paper is using language that is not often heard in Germany these days, and Seldte is demanding the reason for suppression of the local divisions.

ANTI-CATHOLIC riots in Northern Ireland brought on fierce anti-Protestant reprisals in the Irish Free State, and it looked as if the entire island might be involved in a religious war. In Belfast a number of persons were killed by snipers, and many were injured by bombings, stone-throwings and incendiarism. At Clones the mobs destroyed a Masonic temple and set fire to a Protestant gospel hall and a recreation hall maintained by non-religious bodies. In Limerick young men ran amuck, smashing windows of buildings owned by Protestants. The Free State troops were called out but didn't seem able or willing to stop the rioting in the cities. The trouble began with the Orangemen's celebration of the Battle of the Boyne.

FARMERS in the Middle West, ready to harvest their crops, found they couldn't get hands to do the work. The idle men ordinarily counted on for this were on the relief rolls and declined offers of farm labor for two reasons: The wages paid by the farmers were less than the sums received from the relief organization or for government works, and if the men once went off the dole they feared they would have trouble getting back there when the harvest was over. The situation was desperate and emergency relief commissions were urged to take action. This they did in the states affected and it was announced the "revolt" was under control.

The Illinois commission stopped all relief works in the rural areas until after harvest. In Kansas persons refusing any temporary employment were removed from the relief rolls. In Nebraska 26 counties were cut off from federal relief allotments and in 15 others the allotments were cut in half.

In nearly a score of Iowa counties officials denied relief and able-bodied men on relief rolls were admonished to accept employment in the harvest fields.

Relief workers in Redwood county, Minnesota, shut down works projects and officials in many other counties indicated they would follow the example.

In North Dakota all but specialized projects were halted and the state administrator announced that as soon as the harvest was over the new works progress administration would take care of unemployables.

THAT wholly un-American procedure, the general strike, was tried out by organized labor in Indiana and the 67,000 inhabitants of Terre Haute were deprived of all food supplies. The local authorities of Vigo county called on the governor for help and Mr. McNutt promptly ordered 14 companies of the National Guard to the scene. Brig. Gen. Wray De Prez, in command, promised the merchants who had been bullied into shutting their shops would be given protection, and said his first endeavor would be to restore the milk and ice service. This had been cut off even from hospitals and homes with sick children.

The general strike was called by 48 unions without warning, because labor leaders had been unable to reach an agreement with the Columbian Enameling and Stamping company. Some 600 of that concern's employees went on strike in March and the plant was closed down, but the union leaders thought it was about to be reopened by strikebreakers.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT spent the week-end cruising about on the government yacht Sequoia and had as his special guest Attorney General Cummings. It was assumed with reason that one of their chief topics of discussion was the administration's recent defeats in the federal courts and the chances of getting by with the New Deal legislation lately passed or now pending. The minority in congress and such anti-administration organizations as the Liberty league were aroused to new activities and attacks on the President's policies. It was said that the proposal was made to Mr. Roosevelt that the "death sentence" in the holding companies bill be dropped for the present and carried to the country in the 1936 campaign, but that the President vetoed the idea, insisting that the measure not be permitted to die in conference. So the conferees began the task of trying to reach an agreement. Those for the senate were four to one in favor of the death sentence; those for the house, three to two against it. The facts being brought out by the two inquiries into the activities of lobbyists, of course, were expected to have some influence on the result.

Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives, gave out an appeal for fair play. He said:

"Millions of men and women who have invested their savings in utility securities are asking the question: Are these savings to be destroyed because a few minor utility officials have resorted to scandalous and even dishonest methods in opposing the public utilities bill? Is the small utility investor to be penalized and the industry to be crippled because of isolated incidents of this kind?"

REPORTING for the eleven months that ended June 1, 1935, the AAA showed that its expenditures totaled $767,195,306. The report added that for the eleven months funds available were $918,045,145, leaving a balance on hand June 1 of $150,849,829.

Expenditures were divided as follows: Rental and benefit payments to farmers, $535,547,698; removal and conservation of surplus agricultural commodities, $10,043,550; drouth relief, food conservation and disease eradication, $145,595,764; trust fund operations $11,746,526; administrative expenses, $34,401,654, disbursement expenses, $737,005, and tax refunds, $29,123,107.

TWO to one against the New Deal was the week's score in Federal court decisions. The administration suffered severely. The Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati first held unconstitutional the condemnation of land by the PWA for slum clearance. Then the Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston dealt the AAA a terrific blow by declaring unconstitutional the processing and flour taxes. The one favorable decision was by the Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and was that the sale of cheap electric power by the Tennessee Valley authority was constitutional.

Chester Davis

Harold Ickes, who is PWA administrator, said the slum clearance work would be carried on, though necessarily in modified form. But Chester Davis, AAA administrator, openly admitted that "the end of the processing taxes would mean the end of the Agricultural Adjustment administration in all its important aspects." He would not confess that he believed for a minute the Supreme court would confirm the ruling of the court at Boston. He asserted he had expected that decision to be adverse, saying: "That section around Boston is a hotbed of resistance to the processing taxes. Why, it's right up there among all those cotton manufacturers." This was most extraordinary comment from a high government official, but the Appeals court in Boston has not yet cited Davis for contempt.

Most well informed and unbiased persons have never believed the processing taxes would stand up under court test. The Guffey coal bill has some similar features so that those who debate it should read these paragraphs in the Boston decision:

"The power of congress to regulate interstate commerce does not authorize it to do so by taxing products either of agriculture or industry before they enter interstate commerce, or otherwise to control their production merely because their production may indirectly affect interstate commerce.

"The issue is not, as the government contended, whether congress can appropriate funds for any purpose deemed by congress in furtherance of the 'general welfare,' but whether congress has any power to control or regulate matters left to the state and lay a special tax for that purpose."

GEORGE, ex-king of Greece, was planning a sudden hop to Athens to resume the throne. Emissaries from Greece were received in the exclusive London hotel where the former monarch resides; a big airplane was kept standing in readiness at Croydon, and at another airport a second plane was prepared to carry George's servants. But the news hounds found it out and gave it to the public, whereat George was exceedingly wroth and his contemplated coup was postponed. His secretary asked newspapers and news agencies to refrain from publishing anything about his movements and reporters were not allowed to enter the hotel.

DROPPING all their rebellious indignation, the Democrats of the house did everything the administration wished in considering the social security bill as altered by the senate. The conferees had settled all differences after two weeks of hard work, but one of the amendments they accepted was that permitting private pension systems to function under the measure. The majority members of the house were informed that President Roosevelt was opposed to this, so they refused to accept it. The senate would not permit the elimination of the amendment, so back to conference went the bill.

THOMAS D. SCHALL, the blind senator from Minnesota, has been one of the sharpest tongued critics of the administration in the senate. Recently he described President Roosevelt as a "megalomaniac," and, though the word was subsequently eliminated from the Record, the Democratic senators were decidedly miffed. So a little later Senators Robinson, Black and Bone found opportunity to tell Schall what they think of him and to demand that he conform to the rules of "decency."

Senator Schall

The argument started when Schall had read by a clerk an editorial from a Texas editor, and an address of his own—all critical of the administration.

Robinson protested. He asserted "when one whose moral obliquities are so great as are those of the senator from Minnesota, it becomes necessary for some one to object." He added Schall "cannot shield himself behind an unfortunate affliction."

The Schall speech said President Roosevelt was imitating Mussolini, and that Ben Cohen, an administration aid and bill drafter, had "assumed the legislative functions usurped by the Executive.

Robinson called Schall the "misrepresentative from Minnesota" and expressed the opinion the senator had "employed" some one to write his speeches.

"It is small business and only could be done by a man of small mentality," said the Arkansas senator.

Replying, Schall said, "If the people knew what was behind this government they would not stand for it a minute."

SENDING floods of telegrams to senators or representatives for or against pending legislation will not be so effective in the future, as a result of the disclosures before the senate lobby investigators. They heard evidence to the effect that large numbers of telegrams against the utilities bill were sent from Warren, Pa., by an employee of the Associated Gas and Electric system, that the messages were signed with names taken from a city directory and that the originals were destroyed at Warren.

SENATOR J. HAMILTON LEWIS of Illinois, a member of the foreign relations committee, long has urged that Great Britain be persuaded to cede to the United States her island possessions in the Caribbean sea in payment of her war debt. The other day he was moved to bring the subject up again and delivered an interesting speech in the senate. This time he based his proposal upon the "peace offer" of England to cede a portion of her territory in Somaliland to Ethiopia, which in turn would cede certain territory to Italy with a view of averting the impending war.

Senator Lewis

The senator also suggested that England surrender all rights she claims to privileges of constructing a Nicaraguan canal, recalling, as a precedent, that England compelled France to yield all claims to territory adjacent to the Suez canal.

The British islands in the West Indies, the senator said, are both useful as defense and necessary as protection for the United States. They "could be seized in time of war between nations fighting among themselves to possess the Caribbean and Southern seas. They could be used as the backyard of the United States from which supplies could be stored to be used in assault on America."

EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE appeared before the Ethiopian parliament and made an impassioned appeal to his countrymen to fight Italy to the death, declaring he had prepared himself to die in the contest if need be.

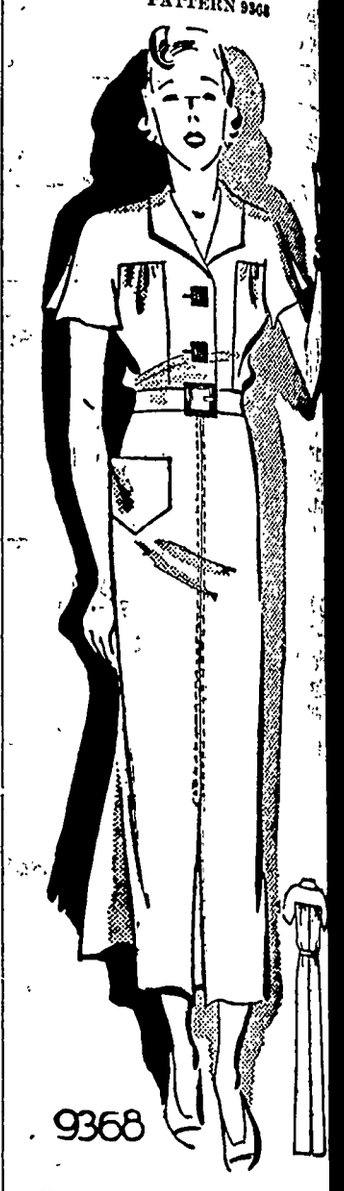
"Ethiopia knows how to fight to preserve its independence and its sovereignty," he said.

"Soldiers! Follow the example of your warrior ancestors. Soldiers! Traders! Peasants! Young and old, men and women: Unite to face the invader! Your sovereign will be among you and will not hesitate to give his blood for the independence of his country."

Though the League of Nations council was scheduled to meet for consideration of the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel between July 25 and August 2, there were indications that the European nations were about ready to abandon Ethiopia to its fate and that if "The Lion of Judah" doesn't give in completely, Mussolini will be permitted to have his way with him. That probably will mean a long guerrilla warfare the details of which will not be pleasant reading.

Action in Every Line of This O

PATTERN 9368



Everyone you know—everywhere you go! — Action — Action — Action! The natural expression of youth and good health. Even our clothes are "built for action" these days. Here's one that just can't wait to be going. You just know you're "going places" in the fashion world with the free stride the front and back pleat give you. The simple bodice miraculously becomes an action pleated sleeve and anyone can see what subtle flattery is gathered into that bodice. A proper set-up for your summer wardrobe would be a dress of striped shirting, another in washable pastel sports silk. The frock is just as appropriate for street or office wear as for sports.

Pattern 9368 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 36-inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coin or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sewing chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

SMALL NEED YET TO WORRY ABOUT ICE RECESSION

It appears that our refrigerating plant is breaking down. The matter of the receding polar ice cap has for a long time engaged the attention of scientists. Within recent times the recession of the cap has been of such proportions that evidence of it has been observed within the span of only a few decades.

For instance, the Russian Arctic expert, N. G. Datsky, in re-examining areas surveyed 40 years before, found that in Siberia, where his predecessor, Professor Shrenk, found eternal frost at the depth of two meters, there was now no frost at any depth, not even in the marshes. In other localities, where Professor Shrenk found only shrubless tundra, Mr. Datsky saw new growths of timber!

Only recently, Prof. R. T. Belknap of the University of Michigan came upon a pyramid of rocks and a note originally placed at the foot of the Cornell glacier by the late Professor Tarr. The note was dated 1896. In the time intervening, the glacier had moved back three-quarters of a mile from the marker.

R. F. Griggs of the University of Washington tells us that in the Alaskan tundra country the forest line is advancing at the rate of a mile a century. Trees are now growing on land which had been barren for 100,000 years.

If this keeps on, you say, Hudson bay will eventually become a subtropical body of water. Well, what of it? It has been several times before, and, if geological evidence is anything to draw conclusions from, it will be again.

According to W. J. Humphries of the United States weather bureau, if all the ice of the polar caps melted, the ocean levels would be raised 151 feet! And that's something else to try out on the slide rule.—Earl Chapin in Forum and Century.

RECORD-BREAKING PROGRAM PLANNED FOR STATE FAIR

Des Moines, Ia., Special:

An Iowa State Fair of old-time proportions and flavor—in exhibits, entries, entertainment and crowds,—will greet vacation-seekers when the gates of the huge 1935 exposition swing open here Aug. 21.

For this year's fair embodies an array of eight days of educational features and amusements, the like of which Iowa has not witnessed in more than a decade. Abundant rains have assured a bumper agricultural show, increased premium offerings have brought out the greatest livestock entry in years, the industrial and machinery exhibits are 50 per cent greater than they have been in any year since 1931, and the entertainment program has been augmented by a wide variety of new features.

Here are some of the main items on the 8-day menu of education and entertainment:

The national livestock show, the Iowa corn and small grain show, a statewide flower and garden clubs show, an all-Iowa women's exposition, the largest 4-H Club show to be held in the United States this year, Iowa public schools exhibit, mid-season auto show and radio show, the Iowa FHA model home, 1935 home conveniences exposition, national industrial and farm equipment show, Iowa wild-life exhibit, state horticultural show, national Shorthorn show.

Three days of national circuit auto races, first statewide amateur baseball tournament, four afternoons and six nights of horse races, four nights and one matinee of fancy harness and saddle horse shows, third annual State Fair Rodeo—one of the greatest in the west this year, circus and hippodrome every afternoon and night, the world's fair "Festival of Light" and fireworks show, statewide 4-H kittenball tournament, midwest-national horseshoe tournament, statewide old fiddlers' contest, state checker tournament, team pulling contests, continuous band and orchestra concerts, a record-breaking midway of sideshows and rides, 100 acres of free camp grounds.

Beginning with a full program on Aug. 23, the fair will continue day and night through Aug. 30. The largest crowds in years are expected.

We have now reached the time of year when the sun wilts most every man's desire to be a farmer.

"Don't expect too much," warns Phil Ossifer. "When Moses led his people to the promised land they had to plow it to get results."

Bankers burdened with idle money might revive the idea that forty dollar land is good security for a two dollar loan.

MANY REFUSE JOBS

cent dispatches tell of thous- of men in various parts of the ry who have refused to accept r private or government em- ment, preferring to remain on t relief without working.

rmers in the vicinity of West- er, Va., complained that loaf- laughed at them when offered and in South Dakota and else e difficulty is being experienc- obtaining workers to harvest .

e Relief Administration has d notice that any person on who refuses a job will be cut the rolls immediately, but ing up on the slackers willl difficult task.

ch dissatisfaction is being en- ered because of the widely ing rates of pay offered on us work relief projects, which e from $19 to $94 per month. e who would receive the lowest of pay will naturally remain irect relief as long as possible.

ery little progress has been e in the direction of getting relief projects under way, a few thousand men having transferred from direct relief ar. The entire relief situation s to be badly muddled, and problem of how to straghten t is a serious one.

TEACHING 4-H CALF TO STAND IS IMPORTANT FOR FALL SHOW

Teaching the 4-H calf to stand correctly is one of the most important steps in preparing the club calf for the fall shows, advises J. S. Quist, assistant state boys' club leader. It is a step which should receive a great deal of attention during these last 2 or 3 weeks before the shows.

By leading the calf each day and teaching him to stand with his feet squarely under him. the actual last minute details of fitting for the show will be greatly reduced. If this is accomplished the only things necesary to do before the show are to wash the calf, polish his horns, see that his feet are not too long and use the clippers.

Leading the calf in the evening when it is cool and the flies are less distracting is the time advised to teach him to stand correctly. By the use of a light pole or stick with which to move his feet, the calf will soon step naturally into the desired position when he stops.

It is also suggested that the calf be shown before as many small groups of farm visitors as possible so that he may become more or less accustomed to the crowds at the show. If the calf is well broken to lead and stand properly, the difficulties of showing will be greatly reduced.

Albert Kehl Moves

Albert Kehl and family, who have been living on their farm north of Klemme on Highway 69, since last March, Tuesday moved back to their other farm home north of Klemme on the east road. Mr. Kehl has been farming both places. We understand that he has rented the farm on Highway 69 for next year.

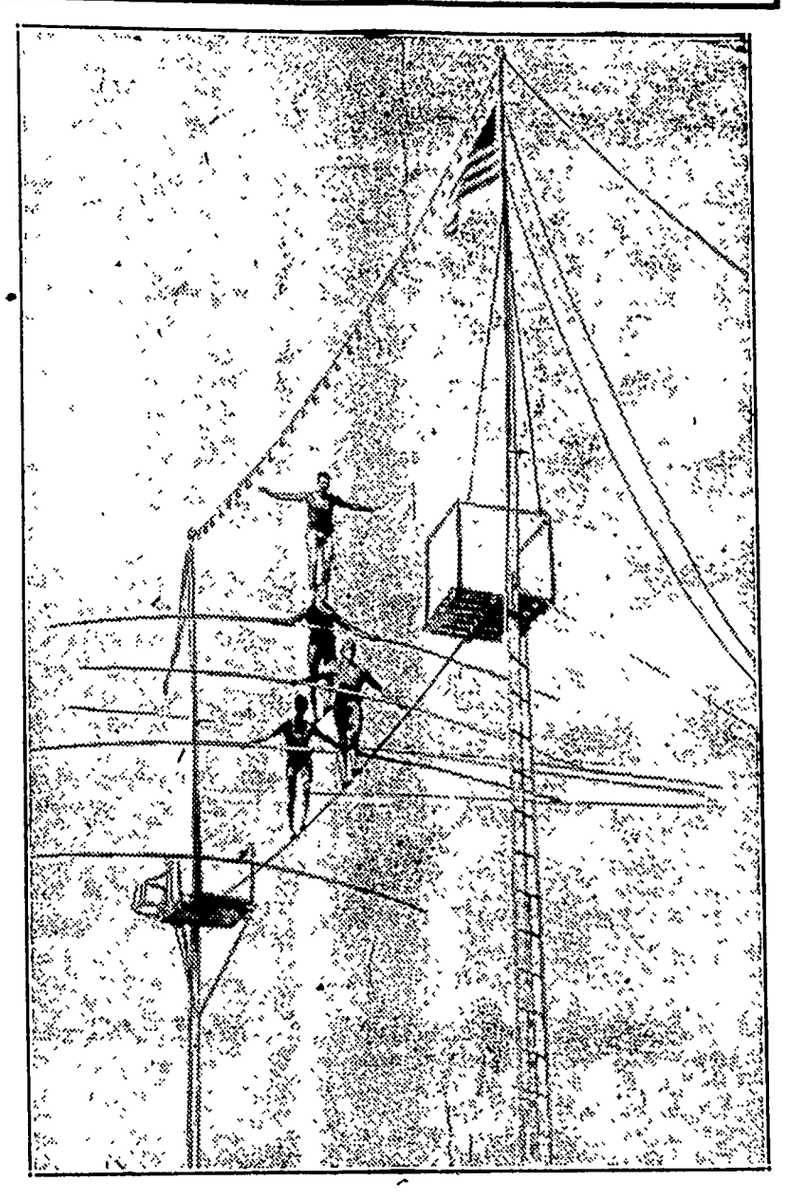
Top Race Horses of Midwest at State Fair

Des Moines, Ia., Special: Entry of the outstanding trotters and pacers nearly every section of the midwest promises that this year's Iowa State air races will outshine any such classics witnessed in this state in a decade. ntries total more than 200 harness horses for the four afternoons of horse cing from Monday, Aug. 26 through Thursday, Aug. 29. Auto races will a feature on three other afternoons, Aug. 23, 24 and 30.

Congress of Daredevils Thrills State Fair Crowds



Des Moines, Ia., Special: The newest thrillers from the big tops of America and Europe will again be brought to the Iowa State Fair this season to augment the afternoon and evening grandstand programs. Above are the "four eagles" who ride bicycles and juggle on a wire high in the air. Other fair circus features include trapeze and horizontal bar performers, clowns, gymnasts, strong men, and a roller-skating ballet. The Iowa State Fair opens this year with a complete program on Aug. 23, continuing through Aug. 30.

State Highway Police Patrolling Iowa Roads

NEW STATE HIGHWAY PATROL WENT ON DUTY MONDAY

Claude Benedict Will Patrol Roads In This Territory

The new Highway Patrol were assigned to temporary districts and went on patrol duty over the state Monday.

Hancock County and other adjoining counties in the northwest pant of the state are in the Carrol Division. Cerro Gordo county and other adjoining counties are in the Marshalltown district.

Claude Benedict has been assigned to this territory and will have his headquarters at Garner as a day-time patrolman.

Clair West, Klemme young man who is on the force, was in town Monday forenoon on his way to Spirit Lake where he will headquarter with his companion, Harold Fisher. West and Fisher went on duty Monday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock at Algona. Their hours are from 3:00 p. m. until midnight. Another smaller group of patrolmen will work the highways from midnight to 7:00 a. m., while a larger group will patrol the highways during the daylight hours.

Iowa Highways are now patrolled, so it's up to YOU!

ABOUT AUTO DRIVERS LICENSE

There are still quite a number of people who have not yet received their new drivers license. The old license should be carried until you receive your new one. All new licenses will be issued within the next two weeks. After that time there will be no excuse for not having a new license.

"Bat-Man" Will Fly At Iowa State Fair

Des Moines, Iowa:—Clem Sohn, "batwinged" flyer, who startled the aviation world recently by leaping from a plane and soaring through the air on wings attached to his arms and legs, will make the same flight at the coming Iowa State Fair, under contracts signed with exposition officials here today.

Sohn will make his famous "bat-winged" flight on four afternoons of the State Fair. Monday, Aug. 26 through Thursday, Aug. 29th. His performance will include both straight soaring with his "wings" and looping the loop.

The flights at the fair will begin at a height of 8,000 feet and Sohn will attempt to make his landing on the aviation field in front of the grandstand.

Due to the fact that Sohn will start this bat flight from a height of nearly two miles, rendering visibility difficult, he will wear a special "tracer" apparatus attached to his leg, during his leaps at the State Fair. The apparatus will leave a trail of white smoke, to enable fair crowds to follow the course of this soaring and looping from the moment he leaps from his plane.

Sohn's "wings" are the result of several years of study of the flight of various types of birds, which he made while attempting to develop his unique flying method. His present apparatus is modeled after the wings of a bat, with webbed fabric which spreads from feet to hands, and a secondary balancing spread between his feet. In his flying he planes with the winds, soaring and gliding like a gull.

Tremendous crowds have gathered to watch the few appearances he has made since his first sensational leap.

Klemme Will Put On Early Fall Celebration

REPAYMENTS ON 1934 CORN LOANS NEARLY COMPLETE

As under the 1933 corn loan program, when the Government realized 100 percent on loans made on farm stored corn, complete liquidation of the money advanced to farmers on 1934 corn is expected within a few days, the Commodity Credit Corporation has announced.

The 15,689 farmers who took advantage of the 1934 program had repaid all but $148,310 of their borrowings on July 20th. Though these loans were due and payable on July 1. Commodity Credit officials point out that, as in connection with any loan, a short period is required for liquidation.

Under the 1934 program, approximately $11,038,390 was advanced to farmers on 20,067,818 bushels of corn at the loan value rate of 55 cents a bushel. The volume of loans during the past season was not as large as under the first program in 1933 because of considerably higher corn prices and the limited supply of corn on farms. Though the corn loans will be made available again this fall, AAA officials state that it is too early to determine probable corn supplies on hand this fall and therefore impossible to establish the loan value rate at this time.

The corn loan program is recognized as a valuable device for carrying reserve supplies from one year to another, provided that it is coupled with sound production control. Consequently, only those farmers participating tho corn-hog adjustment program are eligible for a corn loan. The Administration further points out that the corn loan program enables producers to market their crop in a more orderly fashion and to take advantage of price increases.

Supt. Hunter And Family On Western Trip

Boy's Elbow Dislocated

Harmon, 8 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Neuhring, who live southwest of Klemme, fell from a pony Monday afternoon and injured his deft arm. An X-Ray revealed that the elbow was dislocated. A few days and Harmon will be back to normal again, although the experience was a rather painful affair.

CELEBRATION DATE SET FOR FRIDAY, AUGUST 30TH

Committees Appointed To Make Arrangements For Big Day

At a meeting of Klemme business men Monday evening it was voted upon and decided to put on a celebration and Friday, August 30th was set as the date. By that date threshing will be well over and the busy season has slacked up, so it should be an ideal date for a big day.

Committees have been appointed to work out the various details for the celebration, such as sports, entertainment, attractions, concession. advertising, booster trip, band, etc. With the committees becoming active it is assured that a real celebration. will be put on.

Mark a circle on your calendar and set aside August 30 and plan to spend the day and evening in Klemme.

As details are worked out the Times will publish full facts regarding the big day.

THRESHING IS IN FULL SWING IN THIS COMMUNITY

Oats Will Average Well Above Fifty Bushels To The Acre

Threshing began in this community last week and this week the annual job is in full swing with threshing crews working at top speed in every community.

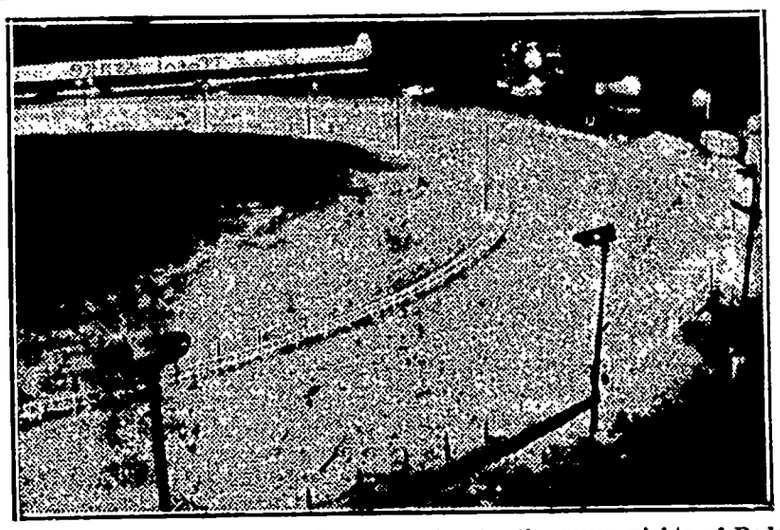
The small grain will average better than fifty bushels to the acre. We have heard of several fields going well above that mark. Some fields thresh out around 60 to 65 bushels to the acre, while some have even gone over 75 bushels to the acre.

Elevator men report that the grain is light this year.

WELLEMEYER BUILDING NEW ENTRANCE AT THADA STORE

Art Wellemeyer is making a number of fine improvemens on his building and one of the features will be a new entrance to the Thada Store on the west side of the building. The plate glass windows are being revamped, a new entrance built and a canopy will be built over the entire entrance and display window on the west side. Not only will the new entrance and canopy add to th attractiveness of the building, but it will also be a fine shelter in bad weather.

Boost Illumination for Night Races at State Fair



Des Moines, Ia., Special: In preparation for the seven nights of Rodeo and horse racing at this year's Iowa State Fair, the exposition management has just stepped-up the track illumination better than 50 per cent, making this now the most perfectly lighted racetrack in the midwest. The horse racing program for the 1935 exposition will include four afternoons of harness races, and two running races every night for six nights. The night program also includes the third annual Rodeo, a big hippodrome show, the world's fair "Festival of Light" and a fireworks show. The fair will open with a full program on Aug. 23, continuing through Aug. 30.

August---
---a busy month

The only chance we have to do such things as "repair the building," "overhaul the heating plant" or otherwise get ready for winter, is while the farmers are threshing during August.

Another fact, August is the best month of the year for selling Trunks, Bags, and Suit Cases. As usual we have a nice supply for you to pick from.

August is the month when School Directors buy "Teachers Desks," "Pianos," "Sand Tables," "Playground Equipment," "Phonographs" etc., for the opening of the school year. We order these things for them and mark every order "Rush!" Some of the items, of course, we carry in stock.

This year during August we offer Cut Prices on all the furniture on our Sales floor. This includes New Furniture, Used rebuilt furniture and Rugs of all kinds.

NORTH IOWA FREE FAIR WILL OPEN MONDAY, AUGUST 19TH

The North Iowa Fair which opens officially Monday, August 19 will be the largest and one of the most interesting staged in Iowa since 1929, if the advance reservations and indications are a criterion of what is to take place at the Fair Grounds at Mason City this year.

Monday, August 19, the opening day of the fair will be featured by an eight event auto race program that will bring together the greatest speedway and dirt track drivers in the country competeing in championship races. The evening program will feature the initial appearance in the Middle West of the famous revue 'Hi-Lites of Rhythm' with a cast of 40 people. This revue will entertain the Grand Stand crowds nightly.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons will be given over to lovers of horse racing with a $500 Stake purse daily.

Friday, the closing day of the fair, the management has been fortunate in securing the world's outstanding sports figure, Barney Oldfield, of racing fame, to help commemorate the closing of the Fair. A thrill show will be offered as an added attraction.

As is the custom admission to the fair grounds will be free with a great array of free exhibits booked for the midway. Grandstand admission will remain at 50 cents and children will be admitted for 25 cents.

Those who drove were: Mrs. Ben Coobs, Mrs. Stewart Helvilin, Ruth Wellemeyer, Franklin Kluckhohn, John Ward and Mildred Johnson.

Kluckhohn's Re-Arrange Store

The Kluckhohn Store presents an entirely different appearance since stock and fixtures have been rearranged, and new lighting fixtures installed.

The grocery stock is no longer at the rear of the store, but has been arranged along the west wall, and the shoe stock has been moved to the rear and east side of the store.

The new arrangement adds to the appearance as well as the convenience afforded.

Ten thousand critics can point out the winner's mistakes and faults and dumbness. They are the ones who lost their bets.

We have now reached that important stage of recovery called returning to confidence, where every body thinks everyone else is getting out of the red.

Some Plant Juices Poisonous

Juice of the common poinsettia is deadly. All juices from plants of this family are poisonous, and many of them are used in medicines, all powerful in action and dangerous to the layman. Seeds of the castor oil plant and of the "Jimson Weed," Datura stramonium, have proved fatal to humans and the juices of these and a dozen other common garden plants irritate the skin, as do even common things like pineapples, elephant's ears or taro, papaya and the hairs on Chinese primroses.

Boundaries Between Seasons

The dates of the equinoxes—that is, the dates of the sun's crossing of the equator—are approximately March 21 and September 22. The dates of the solstices—when the sun is farthest north or south, from the equator—are approximately June 21 and December 21. These positions of the sun are considered to mark the boundaries between the seasons. The time varies a little from year to year, and the season may begin a day earlier or later than the dates given.

Advantage of Paper Windows

Oriental children are less susceptible to rickets than Occidental ones because the paper windows in Chinese and Japanese homes transmit more ultra-violet light than window glass. The paper window panes are treated with tung oil, which enables them to transmit about 40 per cent of the ultra-violet light between 2,500 and 3,000 angstrom units, a region of the spectrum to which ordinary window glass is opaque.

Migrates Easily

Home to the coyote is wherever he digs his den. He migrates easily and upon slight provocation. Coyotes multiply rapidly. The litters are large, averaging five to seven puppies, which look much like young German police dogs. With the coyote's adaptability, shrewdness, boldness, and ability to multiply, it is possible they may eventually inhabit the entire United States.

Blind Enjoy Smoking

The old belief that seeing the smoke is essential to the enjoyment of tobacco has been disproved by a census taken at blind institutions in England. At St. Dunstan's, famous hostel for blind soldiers, 95 per cent of the inmates smoke. Similar results were found at other blind institutions. In some of them all the inmates are smokers.

We saw interesting st off the shore, jagged ries and a lighthouse on e roughest points. A high e provided a view never to ten.

re within a few miles of r and arrived there just inutes before 8:00 a. m. e gates were opened. We our passport and were our way. The drive into iam and Port Arthur was real mountain country and rests.

ere truly dumb-founded arrived at Fort William t a very modern city of eople and its twin sister ort Arthur with a popula- ver 20,000. They are called n Cities of Canada. They under Bay Harbor and are d so that they are now e city.

Port Arthur we returned William and then took the Road to Kababeka Falls, 20 rom the cities. Kababeka the show place of Canada ould not be missed by any ring in that part of Canada. is is 128 feet high and 200 feet wide. Below the 5,000 horse power of elec- is generated for Fort Wil- dustry. The falls and the orge it has cut is truly a ful sight.

e are a number of fine lls in the vicinity. Some re right along the highway sily viewed, while others can wed by a hike through the mountains Other beautiful Falls along the route include High Falls also on the Kaministiquia river; Middle Falls on the Pigeon River; Gooseberry River Falls, Manitou Falls and Cross River Falls, all along the highway on the north shore drive We took plenty of time to see all of these fine wonders along the highway.

To begin to describe a part of the beauty of the north shore drive is impossible. The country is so vast and awe-inspiring that we will leave it for the tourist to see for himself.

A few interesting things that we might tell about now occur to us. It might be well to mention that it is impossible to go through the border after 8.00 p. m. or before 8:00 a. m. The international bridge is over Pigeon river and the gorge there is one hundred and fifty feet deep. Steel gates guard the entrance at night. There is very little red tape to go through in order to enter. Each adult is allowed to bring back merchandise to the value of $100 without paying duty. Cars are thoroughly searched by the U. S. Customs officials on again entering the United States.

There are but few stopping places along the north shore drive where one can put up for the night. Between Duluth and the Canadian Twin Cities there are but two towns, Two Harbors and Grand Marais. The other towns on the maps were hardly more than filling stations and perhaps a few cabins owned by fishermen.

The cabin we occupied near Grand Marais was owned by Jack Scott Jr., a commercial fisherman. Mr. Scott told us of many interesting things about the lake and timber. The night before a couple of young men were staying at his cottage, near the one we had, and they had gone to the pump to get a pail of water. When they returned to the cabin a black bear was leaning against the door trying to get in. Of course the boys were frightened and ran to Mr. Scott's house. He assured them that the bears were harmless and would not bother them. A few nights previous a bull moose invaded Mr. Scott's garden and tramped down his cucumber patch and destroyed some cabbage. By the size of the tracks Scott said the moose would weigh about 1800 pounds There are innumerable trout streams in the vicinity and trout are plentiful. Back over the hills one can find plenty of lakes where fishing is excellent. Mr. Scott complained about the heat Thursday and when we asked him how hot it was, he said, "It was almost 76 today" We thought it was plenty cool and we were glad for the Hudson's Bay blankets in the cabin. Cabins up there are all made of logs and are very nice. The logs had all been peeled and the interior was finished in varnish We paid $2.50 for the cabin, which had three beds. The cabin had a large porch, living room with stove bedrooms and kitchen.

The commercial fishermen have a special license which allows them to fish in Lake Superior all year around, and during the past winter Mr. Scott lost but ten days work because of cold or stormy weather. He stated that the temperature never goes to the extreme, as the lake keeps it even. Although the bays and harbors freeze over, the other part of the lake remains open and the lowest temperature is around 30 degrees below zero along the lake, but back five or more miles from the lake, the temperature can drop to more than 50 degrees below zero. Mr. Scott uses gill nets for herring and other lake fish of that type. The fishing is done from three to five miles out. During certain seasons and for fishing for lake trout he uses set lines. His line is 14 miles long and he fishes in 300 feet of water one mile from shore. It takes him three

WILL PRESENT OPERA FRIDAY AUGUST 30TH IN GARNER

The opera "The Bohemian Girl" will be presented on the athletic field in Garner, Friday evening, August 30th.

Miss Josephine Johannes, of the American Institute of Dancing from Des Moines, will provide a solo dancer for the first act One of her classes in tap dancing will provide a number during the intermission.

Miss Johannes is cooperating with Miss Marjorie Chollett in directing the gypsy dances, which will be given by the 4-H Club girls.

In a recent test conducted by engineers thousands of people were asked the question, "When you are going 40 miles an hour on a dry, level road, what is the shortest distance in which you can bring your car to a full stop? Three out of four said they could stop in less than fifty feet. According to engineers this is impossible for the reason that a car traveling at this rate of speed would skid farther than 40 feet with all wheels locked. With the best of brakes the distance required is 84 feet and with passable brakes the required distance is 120 feet.

The other day we heard a woman say, "And I consider his conduct was above reproach. Of course he could have—" and then she went ahead and criticised the party's action in several particulars, but "his conduct was above reproach."

TALKIES WERE BIG SUCCESS HERE SATURDAY NIGHT

An enormous crowd was present to see Klemme's free open air "talky" show last Saturday night.

The sound pictures will be shown in Klemme free every Saturday evening for the balance of the season

TO CAN SWEET CORN

If you have a pressure cooker or can borrow one the chances are that the corn you can this year will keep much better than if canned without the cooker, foods specialists in the Home Economics Department at Iowa State College say. Oven canning does not insure the high temperature needed to kill all the bacteria in a non-acid vegetable such as corn

For canning whole grain corn use only tender sweet corn, freshly gathered, and remove all the silks. Place in boiling water and simmer for about 5 minutes. Cut corn from cob rather deeply, but do not scrape cob. Add a teaspoon of salt and 2 teaspoons of sugar to a quart of corn, and half as much water as corn by weight. Reheat to simmering and pack at once. Process 60 minutes in the pressure cooker for pint jars and 70 minutes for quarts

Former Klemme School Man Died At Ventura Last Week

Funeral Services For Levi Neese Held At Clear Lake Sunday

Levi Neese, Ventura, for superintendent of Klemme schools for a number of years, died last Wednesday night at a Mason City hospital, from a complication of diseases.

Mr Neese was born in 1872 in Webster City. In 1908 he was married to Edith Richardson of Webster City. He received his education at Ellsworth college in Iowa Falls, Drake, and Iowa State at Ames.

Funeral services were held at o'clock Sunday afternoon at Clear Lake. Interment was made in Memorial park cemetery in Mason City

Will Take Trip In Mountains

Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Dulmes and Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Waterman and daughter, Marian, expect to leave Sunday morning on a trip which will take them to Denver, Colorado and Estes National Park in the Rocky Mountains. They expect to be away from Klemme a week or ten days.

FORMER KLEMME LADY DIED IN MASSACHUSETTS

News has reached Klemme of the death of Mrs. Ruth McConn, Worchester, Mass., who died July 27th.

Mrs. McConn, the wife of Ray McConn, former residents of Klemme and Clear Lake, had been failing in health for the past eight months suffering from cancer near the left lung.

During their stay in Klemme some ten or twelve years ago, Mr. McConn was a salesman for the Wyman Partridge Co., of Minneapolis, while Mrs. McConn was in charge of the dry goods department of the Wellemeyer Co. here.

KLEMME HIGH STUDENTS WILL REGISTER AUGUST 19TH

Ninety-Six Year Old Garner Man's Funeral Held Friday

FUNERAL RITES HELD FRIDAY FOR ABSOLON KELLY, GARNER

Absolon Kelly, 96 died at his home in Garner about midnight last Tuesday from old age. Funeral rites were held Friday frm the Congregational church, Dr. William Dibble officiating, and burial was in Concord cemetery by the side of his wife.

Mr. Kelly was born in Monroe. Wis., March 7, 1839. He was, during later years, one of the few living grandsons of Revolutionary soldiers. He was married to Martha Ann Renshaw, Juluy 7, 1861. After 30 years of married life they moved to Garner. Mrs. Kelly died Jam. 31, 1918. Mr. Kelly maintained the home, assisted by his daughters until his death. He held titles to two farms in Ell township for the past 45 years. He was a stockholder in several Hancock county banks and a director of the Farmers National Bank. Mr. Kelly was a life long democrat and cast his first vote for Stephen A. Douglas. Up to three years ago he always served on the town election board. He was a member of the Masonic lodge for fifty years and attended the Congregational church constantly. He was a favorite with young men and always attended the firemen's annual picnic by invitation.

Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Kelly, Joe, who was drowned at 18, A. M. who died two years ago, Mrs. Peter Gilbert and Mrs. Joe Lawhorn both of Garner. There are nine living grandchildren 13 great grandchildren and two great great grandchildren.

SOYBEAN HARVEST IN IOWA TO BE LARGE THIS FALL

Different Methods Of Harvesting Hay and Seed Crops Explained

The large increase in Hancock County sobean acreage this year promises to make the harvesting of this crop one of the major fall farming operations, according to Co. Agent S. J. Oberhauser. Many farmers in this county are growing more soybeans than ever before and some are growing them for the first time.

This situation is more or less general all over the state and around five times as many soybeans will be harvested in Iowa this fall than was the case 2 years ago.

Much of the current crop will be harvested for seed but due to the fact that soybean hay is practically equal in feeding value to alfalfa large acreages will be put up for hay.

There is a considerable period during which the crop may be harvested and wide differences in results has been obtained from the crop when cut at different stages. This may run from soon after full bloom until the pods are full and the leaves yellowing.

Considering yield, total digestible nutrients and palability, however, the recommended stage for cutting for hay is when the pods are from one-half to three-fourths full and lower leaves turning yellow.

Soybeans may be harvested for seed by cutting and shocking as soon as the pods have matured and before the leaves have entirely fallen, or the crop may be allowed to stand until late fall after the seeds have thoroughly cured and dried in the pods In the latter case it may be combined or threshed immedd ately after cutting without shocking.

In any instance the best quality seed can be obtained if the beans are allowed to become thoroughly ripe on the standing stalks before harvest.

KLEMME CELEBRATION DATE PUSHED AHEAD FEW DAYS

The Committee in charge of the Klemme celebration for the latter part of August have changed the date to Wednesday, August 28th. The change was made in order not to conflict with other nearby celebrations.

The various committees are at work on their particular jobs to make Klemme day a big success. The day comes at a time when harvest is well over and school has not started. Plan now to be in Klemme August 28th.

CORN SUPPLY STRETCHED BY FEEDING HOGS GRAIN

Farmers in some sections of the state are planning to "stretch" their corn being fed to hogs by feeding small grains until the new crop is harvested, says C. W. McDonald, Iowa State College extension animal husbandman.

McDonald in view of this fact, outlines the feeding value of small grains as substitutes for a part of the corn:

Oats have proved good feed for growing pigs and brood sows, but oats alone are too bulky for fattening hogs. Hogs will make good gains, however, if fed from one-third to one half of their fattening ration in oats and the rest in corn. But the greater the proportion of oats in the ration the slower the hogs will gain.

Guard Against Scabby Barley

A bushelof standard weight oats is usually worth a little more than a third as much as a bushel of corn in the hog fattening ration. Feeding the oats in flat bottomed self feeders or troughs or scattering them on a feeding floor will prevent the hogs gobbling down the oats with out chewing the kernels.

A bushel of good plump barley is worth about three-fourths as much as a bushel of corn for fattening hogs. Farmers who plan to feed barley to their hogs should look out for scab in the barley this year. No effort should be made to force hogs to eat scabby barley because it makes them sick.

Wheat Usually Too High

Normally the price of wheat is such that farmers cannot afford to feed wheat to hogs. A bushel of wheat is worth a little more than a bushel of corn for fattening hogs.

Oats, barley and wheat contain more protein than corn and where those grains replace part of the corn the hogs do not need as much tankage or other protein feed. But hogs ought to have access to the protein feed in a self-feeder so they will eat the amount of protein they need.

DOUBLE-TROUBLE

By ELSA S. GRANT

GEORGIE BLAKE stood before his dresser mirror adjusting a lemon colored tie adorned with red spots that matched his red hair.

Georgie was in a deep reverie brought on by the summer weather, the Young People's lawn party, and Miss Mabel Porter.

Georgie was preparing early to escort Mabel to the lawn party that afternoon, when a penetrating call from below stairs punctured his reverie.

"Georgie!"

"Yeh, Ma?" He patted his tie, not yet fully conscious of his surroundings.

"Your Aunt Cora just phoned and I told her you'd take care of the twins this afternoon. You'd better go right over and get them."

The beatific expression on Georgie's face disappeared instantly and was replaced by one of intense horror.

He dashed out to the stair head.

"But, hey, Ma, what about the lawn party?" he called anxiously. "Gee-whiz I can't miss that! Good night!"

"You can take the twins with you," his mother answered from the kitchen.

"What!"

Georgie raced down the stairs.

"Hey, Ma, I can't take those kids to the lawn party. Gee-whiz, wouldn't I look swell draggin' those brats around!"

"Bertie and Bertha are not brats, Georgie Blake," his mother said sharply. "They're your first cousins and you should be more respectful."

"Yes'm," Georgie agreed meekly.

He mooched into the front hall and picked up the telephone.

The lawn party was out.

Why, if he appeared at that fiesta with Bertie and Bertha there would be an instant riot, with the guests leaving immediately by the most accessible exits.

People did not remain in the presence of those five-year-old terrors any longer than was necessary.

Georgie dialed a number while he stood knee deep in the ashes of his ruined day.

"Hello?" The musical voice belonged to Miss Mabel Porter.

"Hello, Mabel," Georgie said, brightening with a sudden idea. "I just called you up to ask if you wouldn't like to go on a picnic this afternoon."

"Picnic?" Mabel sounded puzzled. "What for?"

"Well, I don't think this old lawn party will amount to much," Georgie said. "Besides," he went on casually, "I have to take care of the twins and I was thinkin'—"

"Not those terrible twins, Georgie?"

"Uh-huh," Georgie moaned. He could feel the air on the wire grow chilly.

"Well, really, Georgie," Mabel said at last, "I ought to go to the lawn party after planning and everything. Ferdy Hoyt wants me to go with him, so I guess I'd better."

"All right," Georgie said, "but I hope he gets ptomaine poison!"

Georgie put down the telephone.

Ferdy Hoyt was the last bitter drop in Georgie's brimming chalice.

Ferdy was the son of Elston's leading banker and citizen, and since his return from school for the summer months had been cutting in on Georgie's time with Mabel.

Is it any wonder that Georgie was blind to the sunshine and the birds as he set out to collect his charges?

Bertie and Bertha behaved properly until three o'clock in the afternoon and then they escaped into thin air.

Georgie set out in search of them with a dire warning from his mother ringing in his ears to the effect that if the twins caused any damage he'd have to pay for it out of his own pocket.

Twenty minutes later he found Bertie and Bertha in Judge Blint's front yard.

They were seated in the judge's hotbeds yanking tulip blooms up by the roots.

Georgie clung to the fence for support at the sight of this destruction of horticultural prizes.

There was a familiar sign on the fence: "Beware of the Dog"

It referred to Judge Blint's Ripper, a bulldog with generous teeth and a short temper.

"You come out of there!" Georgie ordered.

"Won't!" the twins chimed. Tulips curved in the air like colored comets. Georgie moaned aloud.

"Old Ripper'll get you," he warned.

"Ain't no dog! Ain't no dog'" the twins chanted singsong.

And to every appearance they were right.

Georgie looked carefully around and put a cautious leg over the fence. In another moment he swooped down on the twins.

Immediately there began a dizzy race and a tremendous uproar.

Georgie shouted, the twins shrieked, and suddenly into the midst of the turmoil came the thunderous roars of Ripper.

There was a scramble for the fence in which Georgie was hopelessly outdistanced by the twins, and as they stood peering through the palings shouting encouragement Ripper closed his jaws on the stern of Georgie's flannels. There was a ripping sound as he climbed over and a disappointed bulldog dropped back into the yard.

It is a matter of historical detail to report that there was an expanse of Georgie's new silk underwear showing and it was a brilliant orange.

Perceiving the look in Cousin Georgie's eye as he climbed the fence Bertie and Bertha left the vicinity in a hurry.

Georgie set off in pursuit.

An old man waving a cane shouted, "Bravo! Bravo!" after him, but he didn't stop.

The chase was short and just as Georgie was about to grasp Bertie and Bertha by their collars they turned into the high hedged ground of the First Baptist church and charged full tilt into the midst of the Young People's lawn party.

Unerring instinct led them to Ferdy Hoyt and Mabel Porter.

In full cry Georgie burst into the middle of the curious guests before he realized his whereabouts.

He became conscious of Mabel's hotly accusing eyes.

"Teasing little children," she cried. "Shame on you, Georgie!"

"I—" Georgie gulped, trying not to noticeably sit on his hands.

The twins, quick to perceive the turn of events, began to run a mad circle around the group, shrieking, "Judge Blint's dog bit Georgie's pants! Judge Blint's dog bit Georgie's pants!"

Where there had been titters before there was now open laughter.

A rasping voice penetrated the laughter.

"What's this? What's this?" The elderly man, who had shouted "Bravo!" at him came elbowing his way through the crowd. He was Seymour Hoyt, Ferdy's grandfather. He peered at Georgie with nearsighted eyes.

"Upon my word," he cried, "you're the young man I saw rescue these two children from Judge Blint's vicious dog."

"Well," Georgie began, "I didn't exactly—"

"Now, now, young man," Old Seymour Hoyt exclaimed, "there's no call for modesty over a brave deed well done."

He glared at the group.

"I doubt," he snapped, "if there's one of you would have risked life and limb as this young man did this afternoon. Such bravery is—is—"

"Hey, Mr. Hoyt," Georgie began uneasily, "I—"

"You shut up," Old Seymour ordered testily.

He took Georgie by the arm.

"We'll go up to the house," he said, meanwhile glaring at the abashed lawn party. "If you people will excuse us," he said, "we gentlemen will leave you."

As they started away Old Seymour handed his large tweed cap to Georgia. "For mercy's sake, young man," he hissed, "cover up that underwear. It's the only thing I have against you!"

Cattle Driving Declines, but Sheep Still Use Legs

The western trail herd still exists, but today it is composed of sheep and not cattle, with numbers driven regularly exceeding the count of the most famous old trails, observes a Phoenix, Ariz., United Press writer.

It's a faux pas, of course, to mention sheep and cattle in one breath (to a cattleman), but the former still are featured in big drives—in fact the business of sheep driving has grown, while cattle are moved by rail. It's largely a matter of very simple business.

Cattle lose weight when driven cross-country. Cows are valuable not by the hoof but by the beefsteak, with thick steaks bringing more money. The money crop of sheep is their wool, which can't be walked away.

So today some 300,000 complaining "woolies" are taking the long trek from southern pastures in and about the Salt river valley to northern Arizona, where they will wait out the summer at high altitudes, whose ranges are not withered by the desert sun.

The business of trail driving has become a big industry. The government sets aside regular strips for sheep to follow as they go north and as they return south. Some make a round trip of 400 miles.

Trails followed are as old as the industry. They are picked originally because of advantages of feed and water, and once set by custom receive governmental sanction. Homesteading or script purchase of land in the sheep "strips" is forbidden.

Following the drives demands alertness and sacrifice on the part of herders. Mountain lions are not a myth but are plentiful in parts of the sheep range. Wild dog packs are a menace in the Salt river valley and may kill scores in a night's orgy. Coyotes are present everywhere, vigilant to take stragglers.

City and Country Advantages

Great cities have the advantage of concentrated wealth and man power. They also have the disadvantage of too many inducements to lead an "easy life." Smaller communities have, as a rule, a wholesomer atmosphere. They are not kept on edge by the cut-throat competition that prevails in the more highly competitive life of big cities. A more neighborly, friendly spirit pervades them. They live more naturally.

Longest Tunnel in N. America

Divergence Between Man and Ape

Most scientists accept the belief that man and the ape are descended from a common ancestor. According to Doctor Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian institution, the divergence between the two branches probably occurred as long as 25,000,000 years ago.

SOME HINTS ON SUMMER BAKING

Demand Is on Increase for Oven-Cooked Dishes.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE general belief is that women do less cooking in summer than in winter. The many letters, however, which I have received during the last few weeks asking for recipes, many of which are oven-baked and some of them needing a long baking, seem to contradict this. Perhaps the fact that modern stoves do not heat up the kitchen the way the old wood or coal range did in an earlier day explains some of this interest.

Among the requests is one for Danish pastry and another one for cinnamon buns which can be made from the same mixture. Danish pastry is a rich yeast dough. Part of the shortening is mixed into the dough and the rest is rolled into it after it has risen the first time.

Manhattan Clam Chowder

2 dozen clams
½ cup boiling water
2 quarts cold water
4 cups diced potatoes
3 onions, sliced
⅓ cup minced celery
2 cups tomato pulp
4 slices salt pork
Pepper
3 broken soda crackers

Scrub clams and steam in boiling water until the shells open. Drain, reserve liquor, remove clams from shell and chop hard parts. Add vegetables, salt and pepper to cold water and cook 15 minutes. Panfry the pork and add with the clams and clam liquor to the vegetables and cook over a low fire one hour.

Chocolate Roll

5 egg yolks
1 cup powdered sugar
3 tablespoons cocoa
5 egg whites

Beat egg yolks until thick, add sugar and beat well. Add cocoa and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Spread in buttered, floured dripping pan and bake about ten minutes in moderate oven, 350 degrees F. Turn out on floured cloth, trim off crusts with damp cloth. When cool spread with whipped cream and roll. Serve with chocolate sauce.

Old Fashioned Jelly Roll

¾ cup sifted cake flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup jelly, currant, grape or any flavor

Sift flour, and measure, combine baking powder and salt with eggs in a bowl. Place over a small bowl of hot water and beat with a rotary egg beater, add sugar slowly until mixture becomes thick and lemon colored. Remove bowl from hot water, fold in flour and vanilla. Turn into a pan 15 by 10 inches, lined with a greased paper and bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees 12 to 13 minutes. Quickly cut off the crisp edges of the cake. Turn from pan at once onto a cloth covered with confectioners' sugar. Remove paper, spread with jelly and roll. Wrap in cloth and cool on rack.

Danish Pastry

2 cakes compressed yeast
1 cup milk, scalded and cooked to lukewarm
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
4 egg yolks
4 cups flour
½ cup melted shortening
½ cup hard butter

Crumble yeast into a bowl, add milk and stir to dissolve yeast. Add sugar, salt, beaten egg yolks and flour. Mix, add melted butter and mix well. Turn out on floured board, knead quickly into a smooth dough and put in a greased bowl. Cover with a towel and let rise over hot water until double in bulk. Roll the dough one-quarter inch thick. Cut the hard butter into small bits. Put half the pieces in the center of a strip of dough. Fold one end of dough to cover the butter, place the remaining butter on top and fold over the other end of dough. Press together and roll as thin as possible, lifting it frequently to keep it from sticking. Fold each end to the center, pat, fold to make four layers. Roll and fold again. Roll one-fourth inch thick and spread with the following mixture:

2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup chopped nuts

Blend well the egg yolks with the sugar and add the nuts. Spread on pastry, fold, press with a rolling pin, cover and let rise 20 minutes. Shape in crescent or coils and let rise one-half hour. Bake five minutes in a very hot oven, 500 degrees, reduce heat to moderate, 350 degrees, and bake 15 to 20 minutes, according to size. Brush with confectioners sugar mixed to a paste with cream or water and sprinkle with nuts if desired.

Wellesley Loaf Cake

¼ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
⅝ cup milk
1½ cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 squares unsweetened chocolate
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cream the butter with the sugar, add the well beaten yolks and flour, mixed and sifted with the baking powder. Add egg whites beaten until stiff, then melted chocolate and vanilla. Turn into buttered cake pans and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees 25 minutes. Frost with boiled icing.

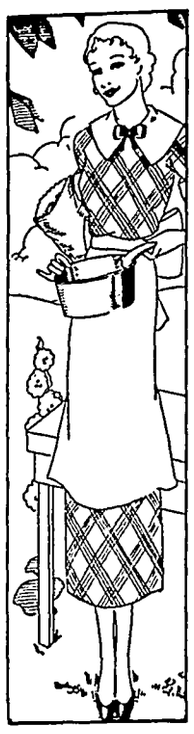
The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

KEEPING cool in these hot days is not an easy thing to accomplish either by adults who have work to do, or by children engrossed in their play, which is active a good part of the time. There are certain things that aid in fulfilling the need, and at the same time are so simple that they can be done by anyone. And there are other ways which can be followed when one's tasks are adaptable, or after they have been finished. For instance, keeping in the shade out of doors where the air is circulating is not feasible all the time, but it is a pleasant method when work is through, or when tasks can be done under such circumstances. Shelling peas, stringing beans, and preparing some foods can be done under these comfortable conditions. Sitting in a room where light is well shaded, and the atmosphere is as cool as possible permits sewing to be done in the best environment available. Occasional cooling baths are wonderfully refreshing also and may be sufficiently invigorating to speed work up afterwards.



Apart from these ways, there are little things which lower the effects of the hot temperature. Dousing the face in cold water is reviving, and as it takes but a few moments, it interferes not at all, or but slightly, with work that must be done. Most persons find wetting the wrists with cold water or the back of the neck and under the ears lessens the heat appreciably. Which method is most effective depends upon the person. Some persons find nothing quite so reviving as cold water under and around the ears while others prefer it on the wrists or neck.

Inactivity Not Enough

Inactivity keeps the blood from circulating vigorously and is a great aid to keeping cool. If, during this period, however, the person keeps the mind working all the time with the thought of how hot he or she is, the inactivity does not prove the help desired. One should let the mind dwell on pleasant things, not disturbing ones, since pleasant thoughts keep the mind placid, while the other ferments it.

There is no use combating the fact that the mental attitude influences the hot or cool physical feeling. Persons are said to be in a heated argument, or a white heat of rage, or cool as a cucumber, etc., and the terms are not figurative but literal. So keep a good rein on the thoughts and see that they follow your guidance into refreshing lines of reflection, if you would keep cool.

Children on the Beach

In summer the desire of little folk to dabble in the water can be permitted to the good of their health when they are at the seashore. It is seldom that they will venture too far into the ocean, for the rim of the sea satisfies very little children. However, some older person has to be on guard lest the youngsters stumble and fall.

So while dabbling in the brink of the water on seashore, lake, or river, is recommended both for health and pleasure of children, let it be under protection. The youngsters should not be made to feel fear, as this robs the sport of its joy, but they should have enough supervision on the beach to insure safety.

It is when children get beyond the age of such watchfulness on the part of adults, when they have reached an age of self-reliance that makes them feel perfectly competent to look after themselves, whether they are sufficiently able or not, that they must be impressed with the necessity of carefulness when they go swimming.

The pleasure of swimming is increased by companionship. So also is the safety of it. So encourage the children to go bathing in groups. This can be done without any idea being conveyed that safety as well as enjoyment is considered.

New Mahogany Finish

Back in the mauve decade, when everything had to match, the practice developed of staining all types of mahogany so dark that the color of mahogany was made uniform. George N. Lamb, in "The Mahogany Book," speaks of the many types and shadings of mahogany that are now being introduced. Nowadays, mahogany is being given natural or only lightly stained finishes. These not only reveal the real beauty of the wood but are most practical from the standpoint of upkeep. They also permit the natural aging of the wood which enhances its inherent beauty. Much of the furniture today is finished with lacquer, a finish that will stand much abuse.

Preparation of Wood

Close-grained woods, such as cherry, birch, white wood or maple, require an undercoat, or primer, to fill the pores of the wood before applying the final finish. This prevents the final coats from sinking in and disappearing in spots.

No Damaged Trees Should Be Saved

Drouth Victims Make Better Lumber or Fire Wood; Stock Injurious.

By L. E. Sawyer, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Few of the many trees damaged by last summer's drouth can be saved. The best procedure in most cases is to cut the trees for fire wood or lumber.

Where only a part of the top is dead, careful management may tide over the tree until new top growth and foliage are sufficient to support life and growth. The ground under the tree should be spaded up to make a good soil mulch and this supplemented by three or four inches of barnyard manure. All of the dead wood should be cut out of the top.

Where dead trees are removed this summer, plans should be made for replacements next spring. The trees should be planted after the frost goes out of the ground and before the growing season gets under way in 1936.

Damage done by the drouth drove home the fact that live stock should be kept out of the wood lot. Live stock damage to trees is not apparent in wet years, but the accumulated damage of many seasons shows up in dry years like 1934. In fact, the worst damage last year was invariably in wood lots used as live stock pasture. Live stock keeps the secondary growth eaten and tramped down, letting winds get a better sweep close to the ground. This causes the ground to dry out rapidly. In addition, the ground is packed hard by the constant trampling, and organic matter and natural mulch are destroyed. The result is that the rainfall runs off the ground rather than soaking in. Evaporation is speeded up by a lack of mulch.

Clover Is Cut for Seed When Heads Are Matured

Clover for seed is cut when the greatest number of mature seed heads are available. If cutting is too early, seed is immature. If cutting is delayed, the heads shatter badly. Clover cut for seed may be cured in the windrow or in the cock, or it may be stacked and allowed to go through a "sweat." By the latter method the quality of clover "straw" remaining after threshing is not as good as when the clover is threshed from the windrow.

Producers of red clover seed generally believe that damp, rainy weather is detrimental to the setting of seed. But experiments indicate moisture does not limit the setting of seed, if pollen is transferred from plant to plant. Excessive moisture does, however, limit the activities of insects. After heavy rains in hot weather, some of the pollen disintegrates and with lessened insect activity many flowers are not properly fertilized.

Wood Ashes as Fertilizer

Wood ashes vary in composition. There is considerable difference due to kind of wood from which they come and they may vary, too, due to conditions under which they have been collected and kept. There are several constituents of wood ashes that are of importance in agriculture. The most valuable are potash, phosphoric acid and lime. Potash may vary from 2 or 3 per cent to as high as 13 or 14 per cent; phosphoric acid is not usually much in evidence but may go as high or higher than 2 per cent, while lime may vary from 30 to 50 per cent. Good unleached soft wood ashes are likely to be of considerable value as a fertilizer for roots and vegetables other than potatoes.—Montreal Herald.

Red Clover Roots

The roots of red clover extend to a depth of 4 to 6 feet, but much the largest portion is in the upper foot of soil. The proportion of root to top has been variously estimated. The Minnesota and Delaware agricultural experiment stations found nearly half as many pounds of root as of top; the Wisconsin station one-quarter as much; the Central experimental farm at Ottawa more than two-thirds as much; while in one-year-old clover in Michigan the weight of roots nearly equaled that of tops. The percentage of the total fertilizer ingredients in the crop that is found in stubble and roots is larger in red clover than in any other legume except alfalfa, though figures on sweet clover are not available.

Apples Exported

The United States produces from 100,000,000 to 250,000,000 bushels of apples and, under normal conditions exports from 17 per cent to 20 per cent of the strictly commercial crop. From 1927 to 1932 inclusive, based on quantity or volume exported, apples ranked third among all unmanufactured agricultural products, and based on value they ranked sixteenth on the list of all exported commodities for 1931 and 1932. Thus it is seen that apples are of major importance as an export commodity.

Apple Blotch

Apple blotch, the well-named star-fungus of our orchards, is separate and distinct from black scab on the fruit. The name "star-fungus" is a good one, says a writer in the Rural New-Yorker, as it characterizes by shape the spot on apples and marks it as different from scabs pot. Moreover, blotch is a disease of twigs and side branches as well as of leaves and fruit. It has been estimated that blotch causes on the average a loss of about 5 per cent of the apple crop.

Share-the-Wealth Measure Is Passed by the House

VIOLENTLY attacked from all sides and nowhere defended with enthusiasm, the President's new share-the-wealth tax bill nevertheless was put through the house because of the great administration majority and also because the congressmen are tired out and eager to go home. Representative Treadway, Republican, of Massachusetts, made a last effort against the measure with a resolution to send it back to committee, but this was easily defeated.

Sen. Barbour

As passed by the house, the bill is not quite what the President asked for. Briefly summarized, it increases taxes on individual incomes over $50,000, substitutes a graduated corporation-income tax for the present flat levy, puts new taxes on inheritances and gifts in addition to those already borne by estates and gifts, imposes new taxes of 5 to 20 per cent on "excess" profits of corporations.

It is designed to raise revenue estimated at between $250,000,000 and $270,000,000. Its warmest friends couldn't explain how this would do much in the way of bringing about what the President calls "wider distribution of wealth," or in the way of balancing the budget.

The measure was handed on to the senate with dubious prospects. It was expected the senate finance committee would study it for about a week, and in the meanwhile the conservative Republicans and not a few Democrats were preparing to fight it. Senator W. W. Barbour of New Jersey, Republican, fired an opening gun with a statement in which he said: "Votes, and votes alone, are the objective of this half-baked measure."

Declaring the bill "has no relation to making income meet outgo, but is intended to accomplish some weird social objective," Barbour continued:

"What this bill actually attempts is to climb upon that hard-ridden steed, "Share-the-Wealth," and ride him away while the demagogues who have pressed him sorely in the past are looking in the other direction.

"The bill should be laid away until the next session of congress when the budget for the ensuing year will be presented. Then, in the light of carefully appropriated federal moneys, we can determine how much revenue will be needed to operate.

"Taxes can be levied deliberately as a true revenue measure. Any other program is not good business and is not good government."

One change made by the house against the President's wishes involved corporations' gifts to charities. Mr. Roosevelt was firmly against letting corporations deduct from their taxable income any gifts to charity. Just as firmly the house voted to let them deduct up to 5 per cent of their incomes.

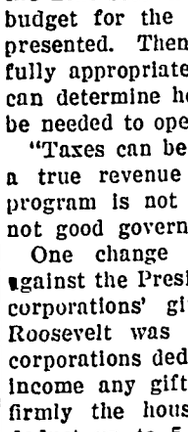
O'Mahoney Has a Scheme to Revive Objectives of NRA

NOT to be dismayed by the death of NRA, Senator J. C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming thinks the objectives of that contraption, high labor standards and fair competition, can be realized, and for that purpose he has drawn up a measure for the regulation of all national commerce by licensing business.

The senator, who is a lawyer, carefully avoided the phrase "interstate commerce." He proposed to define "commerce among the states" in the language of the leading decisions of the Supreme court.

Japanese Emperor "Insulted" By an American Caricature

JAPANESE consider their emperor a sacred personage, and consequently there was deep resentment in the island empire when Vanity Fair, an American magazine, printed a caricature of Hirohito. That issue of the magazine was banned in Japan because the picture was "considered insulting to the Japanese imperial house and if circulated in Japan might disturb public peace." More than that, Ambassador Hirosi Saito interrupted his vacation in New England and hurried to Washington to prepare a report on the affair and receive instructions from Tokyo. There was uncertainty as to whether he would make a formal protest or merely take up the matter directly with the magazine's editors.



Ambassador Saito

One State department spokesman said Japanese officials realized that the American government had no control over the press, but cable dispatches said Japanese newspapers criticized their embassy here for alleged failure to see that "such indignities" were not published.

The dispatches also reported that the Japanese home and foreign office officials characterized the caricature as "terrible." It showed the emperor pulling an old-fashioned jinriksha in which reposed the Nobel peace prize.

Frank Crowninshield, editor of Vanity Fair, said this caricature, like the many others run in the magazine, was meant to be merely jocose.

Huge Sum Is Allotted for American Business Census

NEARLY $8,000,000—$7,784,000, to be exact—has been allotted from the work relief funds by President Roosevelt for a census of American business. The census bureau asked and received this after it had been allotted $293,000 for a survey of retail trade. The business work is to begin at once, and the canvass will start on January 2. According to the official announcement, it will cover "all business activities with the exception of agriculture and manufacturing industries, and will furnish information of importance to the federal government, to business and to labor." The headquarters will be in Philadelphia.

The aim of the census, the officials said, "is to secure basic information relating to the number of operating units, employment, pay rolls, receipts and other business data for all business enterprises."

Necessarily, the census will give temporary employment to a large number of canvassers.

Rexford G. Tugwell, head of the resettlement administration, asked for a second allotment to develop unproductive land withdrawn from cultivation. He wanted $10,381,310 for eight tracts in seven states, and estimated that their development as hunting, fishing and camping preserves would provide 0,731 jobs lasting from 15 to 23 days. These projects are in Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Mississippi, New York, Georgia and Connecticut.

League Delays Settlement of Italo-Ethiopian Quarrel

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN, British minister for League of Nations affairs, was exceedingly busy in Geneva trying to find a way to avert war between Italy and Ethiopia. He was aided and abetted by Premier Laval of France and together they evolved a plan for procedure by the league council which appeared promising, until it was communicated to Premier Mussolini. Then Baron Aloisi, Italian delegate, announced the Eden-Laval formula was "entirely unacceptable." However, hope was not abandoned for there was a chance that modifications could be made that would satisfy the demands of the Italians.

Anthony Eden

The league council finally, in a brief public session, set aside Ethiopia's demand for immediate action and agreed to undertake a general examination of the whole matter a month hence. It provided for resumption of arbitration of the clash at Ualual, stipulating that the arbitrators should not attempt to pass on the ownership of the territory on which the clash occurred—which is the root of the matter.

The arbitrators must finish their work or abandon it before September 1. The two disputants are to report the result to the council by September 4.

Emperor Haile Selassie met his chieftains in council at Addis Ababa and they told him it might be now too late to prevent war for their tens of thousands of fighters were eager for hostilities to begin and could hardly be restrained. The emperor, however, sought to hold the chiefs back.

British Parliament Gives India a New Government

GREATER freedom for the 350,000,000 inhabitants of India under a new form of government is provided by the India bill finally enacted by the British parliament and approved by the king. The measure was the bulkiest ever passed by parliament, and its preparation took eight years.

The law sets up an all-India federated parliament, linked with eleven British Indian states with their own subordinate legislatures and such native states as decide to come in. It separates Burma and Assam from India and gives them also a large measure of self-government.

Pensions of Spanish War Veterans Are Now Restored

PASSAGE of the bill to restore $46,000,000 of Spanish war veterans' pensions was completed when the senate accepted the house measure, the only opposing vote being cast by Senator Hastings of Delaware. This nullifies the various adjustments made by the President for the purpose of economy to carry out the party pledge of a reduction of at least 25 per cent in the cost of administration of the federal government.

Germany Asks Punishment of Attackers on the Bremen

GERMANY'S diplomatic note concerning the Communist attack on the liner Bremen in the port of New York took the form of a request that the offenders be punished but asked for no apology. Acting Secretary of State William Phillips, in his reply handed to the German charge d'Affaires, Dr. Rudolf Leitner, told briefly the efforts of the New York police to guard the vessel and to subdue the mob, and pointed out that some of those who took part in the attack were arrested. The German note said the incident constituted an insult to Germany.

In his press conference President Roosevelt declined to comment on the affair. Asked about the protest of Jewish organizations against the German government's religious attitude, the President intimated that the administration's view was fully expressed by Mr. Phillips' reply in which he expressed sympathy for anyone who was denied religious liberty.

Goebbels Insists on War on All "Enemies" of Nazidom

NOTWITHSTANDING warnings by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht and other sane Germans, some of the Nazi leaders insist on pushing to further extremes the war on Jews and Catholics. For instance, Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, in a speech at Essen announced drastic action against all "enemies" of the Nazi state—Jews, Catholics, the foreign press and the Stalheim war veterans. He predicted these important developments:

Paul Goebbels

1. Suppression of the Catholic press and intensification of the Nazi campaign against all Catholic opponents of the third reich.

2. Nationwide dissolution of the Stahlheim.

3. An official ban in near future on marriages between Jews and Aryans.

Goebbels linked closely the foreign press and the Jews.

"We have suffered the arrogance of the Jews with the patience of a sheep during the last two years," he said. "That the foreign press take up the defense of the Jews proves merely Judah's internationalism."

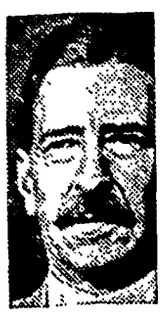
Death of Frederick Gillette, Former Speaker of the House

FREDERICK H. GILLETT, who represented Massachusetts in the house for many years, for six years was speaker, and thereafter served as United States senator, died in Springfield, Mass., at the age of eighty-three. Able, dignified and unfailingly courteous, Mr. Gillett was highly esteemed by his fellow congressmen, whatever their party affiliation. In his home town he was known as a politician who said little and did much.

Frank H. Hitchcock, publisher of the Daily Citizen of Tucson, Ariz., succumbed to pneumonia after several months of ill health. Prominent in Republican party politics all his mature life, Mr. Hitchcock managed Taft's Presidential campaign in 1908 both before and after the convention and was postmaster general in the Taft cabinet. For years he was actively interested in the progress of aviation.

Secretary Swanson Tells Plans for New Naval Bases

JAPAN will probably have another cause for complaint against the United States. Secretary of the Navy Swanson has announced that strongly fortified naval bases will be established in the Pacific ocean upon the expiration of the naval limitation treaties on January 1, 1937. He said he considered the creation of naval stepping stones in the Pacific an inevitable result of the treaties' expiration. He revealed that the navy long has given consideration to Pacific fortification problems and that impetus had been given to the study since Japan's abrogation of the naval treaties.



Sec'y Swanson

The necessity for adequate bases in the Pacific was demonstrated forcibly last May during the annual fleet maneuvers off Hawaii and the Aleutian islands. According to reports, the navy high command in a report of the lessons learned in the exercises strongly recommended an Aleutian islands base.

The United States naval bases are few and far between as against those of Japan and Great Britain, which lie along the principal courses of English and Japanese traffic lines.

Law Is Enacted That Insures Promotion for Many Officers

CONGRESS has passed and the President has signed a bill which assures promotion in the near future for about 5,000 army officers. It accelerates the advancement of commissioned officers below the grade of colonel and takes effect September 1.

The act increases the number of colonels by 158, the number of lieutenant colonels by 364, and the number of majors by 890. More than 1,000 second lieutenants will be advanced immediately to the rank of first lieutenant and 1,769 first lieutenants will become captains. In all, 4,918 officers will receive immediate promotion.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

National Topics Interpreted

BY WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington.—One of the oldest and perhaps the most constant of all complaints about the federal government at Washington has been the tendency toward bureaucratic control. Bureaucratic control, simmered down, is red tape; it is attempted management of even personal affairs by a governmental agency and it is naturally and obviously repulsive to the average American. It was a condition thoroughly to be criticized in Mr. Hoover's administration when there were boards, bureaus, and commissions everywhere. It is even worse now, I believe, with all of the New Deal's alphabetic soup agencies scattered hither and yon in execution of various New Deal experiments and theories.

Too Much Red Tape

All of this constitutes a prelude to what appears to me to be a most flagrant attempt by bureaucrats to manage private affairs. I refer to an order issued the other day by the federal communications commission under which it has asserted a jurisdiction which I cannot believe congress ever intended it should have. Further, the asserted jurisdiction which the commission is seeking to exercise goes far beyond anything which might be made the basis of complaint solely because it is bureaucratic. It has reached into the field of commercial enterprise in a manner which, without a doubt, will have the effect of covering invention and experiment in industry with a destructive frost bite—if the commission is allowed to get away with it.

The facts involved are these: The American Telephone and Telegraph company, which is spending millions of dollars annually in scientific research to improve our system of communications such as the telephone, the telegraph, and the radio, lately has perfected what is technically known as the coaxial cable. This cable is revolutionary. It holds the possibility of transmission of 240 telephonic conversations simultaneously over a single pair of wires. It is not commercially complete in all of its phases. Like every organization of sound judgment, the A. T. & T. wants to iron out weaknesses and imperfections through a period of experimental operation.

Here is where the federal communications commission enters the picture. As a courtesy, purely, the A. T. & T. submitted its plan for experimentation to the communications agency, saying as it did so that the commission did not have jurisdiction but that in the development of such a revolutionary invention the corporation was advising the commission of its plans and suggested that if the commission thought it had jurisdiction it could issue an experimental license covering the work. In all of this it is to be remembered that the communications commission has jurisdiction over rates, regulations, and practices of the wire, telephone and radio companies.

FCC Enters Picture

It seems that some bright young men in the communications commission immediately conceived the idea of having that group take jurisdiction when legal authorities tell me there is nothing in the law giving them that authority. The story I get around the commission lobbies is that the A. T. & T. would not have objected to having the commission exercise what it believed its right to be in granting a license for the experiment but when the order emerged from the secret chamber of the commission, it carried in it a provision which said that the commission could withdraw its approval and nullify the permission granted on 10 days' notice as it saw fit.

Suffice to say that this provision together with several other technical phases of the circumstances was enough to arouse the ire of the business men concerned. They are not only disgusted. They are downright sore. It is one of those things that politicians, undertrained in science, attempt to do that cause practical people to lose faith in their government.

If it were simply a fight between the A. T. & T. and the commission that is involved, the situation would hold no interest at all for me as a Washington writer. But, as I said above, it goes much further. I am told that some officials of the A. T. & T. are so dissatisfied with the attitude of the commission in this instance that they are ready, even anxious, to withdraw their application and decline to proceed with this experiment which ultimately is going to mean enormous changes in telephonic and telegraphic contact between cities located great distances apart. The A. T. & T. engineers have been working on this problem some six or seven years. They proposed to build 100 miles of cable by connecting New York and Philadelphia. It had very little of the commercial in it. They wanted to try out transmission of television images for rebroadcast by radio. They wanted to perfect further the transmission of photographs by wire and they were desirous as well of determining whether they had discovered all of the potentialities of the new invention. All of the expenses—some six hundred thousand dollars—was to be paid from surplus funds of the corporation.

Fight of Vital Interest

It takes no stretch of the imagination to realize that if the A. T. & T. backed away from the program it has laid out and refused to spend more money in perfecting its invention and declined to attempt to put it into commercial use for the benefit of the country as a whole, the country, that is you and I, would suffer. We would be denied advantages developed by science and made available virtually as a national benefit.

I do not know what the end will be. It is not at a stage wherein a forecast is possible. But the principle of the commission's action, whether it be put forward under Democratic or Republican administration, remains exactly the same. It should not be tolerated and if the communications commission persists in its efforts to expand its control, its usefulness certainly is at an end. Hitherto, the communications commission has had a very satisfactory relationship with business. I have heard dozens of executives from communications corporations say they were willing to forgive and generally overlook ignorance piled up in the commission by political appointments in several spots. They wanted to cooperate but it is the opinion of more than just myself among Washington observers that this sort of thing does not contribute to good government.

Duck hunters will have only 30 days for shooting this fall in accordance with the most rigid regulations in the history of American game hunting. This is the result of a determination by the federal government under an act of congress to give migratory wild fowl an opportunity to increase in numbers. In explaining the government's action which was made the subject of a proclamation by President Roosevelt, J. N. (Ding) Darling, chief of the biological survey and an internationally known cartoonist, declared that unless the shooting of ducks and other wild fowl is restricted it is only a question of time until none of them remain.

Now, as to Duck Hunting

It is assumed that hunters will be interested first in the period during which they may shoot ducks, geese, brant, or jacksnipe. The season will open in northern states October 21 and will close November 19. In the southern states the season will run from November 20 to December 19.

For the information of hunters there is set out below the states included in the northern area where hunting may be done between October 21 and November 19:

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Idaho, Utah, Washington, Oregon, and Nevada.

The southern states listed and in which hunting may occur from November to December 19 follows:

New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California.

Regulations issued by the biological survey, according to Mr. Darling, are based on the necessity of having a net annual increase of migratory birds left over at the end of each shooting season until the present depleted population of waterfowl is restored to something like normal. This year's rigid restrictions, he explained, follow a period of approximately thirty-five years during which the kill of wild fowl has exceeded the increase from breeding.

To give an idea of how thoroughly the wild fowl are to be protected, the new regulations prohibit shooting over what is known as baited water or land—that is, land or water on which feed has been scattered as an inducement for the birds to stop their flight. Another thing ruled out in this effort to protect the water fowl is the live decoy. This has always been the most effective method for luring wild fowl from the air. None will be allowed hereafter.

The regulations restrict shooting to the hours between 7 a. m. and 4 p. m., a course taken in order to permit birds in flight an opportunity to feed without being subjected to pot shots. Automatic and repeating shot guns will be restricted to a limit of three shells for their chambers and no shot guns larger than a No. 10 gauge will be permitted.

Mr. Darling who has gained a reputation as an enthusiast for game conservation, relinquished his work as a cartoonist in order to carry out his ideals. It has taken him some months to work out a program but he feels his efforts have been worth while.

No Printed Word About the Art of Gem-Cutting

The mysterious art of gem-cutting which was born some 60 centuries ago, has existed for generations without reference books or bibliography says a writer in the Washington Star An art which is parent of one of the world's wealthiest trades is practically unknown in scientific literature. Not a single book about it has ever been printed on an American press. Crerar's record collection of books at the Congressional library contains neither tome, text book or treatise concerning the fascinating activities of both ancient and modern lapidists Veiled in secrecy from its inception, this manipulative mastery of both gems and beautiful stones has handed its mysteries to the point where they are almost inviolate Of all the unknown arts, it has rated as the most occult Rival lapidaries have lived and died without revealing any of their secrets. Crimes were committed blood was shed, but not even the wrath of royalty nor the machinations of the underworld were adequate to loose anything more than fragmentary facts about cabochon cutting and the faceting of precious and semi precious stones.

The engraved seals of Babylon and the scarabs of Egypt were the ancient progenitors of modern gem carving. About 500 B. C. gem-cutting attained its greatest artistry, during the days when sapphire points and bow drills were used. Altogether, there are some 125 gem stones, including both precious and semi-precious varieties which are handled regularly in the workshops of professional and amateur lapidaries. Approximately one-half of these are suitable for cabochon cutting, but the finer and more costly ones yield their maximum trove of beauty only when cut facet.

Mosques Are Pronounced Cairo Skyline Feature

Cairo, one of the high points on Mediterranean cruises, is the capital of Egypt, the largest city in Africa and one of the most curious cities in the world.

The minarets are the most beautiful in the Levant. There are 500 mosques in the city. In the building of one Gami Sultan Hassan expended $3,000 daily for three years and when it was completed cut off the architect's hands so that he could not construct another like it.

The Citadel, built about 1166, contains a mosque of Oriental alabaster. The Mosque of Tulin, built in the Ninth century, stands on the hill whereon, tradition asserts, the ark rested after the flood. Another legend is to the effect that upon this spot Abraham was about to offer Isaac as a sacrifice when a ram was opportunely found for a substitute. Out in the river lies Rhoda island, where, tradition says, Pharaoh's daughter found the infant Moses in the bullrushes.

Pintail Ducks

Pintail ducks are trim and handsome, but usually shy, ever on the alert for danger They are very rapid fliers. Pintails are not noisy ducks. The only notes they utter are quacks, which sound very much like the quack of the common mallard In the field, male pintail ducks may be recognized by their white bellies and the conspicuous white line which runs up the side of the head and neck. The long, pointed central tail feathers are another distinction, and so are the light edgings of the rear of the pintail's wings when the duck is in flight The female pintails are slender, streaked brown ducks, similar to the female mallard, but more slender and without the white bordered blue patch on the wing.

The Mynah Bird

The mynah bird, a member of the crow family and cousin of the jay, is a stranger in all parts of the United States except Hawaii. There, however it has quite overrun the country makes up a part of every landscape, struts proudly on the back of every water buffalo or dairy cow and graces many a bird cage, in which it sets up a rivalry with the parrot in its ability to talk. The mynah is a native of India and has got only so far as the Hawaiian islands in following the channels of trade. It is barred from Continental United States because over here it is thought that we already have a sufficiently large representation of the aggressive bird family from which is comes.

Elements Act as Sculptor

An island off the southern coast of Nova Scotia is known as Virgin's island because of an almost perfect outline of the Madonna with the Christ Child in her arms which appears as an etching on one of its solid cliffs facing the ocean This piece of art is the work of nature, working through such agencies as storms, the frequent lapping of the waves of the ocean against the cliff, and frost. So inaccessible is Virgin's island, with its stern rock-bound coast, that no human being has ever set foot on its shores.

Hang Their Criminals

Let no one think Abyssinians are more saintly than some persons who use poison gas, submarines and air bombs in warfare. They do some things that modern Christian nations do, such as in punishments meted out to criminals. The criminal code of the Ethiopians is less refined. They used no lethal chambers, no electric chairs, no guillotines to execute their murderers. They hang them on trees.

Talking Birds, Animals, Are Few and Far Apart

Birds have widely demonstrated powers of conversation. Among other animals cases of talking are extremely rare. There are three recorded cases of dogs talking, but in these cases an elastic definition of "talking" is required, observes a writer in the New York Herald Tribune.

Dr. W. Reid Blair, director of the New York Zoological park, points out that the conversational abilities of dogs is much more apparent to their owners than to strangers. Dogs have a larynx and vocal cords and while they have possibilities for development this development has taken place to only a limited extent.

The best conversationalist in the animal kingdom is the Indian Myna, a small bird resembling the black bird or starling, states Doctor Blair. It surpasses the parrot or the crow. Talking by birds is an acquired art due to their contact with human society, and is a development of their power to mimic sounds. There is no evidence, states Doctor Blair, that birds which have acquired the art of talking in the human sense use this ability to talk when they are communicating among their own kind.

When animals are communicating with their own kind it is possible that they are using some method which was available to man in an earlier stage of development, but which he has lost since he developed the power of speech, Doctor Blair believes. As to the nature of the method used there is not much information available.

Sulphur Once Condensed From Fumes of Volcanoes

Men have been familiar with sulphur since before the beginning of written history, notes Thomas M. Beck, in the Chicago Tribune. Ancient scientists were peculiarly fascinated by it. The fact that it usually was found near volcanoes, and that it was about the only known mineral substance that was inflammable, led them to regard it as a sort of solid form of fire, possessed with a cosmic importance almost equal to that of the gods. This feeling that there is something supernatural about sulphur has continued to the present day.

The ancients were correct when they attributed magical properties to the substance. It has been said without exaggeration that sulphur plays some part, either directly or indirectly, in the preparation of 90 per cent of all the things we use.

Where do we get our sulphur? Until about thirty years ago almost all of it came from the neighborhood of volcanoes, where, during past ages it had been condensed from fumes issuing from the earth's interior. There was not much demand for the stuff in ancient times except as a curiosity. The first industrial demand for it came about the year 1500, when gunpowder, of which sulphur is an ingredient, began to come into general use.

Twenty-One Gun Salute

As far as our country is concerned, we simply copied the 21 gun salute from the British; it has become the universal salute of powers of the first rank. The origin of it is not certain. The old salute of one war vessel to another was of seven guns. Possibly the old mystical significance of the number seven set it at this figure. Shore batteries, with better supplies of powder, came to be allowed to fire three guns to a ship's one. After potassium nitrate came into general use in the manufacture of powder (it does not deteriorate like the old sodium nitrate) the number of guns for the naval international salute was raised to equal the number of guns given by land forces—that is 21.

Charing Cross Gone

Up to the time of Charles II, Charing Cross stood among the fields in London. The name is derived from the Saxon word charrynge, meaning a turning. In 1291 Edward I erected at Charing the last of 13 crosses which marked the route of the funeral procession of his wife, Eleanor, from Grantham, Lincolnshire, to Westminster. The cross was taken down in 1647. A modern memorial cross may be seen inside the Charing Cross station yard. It will be remembered that Eleanor journeyed with Edward I to the Holy Land and sucked the poison from a wound dealt her husband by a Moor.

Discarded Gas Cans Popular

The discarded gasoline can is one of the most widely used objects throughout Asia and Africa. It is employed chiefly for carrying or storing water, milk, clothes and money. However, writes Katherine Gardner, Rapid City, S. D., in Collier's Weekly, there are whole towns made out of these flattened tins and some people turn them into musical instruments and bird cages. In Tibet those with sacred animals stamped on their sides are even used in the temples for the burning of incense.

The Spiritual

The spiritual is a unique form of religious folksong evolved by the southern plantation negro. It is rendered without instrument of any sort, the fervent hand-clapping, tapping and patting of the foot, and the rhythmic movement of the body known as "shoutin'." In this way is the true spiritual distinguished from that usually given by trained singers, from which, it is held, most of the real qualities are lacking.

Electricity in Body, but No Electric Organ

There is no special electric organ in the human body as there is in certain types of fishes—the electric eel, etc. Electric sparks and discharges from the hair and skin are usually symptoms of frictional electricity. For example, the friction of the leather soles of shoes on the woolen rugs in a heated house may produce enough electricity to cause sparks to jump from the person's fingers to a lamp fixture or metal hinge. Atmospheric conditions and differences in the conditions of muscular, nervous and general health may account for individual differences with regard to these electric sparks.

According to textbooks of physiology, every contraction of a muscle, the secretion of a gland, and probably also nutritional changes in the tissues, are associated with electrical phenomena, which may be demonstrated by a sensitive galvanometer and suitable methods. Before any muscular contraction there is a change in the electrical condition of the muscle, and even the heart beats are said to be associated with electrical phenomena. Similar electrical changes are also found in the living nerves.—Detroit News.

Soldier Bonus Demands Traced to Indian Wars

The bonus for former warriors is as old as the Indian wars of the early settlers, according to an authority, who reviews the fight between the English settlers in Connecticut with the Pequots, which occurred in 1637.

The Pequots, most feared tribe in Connecticut, had subjugated the other Indians and the determination of the white settlers on a war, though they were inexperienced in Indian fighting, was a "remarkable action to take," the writer says.

The General court decided on the war at Hartford, May 1, 1637, and by July 13, the same year, the Indian power had been broken. The white men struck quickly, killing men, women and children as they drove the Indians from the state. Then came the aftermath, just as it has in modern days.

The Indian fighters demanded bonuses, and were given lands in the former country of the Pequots, now New London county. Taxes were increased and increased interest in preparation for other wars was noted. The leaders then fighting wrote their memoirs, and altercations arose as to who won the war.

Handel's "Messiah"

According to a book entitled "George Frederic Handel," by Newman Flower, "The Messiah" was written in London and filed away by Handel, who had no idea of producing it when he wrote it, due to the fact that he was so discouraged over the reception given him in London and the indifference displayed for his compositions, that he had about made up his mind to return to Germany when he received a pressing invitation to go to Dublin and there produce some of his other compositions. Whether it was because the Irish are a music-loving people, or that the type of religious music for which Handel was noted appealed strongly to them, is not known, but he achieved tremendous success in Dublin. With persuasion, he was induced to produce "The Messiah." Of all of his compositions given in Dublin, "The Messiah" achieved the greatest fame and Handel's success from then on was assured.

Engines Have Stomach Ache

Even railway engines have their "stomach" aches, and their diet, particularly liquid, has to be watched, says a bulletin of the motive power department of the Canadian National railways. It all comes about through the property possessed by water of dissolving certain minerals in the earth. To distil water for locomotives would entail enormous expense; some locomotives use about 14,000 gallons of water on an average run of 185 miles. Therefore treating plants have to be maintained to break down the minerals in the water, particularly sulphate of lime, carbonate of lime and carbonate of magnesia that deposit a scale in the boilers which causes loss of power and overheating of the boiler plates and damage to the tubes—in other words "stomach" ache.

Public Executions

In the early days of Ohio execution by hanging was public and no step was omitted which might by publicity tend to deter persons from committing capital offenses. Before the condemned man was hanged his funeral was "preached," whilst other means were taken to show the consequences of homicide. For example, in 1825 in Newark a murderer was condemned to be hanged, the gallows was erected, the grave dug, the coffin made, the shroud procured, and the condemned man vested in it. He was then placed within the coffin, while the sermon was "preached" to a large audience, assembled to listen to the services which were then to be followed by the execution.

CONTROL OF CREDIT A BASIC QUESTION

Economist Describes Conflict Between Opposing Social Viewpoints on Government Bank.

Agitation for government banking is a phase of the conflict between our present "personal competitive enterprise system" in America and the "compulsory state collective security system" of several European States, Virgil Jordan, President National Industrial Conference Board, says in an article in a recent issue of "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association.

"They involve irreconcilable principles of human conduct and philosophy of life and the conflict between them is the key to the economic, social and political struggles of today," Mr. Jordan says.

The enterprise system of which "the development of the United States has been the unparalleled example, depends for its motive power of progress upon the inexhaustible reservoir of energy in individual desire for personal advancement in prosperity, but it guarantees nothing to the individual save freedom of opportunity," the article says in part.

The collectivist security system, he says, "places all emphasis upon the maintenance of a minimum standard of living for the mass without regard to the creative power of the individual. quite simply the security system involves the modern form of the philosophy of the slave society." He continues:

A Sign of the Times

"The many-sided movement toward governmental banking, deposit insurance and currency management is the most direct and decisive expression of the universal instinctive search for security which is the sign of the times. In America our so-called social security legislation is an important indication of the drift away from the enterprise system toward a collectivist security system with concentration of authority in a central Federal government.

"The nationalization of credit is crucial and indispensable for complete state control of the complex industrial and business structure of this country. The drive toward government banking and monetary control is most determined because the relation of the state to credit goes to the root of the enterprise system. A collective security system is inconceivable without nationalization of credit. An enterprise system is inconceivable with it."

Under a collective security system, based on government banking the controls "lie solely in the hands of a few persons and depend upon their judgment, will or caprice," Mr. Jordan says, adding that it is they who must determine "upon the basis of some predetermined plan or upon pure political expediency of the moment, what lines of industry and even what individual enterprises shall have access to the credit reservoir." The state, he says, has the power of life and death over all enterprise that utilizes credit.

"Every government is an organ of party power and must respond to the will of the party that put it in power," the Jordan article says. "Under unchecked government operation it is an inescapable tendency of every currency to depreciate and for credit to expand. However much it may be in the interest of the nation, deflation is too dangerous politically for any government to undertake it deliberately.

"In the end government banking and currency management resolve themselves simply into the use of credit as a political instrument of power, and this instrument tends to be used in the long run for expropriation of the savings of the community."

THE FARM BUDGET

By DAN H. OTIS,
Agricultural Director, American Bankers Association

Inventories aid in the formation of a farm budget. Some banks, as well as the Farm Credit Administration, recommend outlining in advance the method of using production loans. Under this plan provision is made for monthly expenditures and funds are granted to the borrower in accordance with the budget plan. The budget helps to show how loans can be repaid.

D. H. OTIS

With the accumulated data from previous inventories and budgets, budget making becomes easier and more accurate and valuable. As one branch of the farming plant requires more expenditure, such as for new machinery, fencing, livestock, etc., it may be necessary to limit other branches in order to meet these pressing requirements.

The budget helps to formulate a financial program. It is of special importance in arranging to meet special or large expenditures. If the income and expenditures are carefully budgeted it prevents the spending of money needed for interest and taxes before the time of their payment arrives. It helps to provide a reserve.

The Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association feels that this type of work is so important that special emphasis has been placed upon the field of farm inventories budgets and credit statements as one of its national projects for farm aid.

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE RESTORED BY BANKS

American Bankers Association Describes Its Activities to Create Better Understanding Regarding Banks

NEW YORK.—Eight different lines of activity through which the American Bankers Association is constantly aiming to promote better public understanding and opinion in regard to banking and the attitude of bankers toward legislation are described in detail in a statement made public here by R. S. Hecht, president of the association

The aim, he says, is "to strengthen the real basis for good opinion in regard to the banks," through fostering informative bank advertising in the newspapers and in other ways. The statement was issued in reply to suggestions received urging a nation-wide public educational program in regard to "the business of banking and its place in the life of our country."

Mr Hecht declares that "we have tried very hard to convince the public that the banking fraternity has truly profited by the lessons of the past, is determined to approach all questions of banking policy from the broad viewpoint of public welfare and is prepared to carry its full share of the burden in connection with all efforts to restore sound prosperity in this country."

The Means Employed

In describing the various measures of the association "to exert a beneficial influence on public opinion regarding the functions, methods and operations of banks," Mr. Hecht enumerates the following activities

1. The Public Education Commission, which prepares plain language talks about banking for use of bankers and others before schools, civic clubs and over the radio.
2. The Constructive Customer Relations program installed in many banks to help qualify bank employees to promote a better informed and more sympathetic attitude among their customers regarding banking
3. The Publicity Department, supplying city and country daily and weekly newspapers with articles regarding banking and allied subjects and furnishing the general press with news and information regarding the activities of the association.
4. The Advertising Department, supplying members of the association with a series of informative newspaper advertisements setting forth in brief, popular language the methods and policies under which banks operate, their effective practices for protecting depositors' funds, the services they render and the various ways in which they cooperate with business in their own communities in fostering sound recovery and progress.
5. The Executive Officers and the Committee on Banking Studies, who are active, particularly at Washington, in consulting with Administration and Congressional leaders in formulating proposals for banking reform based on broad lines of public welfare.
6. The Agricultural Commission, promoting among bankers in the farm districts the practice of aiding their farm customers in installing on their farms better financial and operating methods.
7. The American Institute of Banking, having primarily to do with the technical education of the younger banker, but now directing these efforts toward also playing a part in improving public relations for banking as a whole, particularly through stressing the public responsibilities and the ethical aspects of practical banking
8. The publication of "Banking," the official organ of the association, circulating among bankers, bank directors, business executives, economists, law firms, government departments, libraries, colleges, public schools and other publications, presenting articles regarding banking and banking viewpoints.

The Objective Sought

In commenting on the foregoing program, Mr. Hecht says that it is not "the primary objective to attract attention particularly to the American Bankers Association as such, but rather to focus attention on and give impetus to those ideas which it believes are beneficial in promoting understanding and solidarity among banking, business and the public." He adds:

"Our program for the development of satisfactory public relations for banking does not consist merely of newspaper publicity. It is calculated to produce a continuous and cumulative effect by varied efforts which are aimed to work day in and day out to strengthen the real basis for good opinion in regard to the banks.

"To have favorable things said about the banking business in the newspapers and over the radio is, the association recognizes, very helpful toward creating a sound public opinion regarding banking. But the association believes that the most important thing ultimately is to foster throughout the banking profession the doing sincerely of those things that reflect favorably the sound, helpful practices of the business of banking, and that then the true news of its constructive activities will constitute the best answers to misrepresentations aimed at banks and bankers."

Predicts Farm Loan Expansion

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. — With marked improvement in agriculture already apparent, and further improvement confidently expected, a greatly expanded volume of farm credit will be required, especially short term credit, according to a statement here recently by W. I. Myers, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, Washington, D. C. He was speaking before the Graduate School of Banking, conducted jointly by the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University.

"Some people have expressed a fear that the Cooperative Production Credit Associations are threatening the business of country banks, but these institutions have neither the desire nor the resources to monopolize a field which is still in the infancy of development," Governor Myers said. "Farmers who get their credit on time or by charge accounts have a basis for cash loans and should be buying their credit from a bank, production credit association or other institutions that sell credit on a business basis."

in 1928 and 1929, fresh from ng triumphs in movies with Warner Brothers decided to whole hog and make them in color, too. "On with the Show" and "Gold Diggers of Broadway" led the rush to color. But at that time only part of the spectrum could be reproduced and outlines were blurred. To make matters worse, the boom in color caused overproduction and forced the Technicolor Motion Picture corporation to turn out an inferior product. The resultant flops have kept most producers shy of color ever since. The one saving grace was that the boom gave Technicolor funds to carry on its experimenting.

Responsible for Progress.

Although there are other companies —41 of them—in the field, who may later produce better color films, it is Technicolor which is responsible for the present state of perfection. It was named for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the alma mater of Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, who began experimenting with color cinematography (which is the elegant word for "shooting" movies) upon his graduation in 1914.

Merian C. Cooper in the fall of 1925 returned from tropical jungles with a film called "Chang." Not even the success of this film could placate Cooper for the loss of exquisite jungle beauty when it was reproduced in varying shades of gray, rather than in all its primitive, colored splendor. Cooper determined to create color movies and associated himself with Dr. Kalmus.

Their work progressed slowly, but in 1921 they were able to make "Toll of the Sea," with Anna May Wong, a color picture. It caused no flurries of excitement. Then in 1928 the boom came—and went.

Two years later Dr. Kalmus improved his process so that a full and faithful range of colors could be shown and images could be given definite outline. By this time nobody in Hollywood could be interested—except young Walt Disney, best known as the father of "Mickey Mouse."

Disney had never allowed precedent to interfere with his art. He believed in Technicolor and backed his belief with a "Silly Symphony," called "Flowers and Trees," produced by the new process. It was artistically successful. It was followed by "Three Little Pigs," which certainly needs no introduction anywhere in the world where there is a motion picture house and which has often been said (seriously) to have done more than any other one thing to take the mind of the world off the gloom of depression.

Whitneys Take It Up.

Certainly Mr. Disney's porkers ended the depression for Technicolor, for they it was who interested John Hay ("Jock") Whitney and his cousin, Cornelius Vanderbilt ("Sonny") Whitney in color movies. The Whitney millions bought 15 per cent of the shares of Technicolor Motion Picture corporation and organized Pioneer Pictures, Inc., to produce pictures by that process.

One of the first steps of the Whitneys was a wise one. From the New York stage they brought Robert Edmond Jones, whose design work for "Rebound," "Mourning Becomes Electra," "Ah, Wilderness!" and other plays had established him as the leader in his field.

With Jones as the minister of the palette, Pioneer produced an experimental two-reeler, which proved definitely that natural colors had arrived on the screen. The picture, "La Cucaracha," grossed $250,000, more than any short in black and white had ever drawn.

"Becky Sharp" followed. It cost approximately $1,000,000. Whether or not it shows a profit does not concern the Whitneys much. To them, the important thing is that, artistically, it has been hailed by most critics as a success, as the final "arrival" of natural color to the screen. Some critics were cold to it, but they felt that way not because of imperfections in color reproduction, but because of the tremendous possibility that abuse may, and in their opinion, will, destroy color films. As the reviewer of the sophisticated and wary New Yorker said:

"What someone else, someone other than Mr. Jones, someone, say, with a weakness for pretty postcards, may do with the marvels of the new scientific advance I shudder to think I may some day know."

More of Them Planned.

Pioneer Pictures has on its schedule eight more color movies. It has been reported that the next one will contain songs and dances.

Every motion picture studio in southern California is already beginning to experiment once more with the colored cinema, or is actually planning the production of a film in natural colors. It costs about 30 per cent more to make a picture in colors than to make it in black and white, not counting additional staging extravagances.

It has been conservatively estimated that there will be at least 10 full-length color features made during 1936, that in three years half the films will be in color and that by the end of five years at least 90 per cent of all the films made in Hollywood, at least, will be in color.

One of the most ambitious of the new color movies will be the one now in production at the Disney studios. It will be the first full-length animated cartoon ever made, and will be called "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," based, of course, upon the fairy tale of the same name. What a stupendous undertaking this is may be understood from the fact that somewhere between 80,000 and 100,000 separate drawings and exposures will be necessary to a cartoon of this length. It has already been in the making a year and a half and Disney estimates that it will take another year and a half to complete it. The cost will approximate $350,000.

Only this fall will you begin to see animated cartoons other than the Disney product on the screen in all of the primary colors. That is because Disney, with his customary foresight, acquired a year's exclusive contract on the use of full Technicolor for animated cartoons. That contract expires some time this month. The other cartoons you have seen in colors of late were made by the old two-color process.

Technicolor is made in the subtractive color process which has been mentioned. There are three separate magazines of film which run through the camera. Each of them photographs one of the primary colors from which all colors are compounded. From each of the negatives a matrix (which may be loosely termed as similar to an engraved plate such as is used in printing) is made.

How It's Done.

A properly prepared film holds the master black. Color impressions are transferred from the matrices to this master film by the use of what are called subtractive primary dyes, in a process of imbibition. The dyes used are cyan (minus red), magenta (minus green) and yellow (minus blue). All colors must be transferred to the master black film before the color print is ready.

Such an explanation is, of course, vague at best, but is about all that can be accomplished within the limits of a short article.

The process is foolproof, in that it is impossible to alter the colors. The camera registers the colors exactly as it sees them. The only human errors possible are lack of taste in preparing the settings and lack of precision in printing the film.

Certainly it will be no eye-strain to enjoy your favorite star's complete beauty, color of hair, lips, eyes and all. Or will it? For instance you will perhaps be surprised to learn that Myrna Loy has green eyes—but don't fear, for they're beautiful, just the same.

Colorists are predicting that there will be a new vogue for blondes because of color pictures, for the best type for such films is the true blonde with cleanly chiseled features.

And for you girls who would like to get into pictures, here's good news! You won't have to diet so strenuously. Color pictures make you look slimmer!

BALD EAGLE HAS EARNED ITS RANK AS AIR MONARCH

Our national bird, the bald eagle, chosen in the early days of the Union, is figured on many of our coins, is a favored design in matters of patriotic interest, and in general is considered symbolic of our freedom.

Its enormous size and the striking markings of the adult make it a prominent species that is noted on every appearance. A bird of great strength and of swift and powerful flight, it is master in its haunts and has no potent enemies except man. Its life is led in the vicinity of water and only casually is it found far from that element.

The food of the bald eagle is mainly fish. In Alaska severe complaint has been made that it destroys salmon during their annual runs up the streams to deposit their eggs.

Elsewhere the eagle often fishes by plunging from a height, descending at an angle on its selected prey, sometimes going beneath the surface. Rarely it grapples prey so large that it cannot rise with it and is under necessity of towing it to shore. This eagle also robs the osprey, being fiercely predatory in such encounters.

Large birds are sometimes captured, including ducks, coots and geese. Although the eagle is sufficiently swift to seize them in flight, it ordinarily gives chase on the water, where it is able to tire them by forcing them to dive until they become exhausted.

There was much discussion before the bald eagle was finally adopted as our nation's emblem by act of congress on June 20, 1782; Benjamin Franklin in particular favored the wild turkey.—Alexander Wetmore in the National Geographic Magazine.

What Is Wealth?

A woman has said in court that with $200,000 to her name she would not call herself rich. In another court a bankrupt said that he did not feel wealthy on $10,000 a year and sometimes was very hard up. An actress who had more than $20,000 a year has told how she had to spend $30,000. These people have missed a lot of fun. A man who feels rich because he has a dollar in his pocket is fifty times as well off as any of them. His is a grand and glorious feeling.—Manchester (Eng.) Sunday Chronicle.

CAMP MEETING'S VALUE

The annual Desplaines camp meeting, outdoor assembly under Methodist Episcopal auspices, is one of the most interesting religious phenomena of the Chicago area, S. J. Duncan-Clark writes, in the Chicago Daily News. For seventy-six years it has maintained a tradition that roots in the early beginnings of Methodism in the United States—the days when Lorenzo Dow, unique American apostle of the faith, was preaching his message with quaint and compelling eloquence. In regions where churches were few and opportunities for concerted worship rare, the camp meeting crudely served the spiritual needs of the people.

Despite much that has been written and said in criticism and ridicule, it was a vital force in fashioning a better and sturdier life. Its theology was apt to be narrow, its appeal emotional, but it turned the hearts and minds of men toward thoughts of God.

A reader of this paper anxious to conform to all the rules of table etiquette writes in to inquire what to do when the dessert is lemon pie too soft and thin to be eaten successfully with a fork. Our inquiurer asks if a spoon is permissible in a case of this kind. The table etiquette editor is out for the moment but our suggestion would be that whatever is necessary should be done. Experience tells us that it is better to eat pie of this kind with a spoon and brag on it than to make a failure of attempting to eat it with a fork and thus embarrass the hostess.

days to 'run" the line, to take off fish and rebait. There are some thirty commercial fishermen along the north shore and they have their own association for marketing the fish they catch.

Along the drive we see signs that read "Deer Crossing" The country is full of deer and these signs are placed so that motorists can slow down in case deer are going over the highway, much the same as we see signs in Iowa reading "Cattle Crossing." We were unfortunate that we did not see any deer along the highway Mr Scott said if we had a few hours time that we could drive out along some of the trails beyond the cabin after dark and we would see plenty of deer. Apparently they were not afraid of car lights and this is one of the best ways to see them.

Some of our friends have asked us about the cost of Hudson's Bay blankets in Canada. The prices range from $11 to $18 for the very best blankets. The prices in the States are very much higher. We saw a blanket in one of our cities that was priced $26.50 and a much prettier and heavier blanket we saw at Port Arthur was priced at $16 50. The low price is due to the fact that there is no duty collected on the blankets in Canada. We are determined on our next trip to Canada we are going to get a nice blanket.

We did not spend any time in Duluth, as we had been there before and in an article a few years ago we described to our readers the wonders of Duluth Harbor and the sights there. On our return trip we took part of the river drive down from Red Wing, Minn. This is a very beautiful drive and one that can be made by North Iowa motorists easily in a week end trip.

Summing up our trip, we decided it was one of the finest beauty spots we have ever seen Far more wonderful and beautiful than the Black Hills or Ozark Mountains, and we now plan that our next vacation will be spent at Jack's cabin up on the hillside overlooking Lake Superior and back in the hills where rainbow, speckled and Brook Trout are plentiful. and if we crave lake fishing we can find plenty of that sport a few miles from the cabin. And we want to see bears, moose and deer in their natural state.

Return From Western Trip

Supt and Mrs. D. L. Hunter and two children returned Friday from their trip though western states and Mexico. Mr. Hunter's mother, who accompanied them to California, remained in that state for an extended visit with her sister. Mr. Hunter took lots of time off from sight seeing for fishing. He found fishing very good in Mexico and off the coast of California and his fish stories will hold local nimrods for awhile. The Hunter family enjoyed their vacation very much.

Reformed Aid Held Picnic

The ladies of the Reformed Aid Society and their families enjoyed a picnic dinner at Plot Knob State Park near Forest City Sunday afternoon. They drove up after the morning church services.

With the increase in the burden of taxes the question naturally arises as to the justice in the law that exempts members of congress and other officers of the government from the payment of income tax. Especially since in most instances these parties receive more regular and substantial income from the government payroll than they would be able to earn from any private paymaster.

In a recent address before the United States Senate, Sentor Huey Long made the statement that the vice district of New Orleans is 18 blocks long and 16 blocks wide. It looks as though Huey had quite a job of cleaning up at home before he takes on the whole nation.

The business men organizations and town officials extend an invitation to come and have a good time in Klemme, Wednesday, August 28th.

POTATOES SHOULD BE DUG SOON AFTER VINES DIE

Whether potatoes are dug for the market or for use in the home, it is advisable to dig them as soon as possible after the vines have died. It is important that potatoes for sale be taken out of the ground and put on the market as soon as possible, for their price has begun a decline which will continue until the middle of October.

Potatoes for home use, to be stored satisfactorily, should be placed in a room with high humidity and a temperature of 40 degrees They are best stored in covered barrels or small bins, and should not be placed in piles that are too large. Care should be taken to keep earth out of the potatoes as much as possible for it interferes with ventilation, tending to cause heating and rotting. Stored potatoes should be kept absolutely dark to prevent greening by light.

Now It's Peto and Peto

When you step into Wilson's Drug Store and call for "Pete", there might appear two Petes on the scene. "Pete" Kilgore began duties at the drug store Monday learning the principles of soda jerking and sundae slinging. The other Pete is P. M., the proprietor. Just how two Petes can keep things straight remains to be seen. Perhaps one of them will have to be renamed.

NEW DEPUTY GAME WARDEN MOVED TO CLEAR LAKE

Jack Z. Stevens, new deputy game warden for this territory, and family have moved into a house on the north shore of Clear Lake, across from the Country Club. Mr. Stevens was recently transferred to this territory from Boone, succeeding F E Phinney, who went to Marshalltown on game management work.

Mr. Stevens, who has Hancock, Cerro Gordo and Floyd counties as his territory, called on Klemme sportsmen last Wednesday and we acknowledge a call at the Times Office. Mr. Stevens is a fine gentleman and we are sure he will find many friends among the sportsmen of his territory

Iowa Law Requires That Driver Report Accidents

AUGUST IS IDEAL TIME FOR RESEEDING LAWNS

August is ideal for seeding new lawns and "sprucing up" old ones, says R. R. Rothacker of the Landscape Architecture Department at Iowa State College.

Lawns seeded at this time are better, in fact, than those made in the spring partly because the grass if well watered, is able to overcome weed competition, and it grows better in cool weather.

A good mixture for Iowa consists of 4 parts bluegrass and 2 parts redtop, with only a sprinkling (less than 1 part) of White Dutch clover. Too large a proportion of white clover tends to crowd out grasses and may be killed by freezing.

Seed may be scratched in with a rake and a mixture of 1 part well rotted compost manure with 3 parts good loam soil applied as top dressing. The seeding should be kept moist and may be protected from drying out by mulching lightly with some material free from weed seed such as peat moss. Sodding is best for small bare patches and for steep banks.

Must Stop and Give Aid Following Auto Mishap

The operator of a motor vehicle who knows that, in the operation of said vehicle, injury has been caused to a person because of the culpability of said operator or because of accident must, before leaving the place of said injury:

1. Give such aid to the injured party as the circumstances may reasonably require.
2. Give the registration number of his motor vehicle, and his name and address, including street number, if any, to the injured party.
3. Give such information, in case the injured party is too severely injured to receive it, to some reasonably mature person accompanying the injured party, and in the absence of such person, to some apparently disinterested bystander.

Place To Report Accident

The operator, immediately after complying with the last preceding section, shall report of accident, together with the said information, at the office of some peace officer as near as practicable to the place of injury or to the county attorney or sheriff of said county in which said injury took place, but when the accident occurs within the corporate limits of any city of the first class, the accident and all information in connection therewith, as required in this chapter, shall be reported at the office of the chief of police and when reported elsewhere shall not constitute a compliance with the provisions of this section.

Failure To Report Accident

An operator who fails to cmply with any of the requirements of the two last preceding sections shall be punished by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars or by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding two years, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and if any person be convicted a second time for such violation he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not less than one year and not more than five years, or by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars.

FARMERS UNION PICNIC AT CLEAR LAKE, AUGUST 30

The Farmers Union picnic will be held in Clear Lake Friday, Aug. 30 in the city park.

A very good program has been arranged starting at 2:30. E. H. Everson, national president of the Farmers Union, will give the main address of the day. The Clear Lake high school band will furnish the music. Everyone is invited. Come early and bring your lunch.

In case of rain the address of Mr. Evenson will be given at the community building.

After all, the capital most marriages have these days is the bonds of matrimony.

WORM POULTRY

Just one dose of Dr. Hess Poultry Worm Powder gets the round worms in 24 to 36 hours. This single-dose flock treatment is given in feed. It is odorless, tasteless—does not affect feed consumption. Dr. Hess Poultry Worm Powder is a nicotine product that goes right down into the intestines where the worms are before the nicotine is released. It is non-toxic—no interference with egg production. The cost is only a half to a cent per bird. If you want to treat your birds individually, we can give you this same powder in tablet form.

DR. E. G. SCHAEFFER AND MISS FLORENCE WILSON MARRIED

Ceremony Was Performed Saturday Aug. 17, At Cromwell, Iowa

The marriage of Miss Florence Wilson and Dr. Earl G. Schaeffer took place at the Congregational Church at Cromwell, Iowa, Saturday afternoon, August 17th at 3:00 o'clock.

The Bride, who is a daughter of Rev and Mrs. E. Carnell Wilson, of Cromwell, Iowa, taught school in the Klemme grades for several years. Dr. Schaeffer has been practicing dentistry in Klemme for the past couple of years. Both of these young people are popular in our community and have a host of friends who extend best wishes.

As The Times goes to press we have been unable to get the details of the wedding, and so this feature must wait over until next week.

We understand Dr. and Mrs. Schaeffer are spending their honeymoon at Lake Okoboji and expect to return to Klemme the fore part of next week, and will go to housekeeping in an apartment at the Wellemeyer Building.

In the meantime, we extend congratulations.

State Highway Paving Will Be Extended Into Klemme

Two And A Half Blocks Main Street To Be Paved

Work Expected To Be Completed This Fall

REPRESENTATIVE OF HIGHWAY COMMISSION HERE THURSDAY

Meeting Of Property Owners Held To Discuss State Proposition

Mr Meredith, representative of the Iowa State Highway Commission was in Klemme last Thursday and called on F. A. Arnold and town officials offering a proposition to the Town of Klemme to extend No. 69 over Highway 179 into the town of Klemme, and also to pave the Main Street of Klemme from the Rook Island tracks to the intersection at the Hancock County Co-op. Oil Co.

Mr. Arnold and Mayor Stille called a meeting of the Klemme business men whose property adjoined the proposed paving and a group of men were told of the facts at the meeting Thursday evening. Mr. Arnold, who with other Klemme business men have for several years worked diligently to get No. 179 paved into Klemme, presided at the meeting and explained the proposition as laid down by Mr. Meredith which in substance was as follows:

"The Iowa State Highway Commission proposes to pave State Highway No. 179 into Klemme. The work will be done with State and Federal funds and there will be no assessment against the town of Klemme for any of this work. The project has been turned in to Washington for final O. K. by the Highway Commission.

"In addition the Highway Commission will obtain Federal funds for paving the Main Street of Klemme to the intersection above referred to, approximately two and one half blocks This work would be done providing each and every lot owner would put in a copper water pipe from the main to the edge of the side walk, and also bring the sewer connection to each lot. This was required by the Federal Government before the paving would be laid."

After Mr. Arnold had explained what could be done and the proposition was discussed, a vote was taken and the lot owners present agreed to meet the requirements in order to get the street paved.

The paving will not cost the tax payers of Klemme one cent, and the improvements to be made as to water connections and sewer piping will be paid by the lot owners.

Mr. Brouwer, Highway Commission Engineer was with Mr. Meredith and stated that a survey would be made in the near future. He stated that the Commission expected to have the paving completed this fall.

The Town Officials are getting their preliminary work lined up and a report will go forth to the Highway Commission in a few days. The report will be an acceptance of the requirements laid down by the Commission and the Federal Government in order to secure this project.

The proposed paving will be of standard width and will be of concrete. Along Main Street the gap between the cement paving and the sidewalk curb will probably be Black Top, which is formed by putting down crushed rock, gravel and tar.

GAME RESTORATION DEPENDS ON THE HUNTER

The future of hunting and the success of the game management plan in Iowa rests in a great degree with the attitude and actions of the individual sportsman of this State. The amount of pleasure he is to enjoy in hunting seasons to come depends in a large measure upon the amount of effort he as an individual employs in the provision of good hunting conditions for himself.

It is within the ability of every sportsman in this State to provide for himself good hunting conditions. The creation of such a condition cannot be done in a day, nor can it be done without some effort. No real sportsman begrudges the effort he would put forth to improve the hunting conditions for himself

Practice a better code of hunting ethics this season. Contact the farmer. Visit with him, treat him fairly, respect his rights, devide your bag with him and you will be sowing the seeds of friendship and cooperation, so vital to the success of Iowa's conservation plan. Show him that you are genuinely interested in Iowa's game management plan. Explain its benefits to him and to the State at large, secure his co-operation and when future hunting seasons arrive you as well as your boy, will have a place to hunt and the bag will contain game on your return.

Came From Oklahoma

Dr. H. G. Voetberg, of Shawnee, Oklahoma, came last Wednesday and remained in Klemme until Saturday visiting with friends. Dr. Voetbery, who practiced veterinary medicine here and who is now employed by the government, has his headquarters at Shawnee, Oklahoma. He says that there will be work to be done in the drougth area until the first of the year at least. Dr. Voetberg came to Iowa to attend the wedding of Dr. Schaeffer and Miss Florence Wilson at Cromwell, August 17th. Since that time he has been visiting with relatives and friends at Grundy Center and Traer.

Are From Louisiana

Carl Suckow and family arrived in Klemme last Wednesday night from De Ridder La. They left their home on Monday morning and made the trip of 1,055 miles without mishap. Carl is raising a lot of poultry and does a little truck gardening. He says they like it fine in Louisiana and that the climate is to their suiting. Carl says that he has not purchased a pound of fuel since they moved there. He says the summers are no hotter than here and the winters are very mild. The Suckow family will visit in and around Klemme until Friday of this week, when they will return to Louisiana.

KLEMME HIGH SCHOOL OFFERS VARIETY OF SUBJECTS

Business Course Started Last Year Has Many Advantages

The Klemme Schools will open Monday, September 2, after a three month summer vacation. Janitor Emil Patet has the building looking spic and span for the rush of students, while Supt. D. L. Hunter has the teaching staff in readiness to start students on their new work for the coming year.

Klemme Has Many Advantages

The Klemme Schools have a variety of subjects that appeal to the students. Work can be procured to fit them for college entrance; a liberal arts course is available and those who seek to enter the business world will find a good course in typewriting, business arithmetic book keeping and English. The General Course covers a variety of subjects, so that those who graduate and will be unable to attend college, will have a good foundation for any field they may enter.

Fine School Spirit

Due to the fact that, there is about an even balance between students from the rural districts, and those who reside in town, there is an unusual friendly spirit in the Klemme High School. Rural students who come to Klemme feel very much at home and take active part in all school activities.

Music

Klemme High School offers training in the following: Orchestra, Band, Girls Glee Club, Operetta and Small Mixed groups. Miss Ford is an experienced orchestra director and her orchestras always place high in the annual music contests. Miss Johnson has been directing the school and town band which has developed into a forty piece organization. Miss Arends will lead the Glee Clubs. She has specialized in vocal lsssons and group singing.

Dramatics

Our declamatory department has been strong under the direction of Miss Galbreth. Last year Klemme sent a contestant into the sub-state round and other contestants placed high in the local and county contests. The student also has the opportunity of taking public speaking being in plays and assembly programs.

Athletics

Mr. Kingery, who is considered one of the best basketball coaches in the state, will coach the athletics this year. Baseball, track and basketball will be available for those who desire the sports. Physical training is offered to all students.

ETHEL BARZ WAS GRANTED ELEMENTARY DIPLOMA

Ethel A. Barz, of Klemme, was granted the elementary teachers diploma in the summer term graduation exercises at the Iowa State Teachers college on Thursday evening August 22nd.

Dr. Frank Leslie Clapp, of the Education, University of Wisconsin delivered the commencement address, and President O. R. Latham conferred the dgrees and diplomas.

Other events in which the graduates participated included the reception by President and Mrs Latham, the commencement dinner party and the baccalaureate exercises. Ethel was one of 199 graduates of the summer session.

Return From Southern Visit

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. Stille and Lester Stille and family returned to Klemme Friday evening from their trip to DeRidder, Louisiana, where they visited with Paul Stille and family, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Stille and Carl Suckow and family. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Stille returned to Klemme with them. Herman drove a truck through with household goods and Mr. and Mrs. Stille will again reside in Klemme. They will live with Grandma Haefner.

Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Trumbell enjoyed a vacaton and trip by touring the Black Hills and visiting with relatives and friends in the Dakotas. While Mr. Trumbell was absent from his duties as mail carrier, George Lawhorn made the route for him every day.

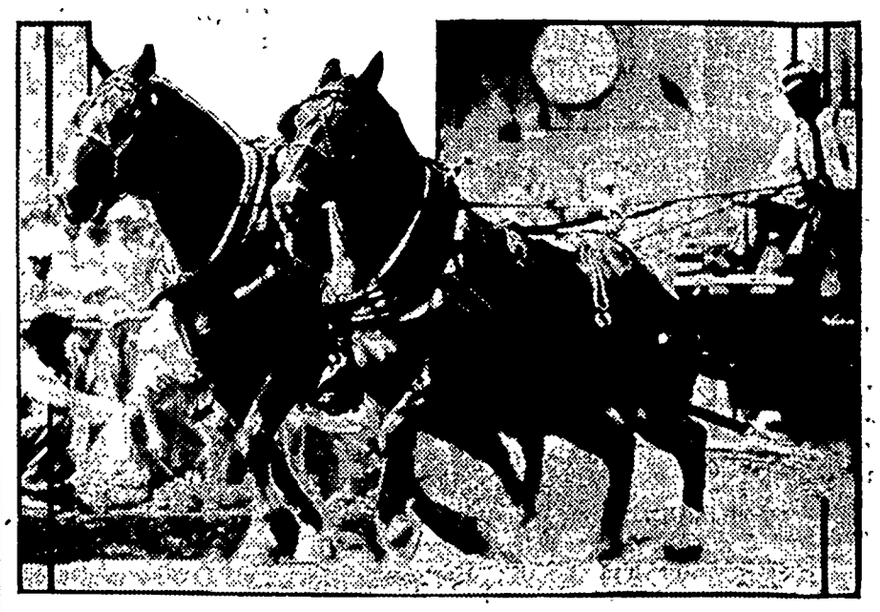
Roads are few and there is but one railroad.

Big Contest for Draft Stallions



The world's first stallion pulling contest offers farm entrants $1,500 in 10 cash prizes, for the best three-year-old stallions. "This will be the greatest pulling contest ever staged," says Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse and Mule Association of America, which is sponsoring the contest, for October 12, at Lincoln Fields racetrack, Crete, Ill., 30 miles south of Chicago on the Dixie highway. The practical object of these contests will be to discover the best pulling sires in the country, so that "horse-power" on the farm can be greatly improved, just as it has been in the motorcar. The team of stallions shown in the illustration won last year's pulling contest at the Century of Progress.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THE woman who does her own laundry work can save herself effort in many little ways which are sometimes overlooked. If at a summer camp, or by the sea, or in the country, the bed linens can be used rough-dried. The term scarcely applies to the neatly folded and well-smoothed linens when they are done with the idea of no ironing. We might well call them smooth-dried, rather than rough-dried. In order to give them the smooth finish, the following methods should be followed:

Shake the sheets, pillow cases, and towels well after wringing them, as this immediately lessens the creases. Hang them on the line so that the wind direction is against the surface, not striking the pieces from the side, which makes the material blow in folds and not out straight.

Put sheets over the line so that half falls each side of it, bringing the crease straight along the middle, which would be the very place it would come if the sheet were ironed. An imperative necessity is to keep the sheet stretched its full width or length, according to how it is doubled over the line. This does not mean that it should be pulled taut across the line, but that it falls without folds over the line for the breezes and the sun to dry the material unwrinkled.

Pillow Cases and Towels

Hang pillow cases hems down, and with the other end straight along the clothes line. Then the wind will blow them smooth, or the sun will cause the evaporation of the water from uncreased surfaces. Hang towels straight with one edge along the clothes line, so they will dry evenly.

When it is time to take the clothes down, let no wrinkles or folds get into them except in the folds desired. Fold the sheets as they are taken down. If two do this it is easier, but one can do it successfully by folding the sheet in half again while it is on the line, and then throwing it over the line and folding it in half again that way. The rest of the folding is easy. Keep the wide hem on the outside. When the clothes are in the house, lay each sheet flat and folded, on the table, and smooth it with the palms outspread. Lay away, flat and smooth, and no ironing, which is hot work, will be required.

Fold towels and pillow cases as you take them from the line and smooth them as described before laying them on the shelves. It takes a few moments to take in the wash as described and only a few moments more to palmpress them. I have done it many times at my summer place and know whereof I speak.

Vacation Clothes

When you go on your vacation be careful not to let the weather just prior to your starting off influence you in your choice of a wardrobe. Be prepared with proper clothes for different weather. There is sure to be a change, and you want to look well and suitably dressed all the time.

There are many styles of rainy day togs that are light in weight, inexpensive in price, and becoming. There are rain coats and capes, and even rubber skirts to drape over frocks, and capes to go with them for complete protection.

Be sure to pack one warm frock. Not only is it uncomfortable to be chilly, but a person looks far from the best when too thinly clad. Cold shows in the countenance. There is a pinched look that betrays that chilly feeling, and everyone will be commiserating you either vocally or silently. And who wants that? Look warm and cheerful, and you will instill an element of pleasure by your very appearance, and thus add a note of popularity to yourself.

Take along sheer costumes for hot weather, and look as cool as you can. It is pleasant to see some one who looks crisp and cool when weather is sweltering. Even at seashore and mountain resorts, there are occasional such days. Be ready for them.

Varnishing Precaution

The formation of blisters on a varnished surface may be due to underlying spots of grease, sap or moisture, to excessive heat or to direct exposure to the sun during the process of drying. To avoid the possibility of such a mishap be sure the surfaces to be varnished are clean, grease-free and absolutely dry—also that there is no direct sunlight and that the temperature is well below the gay "nineties."

Preparation for Painting

Jane Stewart Davis in Better Homes and Gardens advises the home craftsman to be sure that porch or garden furniture is thoroughly clean before beginning to paint. Soap and water can be used if all the soap is removed—any soap left on the furniture damages the finish. Water containing a little ammonia is very easily rinsed. Grease can be removed with gasoline or turpentine without difficulty.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

©W.N.U. By Editha L. Watson

SUNBURNED GOLD

STRANGE, dark ore from a hidden mine—copper gold!

The padres at San Diego mission were using it before the annexation of California. How much they knew about its sourse they did not reveal. But it is said that when the new dispensation began they caused the Indian to hide their mine and "forget" that it existed. And it stayed hidden and forgotten until the day when it was found by Pegleg Smith.

Pegleg was, as his name implies, a one-legged man—a roustabout, sometimes a prospector. What he was doing in the Colorado desert on that day in 1884 is unknown. But somewhere between Yuma and San Diego, instead of going from one water hole to another as sensible people should, he decided to make a short cut, and as a result, he became lost.

There was a mountain close by, and Pegleg knew that the only thing to do was to reach its top and get his bearings from there. It must have been an unpleasant climb, with but one good leg to go on, but finally Smith stood on the sumhit and looked about him.

He also looked down—and there at his feet was ore—strange, dark ore. He was not certain that it had any value, but picked up a few chunks anyway, and resumed his delayed march to San Diego, reaching his destination without further adventures.

For several weeks the ore lay about unnoticed. Finally, just because it was curious-looking stuff, Pegleg showed it to his acquaintances. Some one recognized it as gold in spite of its odd appearance, and a new search was on—a search for the copper gold, the "sunburned" gold, of Pegleg's mine.

As such things will, this search proved profitless. Perhaps the desert added a few more skeletons to its collection of bleaching bones, but no one came back with any more of the gold. Finally the excitement died down.

But it had no more than done so when here came a soldier from Fort Yuma with more of that same unusual ore. He had a slightly more detailed location to give: there were three peaks, he said, instead of one. He was anxious to return, and lost little time in outfitting and choosing several companions. They set out with vast confidence that they would soon return with loads of gold. Then the desert swallowed them.

East of Warner's Pass all trace of them was lost. But many years later prospectors in the Cuyamaca mountains found the bones of men and animals.

Later, an Indian woman appeared with some of the ore at a place where workmen were laying tracks for the railroad. She had lost her way, she said, and like Pegleg, she had seen the mountain and had climbed it, to discover the ore. She claimed, also, that there were peaks, which substantiated the soldier's story. From the mountain top she had seen the tracklayers, and she had headed for their camp.

The tracklayers took one startled inspection of her little load of ore, and then most of them immediately threw down their tools and "made tracks" in the direction from which she had come, without waiting to hear the end of her story. This was a fatal mistake, for she told the rest that she had circled around and approached their camp from an entirely different direction than that in which the mountain lay. The men who had so hastily rushed off were never seen again.

The Indian woman refused from the first to disclose the location of the gold. At last a prospector, Jim Denslow, became her friend, and after many years she told him of the three peaks, and that the mine was near a dry lake. Then he set out, as so many had done before him, seeking for the strange, dark ore. He found the three peaks at last, but between him and them stretched, not a dry lake, but a vast, shallow, wet one, with such dangerous quicksands around its margin that he could not cross it.

Denslow decided that the thing to do was to return to San Diego, re-outfit, and come back prepared to do some work. This he did, and succeeded in skirting the lake and climbing the peaks—only to find nothing but obsidian, volcanic glass.

The next to locate the mine was a Mexican cowboy. He disappeared for several days from the ranch where he was employed, and on his return he showed some of the copper gold. This he squandered on fine saddles and other such matters dear to the cowboy heart, and on gambling. When he was broke again, he disappeared as before, and returned with more gold. This he did several times, managing each time to elude all those who tried to trail him. Of course he would not tell the location, but the character of the ore revealed that it had been taken from the same place as that which Pegleg and the others had visited. At last the cowboy was killed in a knife duel, and his secret died with him.

A former sheriff of the county, however, had seen the Mexican riding in a certain direction. He decided to ride that way, too, and see what lay out there. He set out, but never returned.

Every old-time desert rat in the Southwest knows the approximate location of Pegleg's mine, yet none have succeeded in reaching it.

Tells on Tax Dodger

A burglar has helped the authorities of Carlsbad, the Bohemian holiday resort, to deal with a case of evasion of taxes. He broke into a Carlsbad shop and robbed the till, taking away an account book with him.

Evidently he knew something of accountancy, for a few days later the police received the book by post with numerous items marked in red pencil. "Dodging his taxes. Make him shell out!" an enclosed note urged, and, the figures showed systematic evasion of the turnover tax.

The authorities have decided to continue searching for the burglar, all the same.

GOOD LADDERS WILL CUT LOSS BY RURAL FIRES

"A good ladder on every farm would help a lot in lessening losses from rural fires," says David J. Price, of the United States Department of Agriculture, in enumerating small but important precautions which rural residents often overlook. Doctor Price's job is to find out all he can about fire prevention and fire fighting and pass the information along to the people of this country. Precautions such as a handy ladder, he points out, would help to prevent and control many fires in rural communities.

Speed is essential in fire fighting, and a convenient ladder makes any roof fire quickly accessible. Frequent use of ladders to inspect chimneys and flues might prevent many unnecessary losses, especially during the winter when fires are going.

Among small precautions other than convenient ladders are care in handling gasoline and kerosene, especially in kindling fires; careful disposal of hot ashes; care in using open fires and matches and in burning rubbish; repair of stoves, furnaces, fireplaces, flues, and chimneys not in first-class condition; and frequent inspection of electrical wiring and electrical appliances.

Observance of simple precautions, adequate water-storage facilities on every farm and at every rural home, with a well-manned fire truck at every cross-roads hamlet, is the Utopia at which Doctor Price hopes rural America will arrive.

In the meantime, one of his suggestions is, to paraphase, "A farm fireman's best friend is his ladder."

Modern Architecture

A British firm of instrument makers has turned out a metal instrument which can be used at the location of an unbuilt house to show which rooms will be sunny and which will not.

Some Plant Juices Poisonous

Juice of the common poinsettia is deadly. All juices from plants of this family are poisonous, and many of them are used in medicines, all powerful in action and dangerous to the layman. Seeds of the castor oil plant and of the "Jimson Weed," Datura stramonium, have proved fatal to humans and the juices of these and a dozen other common garden plants irritate the skin, as do even common things like pineapples, elephant's ears or taro, papaya and the hairs on Chinese primroses.

Boundaries Between Seasons

The dates of the equinoxes—that is, the dates of the sun's crossing of the equator—are approximately March 21 and September 22. The dates of the solstices—when the sun is farthest north or south, from the equator—are approximately June 21 and December 21. These positions of the sun are considered to mark the boundaries between the seasons. The time varies a little from year to year, and the season may begin a day earlier or later than the dates given.

Advantage of Paper Windows

Oriental children are less susceptible to rickets than Occidental ones because the paper windows in Chinese and Japanese homes transmit more ultra-violet light than window glass. The paper window panes are treated with tung oil, which enables them to transmit about 40 per cent of the ultra-violet light between 2,500 and 3,000 angstrom units, a region of the spectrum to which ordinary window glass is opaque.

Migrates Easily

Home to the coyote is wherever he digs his den. He migrates easily and upon slight provocation. Coyotes multiply rapidly. The litters are large, averaging five to seven puppies, which look much like young German police dogs. With the coyote's adaptability, shrewdness, boldness, and ability to multiply, it is possible they may eventually inhabit the entire United States.

CORRECTION

The time of services at the Reformed Church for Sunday should be 10:30 and 11:15 a. m. instead of the time as given in the notes on the front page.

PRIEBE FAMILIES WILL HOLD RE-UNION THIS FRIDAY

The Priebe relationship will meet at East Park at Mason City on Friday for a reunion and picnic dinner. A program will be given and a fine time is planned.

Garden of Eden Located on the Praslin Island?

The Garden of Eden, according to tradition, was located on one of the Seychelles islands—Praslin. Everything helps to bear out this legend, says a correspondent in the Detroit News. It is one of the loveliest places in all the world, exceeding even the beauty of Bali. There are many foods here to appeal to the appetite and they are nearly all ready-to-eat foods. Clothing is not a necessity, the islands being close to the Equator.

A fact which helps substantiate the claim that this was the original home of Adam and Eve, the paradise from which they were driven, is found in the coco de mer, a large nut which grows here and which, according to local tradition, was the Forbidden Fruit of the Bible. The coco de mer tree grows plentifully, reaching an average height of 150 feet and bearing nuts weighing up to 20 pounds.

All knowledge of these islands was lost for many centuries. They lie almost in the center of the Indian ocean, 1,000 miles due east of Mombasa, Africa, and were discovered in 1505. Pirates found them a safe haven to retire to. The outlaws of the sea grew so numerous here that female slaves were imported from Africa to minister to their wants, the pirates marrying them. Their descendants are the natives of today and they are a good-looking well-behaved race of people. Practically all are Christians.

Sealyham Terrier Breed Fighter, Authority Says

Just where the first Sealyham terrier was produced is shrouded in mystery. It is generally agreed that the breed came by its name in Wales and that it was a product of Welsh crossing. Those who developed the Sealyham were looking for a dog that would go into the ground after the badger, and in the Sealyham they got one which would fight his weight in wildcats at a word from his master, asserts an authority in the New York Herald Tribune. For this work, the originators sought a dog with short legs for ground work, and thick, heavy coat both as protection from the weather and the teeth of his opponents.

The Sealyham terrier is essentially a game dog. He was produced to go to ground after animals more than twice his weight, and he is not afraid of any other four-footed thing. Naturally, he is a good digger. His short muscular legs fairly make the dirt fly when he is sent into a burrow after game. It is these legs of which he is most careful when he comes up to his prey. He realizes that they are not only an extremely valuable asset but that they are his most vulnerable point when facing an enemy. Accordingly, he doubles them back under him, gradually edging forward until his strong teeth clamp on the enemy.

In Early California

Bancroft says that dancing was a passion of the early Californians; fiestas, picnics and balls were frequent; the fadangos were especially popular at San Diego. Dramatic performances were given to some extent, but serenading was common. Most Californians could play the vihuela or guitar. There was much interest in racing and it was common practice to race to church with oxen-drawn wagons containing the family. The stakes were money, stock, or balls. Carrera del Gallo, or cock fighting was a popular sport, as was also corrida de toros, or coursing of bulls. Bull fights were held on frequent occasions by skilled and practiced toreadors. The tekersie was a favorite game of the Indians. Billiards were introduced at Monterey in 1828.

Colonial National Monument

The Colonial National monument is an historical reservation, established in 1930, and administered by the national park service of the Department of the Interior. Its boundaries include James town Island, parts of the city of Williamsburg, Va., and the Yorktown battlefield, as well as the highways connecting these areas. The monument was established to preserve the historic structures and to commemorate the contributions of this area in the colonization and development of America.

Maxim Was Wise

Maxim, who, more than any other man, developed the machine gun, was in early manhood interested in chemistry and the then infant science of electricity. Ambitious, energetic, he was told by a friend how to make a pile of money. "Invent something," said this friend to Maxim, "something which will enable these Europeans to cut each other's throats with greater facility"—this was said more than 50 years ago.

World's Largest Carillon

At Bournville, England, the carillon installed in the tower of the village school, is the largest in the world. The bells originally numbered 22, but a local family of distinction made gifts of bells from time to time until the total has reached 48. The largest bell weighs over three tons, the smallest 12 pounds.

Old Cashmere Shawls

The wool which went into the fine old cashmere or India shawls was particularly fine and soft and taken from the changra or shawl goat, only about eight ounces being secured from a goat at a clip and from six to eight pounds required for the average shawl.

STANDING just inside the entrance of Hotel Christie—Plaza's Palace de Glace—Garrison carefully scanned the scene.

It was, he saw, a gala occasion—this opening of Hollywood's most novel play spot.

There, enclosed by a ring of supper tables, countless couples in sports costume skimmed over a gleaming floor of ice, while lilting music came from an orchestra at one end.

Watching the skaters, Garrison at last focused on a girl in scarlet sweater and skirt.

Rather, it was her partner he studied, for the girl was familiar enough. Myra Drexel, indeed, ranked as one of Zenith's most promising young actresses, and Garrison for some time had felt a keen professional interest in helping her to reach stardom.

The man with her was tall and gracefully slender, though somewhat past youth.

There was about his bearing an almost intangible touch of distinction.

Seeing the captain of waiters, Garrison called him over and asked: "Alphonse, just who is that chap skating with Miss Drexel?"

"Oh, that," Alphonse replied, "is the Baron Siegfried von Fleumann. He arrived from Munich today, I believe."

The publicity man's eyes narrowed.

"I see; thanks. By the way, which is Miss Drexel's table?"

The man pointed it out.

Garrison glimpsed a tow-headed figure in one of the two chairs, and smiled.

So Steve Crandall was second fiddling again!

That, he knew, wouldn't suit the lad's jealous temper, nor would the plan Garrison now had. However, that was just too bad.

He strolled over, clapped the blond man's shoulder, and said amiably:

"Hi, fella—how goes it?"

The other's response was a mere grunt.

Garrison grinned and sat down.

"Sure," he conceded, "I can imagine you're burned, but this'll have to be business before pleasure."

The youngster stared at him coldly.

"Meaning exactly what?"

"Well, are you aware who that bird hoofing Myra around happens to be?"

"No," Steve growled, "and I don't give a ting-diddle-dee. The big gigolo!"

"Listen, you egg: snap out of it and look at this thing seriously. That man is a genuine baron from Germany, no less. Now, everyone here must know it, including the newspaper crowd. Think of the write-ups they'll do if Myra and the Baron are together all evening and he takes her home!"

Steve's scowl was a venomous thing.

"Look here, Louts," he began, keeping his teeth together; "I'm not going to fall in with any of your cockeyed schemes, so—"

"Wait a minute, son," Garrison cut in easily; "loving Myra, you want her to have a career, don't you? Well, no one in this town ever reached the top without plenty of build-up in print, and here's your chance to help the girl get some. With her talent, that's all she needs now. How about it?"

For an instant the boy didn't reply.

Then he looked at Garrison and asked: "What do you want me to do?"

"Duck out of here. Then when the Baron brings her back, he'll either have to stay at this table or ask her to his. I'll take care of the rest."

Steve showed a bleak, one-sided smile and stood up.

"All right," he said tersely; "I'll play it your way. But that doesn't mean I have to like it."

As he stalked away, the music came to an end.

Hurriedly Garrison rose and went in the opposite direction.

Twenty yards away he took a vacant chair and waited.

Couples were gliding off the rink now; in a moment he discerned Myra Drexel and the Baron approaching.

Reaching her table, they paused and the girl glanced around perplexedly.

Then, with an apologetic little shrug, she said something to the man.

He bowed smilingly and pulled out her chair. Myra accepted it, and Baron Siegfried von Fleumann seated himself across from her.

The publicity man indulged a grin of thorough satisfaction.

On the room's other side sat a group of men and women from several of the city's papers, and Garrison knew they couldn't miss seeing the couple.

That would make press notice a certainty.

But one item remained to be arranged.

Unobstrusively he stole away toward a door which gave into the hotel proper.

Five minutes' searching found Luke Long, ace photographer for City News Service, at the cocktail bar.

Garrison greeted him and queried: "Where's your flash outfit?"

Long indicated a black case and a tripod at the counter's end.

"Well, grab 'em," the publicity man instructed, "and come along with me. We're going to get a pretty little picture for page one on all the afternoon rags."

Together they left the bar and headed for the Palais de Glace. At its entrance Garrison halted long.

They had a clear view of Myra and the Baron.

"They're the ones I'm after," the publicity man said, pointing; "and give that lens of your a polish. I want this to be good."

Long set to work deftly.

In fifteen seconds the camera was ready on its tripod.

He handed Garrison a loaded powder trough, took a quick slight, and announced: "All ready—let 'er go."

As Garrison prepared to touch the flash off, a violent jolt from behind sent it spinning from his hand.

Recovering balance, he saw a voluminous female figure in soiled gingham gown heading straight toward Myra Drexel's table.

Then, before he could move, she had planted herself in front of the Baron and launched a shrill tirade.

"You goot-for-noddings loafer!" she cried, wagging a vehement forefinger in his face; "vhy you shouldt be coming here to cut up foolitchnesses, hein? Maybe you tell your new lady friendt vhat you vas a big shoot, ja? Vell, yoost run along home and putd on dot janitor's uniform before I giff you a smack in der shnoot!"

The man's face had gone slowly magenta.

His jaw worked spasmodically, but only guttural Germanic sounds resulted.

Suddenly the woman seized both his shoulders and began to shake them violently.

People were quickly gathering around.

With an anguished moan Myra Drexel sprang up and started to push her way through them. Then out of the melee loomed Steve Crandall's flaxen head. Myra clutched him and buried her face on his shoulder.

"Oh, Stevie!" she murmured tearfully; "it's so awful! Why did you run away and leave me with that fake?"

The boy chuckled as he led her away.

"As I recall it, darling," he answered gently, "it was you who did the first leaving. But we won't worry about that now."

They went out through the lobby and waited a moment while the doorman called a cab.

As it drew to the curb, a figure emerged from a door near them and started to waddle hastily away. Steve called: "Good night, Kate—and thanks!"

Myra shrank closer to him, gasping:

"Why, it's that horrible wife of the man who pretended to be a baron!"

The taxi door was open. Piloting her in, Steve followed and took his seat before replying.

"My dear," he said then, smiling into the girl's upturned, wondering face, "that particular phase of the lady's existence is at an end. I was sure that in the excitement you wouldn't recognize Candy Kate, the woman who has that little stand on the corner. But say—can you feature it?—she staked that swell act for me for only five dollars, and the same accent gets Garbo five thousand!"

Fossils From Patagonia Brought to U. S. Museum

Bones of an extinct flesh-eating animal related to the kangaroo but much bigger than a grizzly bear, fossil frogs, remains of a totally new kind of fossil browsing animal five feet high, are among the scientific trophies brought back from South America to the American Museum of Natural History here, by Dr. George Gaylord Simpson, associate curator of vertebrate paleontology, says the Kansas City Star's Science Service.

Doctor Simpson and his associates made actual a semi-legendary "place of bones" deep in the interior of Argentina's "Wild South," Patagonia, as the result of a chance sight of a fossil jawbone in a bank in Buenos Aires. They went through adventures of an almost Marco Polo type, including a brief sojourn at the ranch of a veritable ogre of a bushy-eyebrowed killer known as the Terrible Turk, and passage through a land where the natives valued money at nothing, but would sell you anything you wanted for an empty tin can.

Finally, after disappointing searchings in the region to which they had been directed, they found, in a fissure-sided hill, a tremendous deposit of bones, believed to be one of the richest "fossil mines" ever discovered. The deposit appears to be the silted-up bottom of an ancient lake that formed in the crater of an extinct volcano. Apparently animals coming down to drink were overcome and killed by poisonous fumes from cracks in the earth, which were the dying gasps of the old volcano itself.

The bones were so thick, where they had been weathered out in the course of ages, that they cluttered the ground, and the explorers stumbled over them.

The big, hitherto unknown herbivorous animal they found has been named Scarrittia, in compliment to H. S. Scarritt, sponsor of the expedition.

The King's Barge

Lying at Virginia Water is a great scarlet and white State barge which has carried many of England's kings and queens. It is nearly 250 years old, and has not been used since 1919, when it headed a procession of boats in the Thames representing the work of the navy. Eight royal watermen wearing long scarlet coats, black velvet peaked caps, red breeches and buckled shoes propel the 40-foot barge. It was built by William III for his queen.—Pearson's Weekly.

Purkinje's Figures

In optics Purkinje's figures are figures produced on a wall of uniform color when a person entering a dark room with a candle moves it up and down approximately on a level with the eyes. From the eye near the candle an image of the retinal vessels will appear projected on the wall.

Modern Practices Aid to Dairymen

Get Rid of "Boarder" Stock; Supply Grain Feed Only to Producers.

By Prof. C. G. Bradt, New York State College of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Dairymen can expect greater profits from their cows if they follow practices of 700 dairyman who are members of farm bureau dairy record clubs.

They would keep fewer "boarder" cows; they would feed grain according to the cow's production; and they would improve their herds by methods which insure success in the shortest time.

In many ways the typical dairyman is ahead of dairymen in other states as far as methods are concerned. Dairying, however, holds promise of still greater profits if practices are still further improved.

Returns from 321 members of dairy record clubs show that these members are making steady progress in herd improvement. Seven hundred and nineteen "boarders," or cows that do not earn their keep, have been removed from these herds; 182 calves are being raised from dams that have produced more than 300 pounds of butterfat annually; and 82 per cent of dairy club members have pure-bred bulls. All of these practices mean higher-producing cows and greater profits in the near future.

Since the outlook for dairying has improved considerably, dairymen should lose no time in adjusting their business and their methods to reap the benefits of better times which dairy economists believe are in store for the dairy industry.

Two Raindrops in Dakota Equal to Three in Texas

Knowing the annual rainfall for any region is not enough to determine the effect of this climatic factor on crops. High temperatures the year around offset rainfall by increasing evaporation and decreasing the effectiveness of the moisture available for plants.

Thus an annual rainfall of 20 inches in North Dakota may be equivalent—in producing crops—to 30 inches in Texas, where the yearly evaporation is twice as great as near the Canadian border. The natural vegetation and crops characteristic of the humid East may be found as far west as the 90th meridian in the Dakotas and Nebraska, while in the states to the south this shift from humid to semi-arid crops takes place more nearly at the 97th meridian.

Of the four factors which usually determine what crops are to be grown—precipitation, temperature, soil, and topography—temperature is, of course, much the more important in the humid East and in a small area along the Pacific coast in Washington, Oregon, and northern California, while rainfall is the determining factor in the Great Plains and the western inter-Mountain section.

Grasshopper Bait

The bait for poisoning grasshoppers is made by adding sodium arsenate to a mixture of salt, bran, sawdust, molasses, water and banana oil. The most economical way to prepare the bait is to mix it in large enough quantities to feed large acreages and have farmers in that area share the expense of the ingredients and mixing. The poison bait should be scattered thinly over sod land soon after the hoppers hatch. They are killed by the poison before they move from the grass and before much damage has been done. The bait should be sown during the morning on warm sunny days. Ten pounds is enough to feed an acre but it is difficult to scatter that small amount. Birds, poultry and live stock will not pick up enough poison to injure them in any way.—Michigan State College.

Vaccinating Pigs

The best time to vaccinate pigs is right after weaning time. The amount of serum and virus necessary at that time for complete immunization is less than later on when the pigs are heavier. Some hog producers vaccinate at an earlier age with good results and lower cost, saws a writer in Prairie Farmer. Pigs should be kept off food for 12 hours before they are treated. After treating they should be fed lightly for a few days and permitted to run on clean pastures.

Life of Alfalfa Stand

The length of life of the alfalfa stand, if allowed to run its full course, depends largely upon the subsoil, says a writer in the Rural New-Yorker. Roots that penetrate deeply and make large development insure vigor and long life. When the roots stop development the top stops also and the stand soon disappears. Heavy soils that are fertile may grow a few crops of excellent alfalfa, but the success is short lived. Fertile soils are necessary for success with alfalfa.

Use of Power Machinery

When power machinery was introduced for wheat, farmers attempted to use it for grain sorghum, but the stalks were too tall to be cut successfully with the combine. Plant breeders then developed Wheatland, Sooner, and other dwarf varieties. Now the same machinery is used for wheat and the grain sorghums. A man with a team will harvest about an acre and a half to two acres a day by hand. A 15-foot combine, requiring two men, will harvest and thresh 20 to 25 acres.

Several have written to this column offering to let themselves be "frozen stiff and then returned to life" in the interest of science, as suggested by a Los Angeles chemist, R. S. Willard. They will be sorry to hear that the American Medical association calls Mr. Willard's alleged freezing "a vicious hoax."

Arthur Brisbane

It accuses Willard of freezing a dead monkey and then substituting a live one, supposed to have been frozen and thawed out.

Doctor Fishbein, editor of the American Medical Association Journal, says anybody frozen stiff would surely die.

It was an interesting yarn while it lasted.

New York's strike of union men against President Roosevelt, General Johnson and the WAP ("Works Progress administration") seems temporarily to have collapsed. Mr. Meany, New York labor leader, said all union men would go out and stay out and nonunion men would follow. The news is that the nonunion men did not follow, and the union men went back to work.

Robert Moses of the park department, who employs 25,000 workers on park projects, reports only 110 deserters.

An interesting photograph from Addis Ababa shows two servants of the Ethiopian emperor, riding on lions, one female, one male, in the palace garden. The emperor's lions are trained in this fashion for use as "watch dogs." You can easily believe that intruders "keep out."

For war purposes, however, lions are not particularly valuable. Tear gas and deadly poisonous gas would discourage the lions, as they would men, and lions cannot jump as high as an airplane.

In Chicago's stockyards half the hog pens are closed, prices are soaring, men have lost jobs, all for lack of hogs to push around and butcher. The yards are suffering.

And only a little while ago an earnest government, determined to help the farmer and promote prosperity, was butchering tens of thousands of "farrow sows" to get rid of them before their little pigs could be born. "Too many little pigs will make too many big pigs," said the government.

You can imagine the ghosts of a million pigs floating over the stockyards, squeaking in their baby voices, "We told you so."

War talk continues. Mussolini announces a new air weapon "overwhelmingly powerful," but does not say what it is. Plain TNT and poison gas are powerful enough.

Hitler, announcing that his country is "ready to meet any outside peril," adds: "No power on earth can attack us." That seems a little overconfident.

A prosaic financial telegram suggests that the public debt of Germany has been increased by 20,000,000,000 marks. That might represent an interior enemy of considerable proportions.

Uncle Sam, with all his spending, makes a little something for himself. His money-issuing privileges, paper dollars worth about 50 cents, and silver coins containing less than half their value in silver, have given the treasury a profit of about $3,000,000,000.

And at this moment it does not appear to have hurt anybody. Who understands money?

Stocks are better, prices higher, in London and in Wall Street. The London Daily Mail says: "A stock exchange boom seems to do more for world trade than anything. The reason is that it gives confidence everywhere."

Strange and powerful is "confidence." You cannot see it, feel it, weigh it, but you can easily destroy it.

Lovely woman, led by Paris fashion designers, is still trying to find out what she really wants. Universal Service dispatches from Paris describe "dresses as transparent as lace curtains from the knee down; skin-tight evening gowns with cut-out designs as big as elm leaves from under the arms to the hip-line. Cape coats of white fur, slit wide open on both sides." One gown is made entirely of "plaited gold braid."

When will women settle down finally to some one style, as men have done?

Interesting items in taxation news. For instance, government will collect income tax on "public relief." If your generous Uncle Sam gives you $94 a month, the amount that unions now spurn, he will take back $13.12 in income tax.

That seems like giving your little boy a stick of candy and biting off the end of it.

DIETARY HABITS NEED FOSTERING EARLY IN CHILD

Nothing is quite so important to health as food. The wellbeing of a child depends on it, and his future stamina will reflect nutritive discrepancies in babyhood.

The mother who thinks that there is time enough ahead for corrective diet is laboring under a traditional delusion that up until two years of age and sometimes longer, milk is the sum total of everything.

Milk is the warp and the woof of what it takes to get through life, and especially at its beginning. But it needs supplementing, because its chemistry is low in a few needed essentials and the child, set in his all-milk diet, resists other foods.

Doctors Prescribe Varied Foods.

Doctors long ago recognized the value of adding other foods to the diet of milk, early in babyhood, in order to offset future finicky appetites. Thus the infant of six weeks gets his cod-liver oil and orange juice or tomato juice; a little later a spoonful or two of prepared vegetable juice or even the strained vegetable itself. At a period that in the past would have been considered murderous he gets his bit of cereal, part of the yolk of an egg, a snack of baked potato and mashed stewed fruit.

Whatever today's baby is given, should, of course, be absolutely under the doctor's direction. There is a difference in babies.

But the great truth that many mothers do not know is that children with touchy appetites at six or eight or ten years of age, are the results of fixed preference in babyhood.

Caution Must Be Exercised.

Another thing that should be remembered is that as milk must be the alpha and omega of his meal, therefore the amounts of other food given must not be so great that the willingness to take milk is decreased.

The doctor will give you lists and schedules for feeding. My suggestions here are only for one purpose. That is to show "why" and "how" aversions to needed foods are started. Food habits, which mean flavor habits, have to be cultivated early.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

National Topics Interpreted

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—A plainly worded and simple announcement forthcoming the other day from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, presented one of the sharpest reverses in policy yet promulgated under the New Deal. Dozens of experiments have been tried out since President Roosevelt came into office and almost as many have run their course and have been abandoned. Many of them were tried out with high enthusiasm but the enthusiasm died long before the recently created agencies themselves went out of existence. Such was not the case, however, in the instance to which I refer because the simple announcement by the AAA resulted in the addition of 5,200,000 acres to the wheat planting area of the United States for the 1936 crop.

Will Plant More Wheat

Not alone did this announcement represent a change in administration agricultural policy. If one is to believe the undercurrent of information available around Washington, one cannot escape the conclusion that the increase in wheat acreage to be authorized represented something of an answer to the protests, even boycotts, that have been evidenced in many sections of the country against an increased cost of living.

It is unnecessary to repeat here how hundreds of women have boycotted meat markets in Detroit and how one delegation after another in other sections of the nation have written or telegraphed to the Department of Agriculture or to their representatives and senators in congress in complaint against the high and ever increasing food prices.

Of course, boycotts and riots and demonstrations are rather silly. They just don't get anywhere successfully. About the only result one ever sees flowing from that sort of activity is a lot of publicity.

So, when Secretary Wallace and Agricultural Adjustment Administrator Davis agreed to raise the wheat acreage from 85 to 95 per cent of the available acreage for the next crop, the consensus was that the administration felt it might have gone too far in its crop reduction program. Probably all restrictions will be lifted on hogs very soon because hog prices have sailed higher than a kite and the shortage of available live stock for packing has come to be almost appalling. Certainly, the city dwellers who constitute a big element in the market for pork products regard the shortage as appalling and they are not to be appeased by any promises from Washington.

More Hogs Comes Next

Secretary Wallace was rather angered at published newspaper accounts from various cities to the effect that the AAA program was responsible for the high prices. He insisted that the drouth of last year was responsible and that the destruction of several hundred thousand sows and several million pigs had not affected the market situation at the present time.

But Mr. Wallace's statements did not go over so well. In the first instance the bulk of the city dwellers simply will not believe that the drouth had resulted in killing off a sufficient number of hogs and cattle to cause the current high prices. In the second place, wiseacres around Washington who have a habit of blurting out their thoughts without regard to feelings of others, promptly inquired what good had come from the AAA corn-hog control program if the drouth alone was responsible for the price increase. These same individuals were mean enough to inquire also why some experts in the Department of Agriculture had released statements to the press to the effect that meat prices, especially pork, will continue to skyrocket until the summer of 1936. They pointed out that a great shortage in supplies existed and that it was to be expected the upward trend would continue until a new crop of hogs of packing size is marketed next year.

Then, we here in Washington heard suggestions from men whose job it is to understand market conditions in which imports of pork products were predicted for the forthcoming winter. Now, importation of any commodity does not take place unless the domestic supply is short of the requirements. Thus, crop control program or no crop control program, drouth effects or no drouth effects, it is possible that this, one of the greatest hog producing nations in the world, may witness substantial imports of a food item for which it has always been noted as a producer.

As regards the reversal of form in the wheat control program, Mr. Wallace said in his announcement that the increase had been authorized "primarily to assure domestic consumers of continued ample wheat supplies." He said that the wheat carried over this year was about 152,000,000 bushels and that on the basis of present estimates of production for next year it seemed advisable "to use the flexibility of the Agricultural Adjustment Act at this time to provide for somewhat larger production to assure adequate supplies of all types of milling wheat."

Explains Reversal

In theory, of course, the AAA control plan should permit production of sufficient wheat next year to take up the slack of left over requirements and should have the effect of maintaining American stocks at about normal. But, in practice, a different result is threatening. This nation always has exported a considerable amount of wheat. It has, therefore, had some influence in the world market and to that extent has influenced the domestic price. It happens, however, that the world wheat crop ahead of us is likely to be smaller than usual. If the United States had the wheat, it is pointed out variously, there could be a considerable return to the farmers from the export market. As it stands, possibilities of taking advantage of that situation just do not exist.

Without further reference to the practical operation of this theory, some experts have mentioned to me the fact that the 1936 American crop may not be as good as in times past. Then, not only will the American farmers be unable to take advantage of a foreign market, but they will not obtain the maximum return possible for their domestic sales because of their own shortage.

In answer to this, AAA officials point out they can use the flexibility of the Agricultural Adjustment Act as a benefit to the farmers. Their view of the situation is that the American wheat industry will be in a strong position, due to the shortage of world wheat, and can again exert its influence.

The divergent opinions of those who favor crop control and those who think the theory will not work have created many arguments even among officials. There are those who think only of the farmer's position and there are those who think only of the plight in which the city dwellers finds themselves when prices are high. The whole thing, when simmered down, is simply another way of stating the age-old problem in which we find on the one hand those who produce the food and on the other those who eat it. Adoption of the principle of crop control has not solved that problem nor does it hold any prospect of solving it. It seems to me as a matter of cold judgment that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is not any more fair with the people as a whole than are those who promote boycotts or seek to tear down gains made by agriculture. The department officials have given out statements carrying only their side of the case. Those who attack higher prices have made only their side of the argument. Neither has added much to the sum total of human knowledge or human comfort.

The New Deal plans for giving employment may not have been so effective outside of Washington, but no one can question the result in so far as the federal pay roll is concerned. Late figures reveal that since President Roosevelt came into office more than 150,000 persons have been added to the federal list of employees. The total of workers on federal pay rolls in the executive branch of the government at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, was 717,712, whereas the total was 566,986 at the end of March, 1933—the end of the first month after Mr. Roosevelt took office. It has always been the claim of political parties that "to the victor belong the spoils." It is true under the Roosevelt administration to a remarkable degree. This is shown by the fact that the civil service list of employees in the federal government has gained very few while those appointed to jobs without the necessity of passing a civil service examination account for the bulk of the new workers.

Federal Pay Roll Grows

Much of the New Deal legislation has carried specific provisions that employees in the particular agency created by the bill in question could be appointed without "regard to the civil service law." That is the simple expedient used to provide spoils for the victor.

But these new thousands are not at all secure in their jobs as distinguished from basic reason why a great many persons seek federal appointment through civil service examinations. An employee who has passed an examination and has received an appointment is supposed to be fairly secure in his job and as long as he does the work assigned to him there is scant possibility of him being ousted. This is not true of the political appointees. If and when there is a change of administration and a political party of opposite faith takes the reins, the workers who came in by reason of political plums have little chance of staying on the job. Consequently, one fequently hears around Washington now discussion as to what will happen to all of these new workers if New Deal agencies blow up or Mr. Roosevelt should fail of re-election.

Mussolini Won't Give Up His Ethiopian Adventure

MUSSOLINI is determined to conquer Ethiopia, and all Europe is trembling. Il duce evidently feels that his personal prestige is at stake, and to him that means the continuation of the Fascist regime. Anthony Eden and Pierre Laval offered Italy what would amount to a mandate over Haile Selassie's realm, but that was not enough, so the tri-power conference in Paris was declared adjourned. The friendship between France and Italy must be ruptured. Great Britain will insist on action by the League of Nations council when it meets September 4. There is no reason to believe that the council will do more than it did in the case of Japan's seizure of Manchuria, but it seemingly will be forced to denounce Italy's action, and that would be enough to induce Mussolini to withdraw his country from the league. If and when Italy defies the league, that pretentious body, previously defied successfully by Japan and Germany, will amount to little. No wonder the statesmen of Europe are jittery.

Baron Aloisi

One high French official was quoted as saying that Europe "faces a crisis like that of 1914," and he admitted that "France must resign herself to losing Italy's friendship." Others in Paris declared that France is now solidly with England.

After Baron Pompei Aloisi had submitted the Anglo-French proposition to Mussolini and had received the duce's reply, he told Eden and Laval that his master would be satisfied with nothing less than "annexation of Ethiopia in whole or in part." Laval was furious and directly accused Mussolini of breaking a personal promise made to him when he visited Rome. Eden abruptly brought the conference to a close.

In Addis Ababa the high priests of Ethiopia conducted a solemn service, in the presence of the emperor, praying for liberty and for deliverance from war with Italy. The head of the church said: "God will confound our enemies, will break their hearts and shatter their staves in their hands." And in every church in the threatened country the natives gathered and repeated these prayers. But in Italy Benito Mussolini was telling his fighting men, as they departed for Africa, to disregard everything but their duty to make war. Said he:

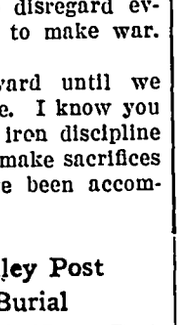
"We are going forward until we achieve a Fascist empire. I know you will do your duty with iron discipline and will not hesitate to make sacrifices until all our goals have been accomplished."

Will Rogers and Wiley Post Brought Home for Burial

WILL ROGERS and Wiley Post, crushed to death in Alaska when their plane fell not far from Point Barrow, were brought back to the states for burial by Joe Crosson, their intimate friend, in an airplane. And all their countrymen stood figuratively with bared and bowed heads as the broken bodies were laid to rest. None was too great and none too lowly to pay tribute in words and action to those two fine Americans, one a beloved comedian, humorist and philosopher; the other a leader among the world's aviators. They died as they had lived, adventuring gallantly, and the world is the poorer for their passing.

Push President's Program Through to Passage

SENATOR ROBINSON and other Democratic leaders in congress went into a huddle with President Roosevelt on the legislative situation and the possibilities of an adjournment within a week or ten days. They emerged with the knowledge that the Chief Executive still insisted on the passage of his "must" list of bills. These measures were said to be:



Sen. Robinson

The utilities bill, the tax measure, the Guffey coal stabilization bill, the ban against damage suits against the government because of its gold policy, alcohol control, Tennessee Valley Authority act amendments, a bill to impose NRA labor standards on firms which contract with the government, rivers and harbors legislation, the third deficiency bill, the oil regulation measure to ratify state compacts made at Dallas, railroad reorganization legislation.

Compromises on both the utilities bill and the tax measure were being worked out. The former, it was reported, would direct the federal power commission to decide which companies should be eliminated, but would leave wide avenues through which the companies could carry to the court their fight against dissolution.

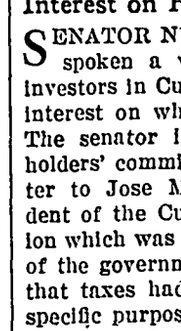
About two weeks ago, it is revealed, the Roper council, composed of some 40 business leaders, sent to the President a report urging strongly that the tax bill be deferred until the January session of congress, so that there might be time for the formulation of a carefully considered tax program. The council included a defense of holding companies, asserting they have played an important part in the country's growth and "should not be ruthlessly destroyed." This document was pigeonholed at the White House, which was highly displeasing to the members of the council though they should by this time be used to that treatment of their work.

Victor Over New Dealer Takes His Seat in House

WHEN Charles S. Risk, the Rhode Island lawyer who defeated the New Deal candidate for congress recently, entered the house on the arm of Representative Bertrand H. Snell, Republican leader, and was escorted to the speaker's rostrum to take the oath, he was vociferously greeted by the Republicans as a hero whose victory they thought presaged great things for the party next year. Mr. Risk took his seat on his thirty-eighth birthday.

Republicans Make Awkward Demands in Lobby Probe

MINORITY members of the senate and house committees that are investigating the doing of lobbyists started out the week with the determination to find out why Marvin H. MacIntyre, secretary to the President; Lawrence W. Robert, Jr., assistant secretary of the treasury, and Amon G. Carter of Fort Worth, publisher and friend of the Roosevelt family, were all found in the apartment at the Shoreham hotel of Bernard B. Robinson of Chicago, chief lobbyist of the Associated Gas and Electric company. Mr. Robinson himself also was there, and it was said when the door was opened at the knock of the sergeant at arms of the senate a "scene of revelry" was disclosed. For a day or two the news of this affair was not sent out from Washington by the news associations, reportedly because of the efforts of Mr. Carter to have it suppressed entirely. This, too, some of the investigators want explained.



B. B. Robinson

Republican members of the house committee also said they would insist on the interrogation of Undersecretary of the Interior Charles West and Emil Hurja, executive director of the Democratic national committee. West is reputedly the President's lobbyist and Hurja acts in a similar capacity for Postmaster General Farley, and both of them were involved with Tom Corcoran in the utilities "death sentence" lobbying that started the whole inquiry.

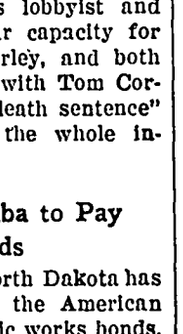
Nye Admonishes Cuba to Pay Interest on Her Bonds

SENATOR NYE of North Dakota has spoken a word for the American investors in Cuban public works bonds, interest on which has been defaulted. The senator is chairman of a bondholders' committee and he wrote a letter to Jose Manuel Casanova, president of the Cuban social-economic union which was in Washington as guests of the government. Mr. Nye contended that taxes had been collected for the specific purpose of meeting these obligations, and continued:

"If your government were financially unable to pay our citizens the interest that is rightfully due them on the $40,000,000 they invested in Cuban public works bonds, we should give sympathetic consideration to such a situation. But this is not the case."

Wheat Acreage Reduction Put at 5 Per Cent in 1936

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wallace has changed his mind about the reduction of wheat acreage for 1936. Instead of asking the farmers for a cut of 15 per cent, as was announced recently, the figure is now placed at 5 per cent.



Sec'y Wallace

Wallace told reporters that the change was decided upon after the government's August 1 survey of crop conditions indicated that total wheat production this year would amount to only 608,000,000 bushels as compared with domestic requirements of 635,000,000 bushels.

The step was taken, he asserted, to assure ample supplies for domestic consumers. He said that it was expected to place the country in a "strengthened position" in the export market. He added the change in policy will not result in any marked reduction in benefit payment to farmers. He did not say what the exact reductions in the payments would amount to.

Lobby Probers Quarrel Over Witness Hopson

RIVALS in the matter of publicity, the house and senate committees on the activities of lobbyists got into a tangle that certainly didn't enhance their dignity. Howard C. Hopson, the long sought head of the Associated Gas and Electric Utilities system, permitted the emissary of the house committee to find him, and Senator Hugo Black flew into a rage and had his committee threaten Hopson with contempt proceedings unless he appeared before it. Chairman O'Connor of the house body was angered by this and declared: "Hopson is in my custody. I've got him. Nobody else has got him. Nobody else is going to get him."

H. C. Hopson

The elusive, chunky utilities magnate told the house committee about his various companies and related the saga of his travels while he was being sought. But he politely refused to answer questions concerning the sources and amount of his income. He testified that he "believed" the Associated Gas system had spent "eight or nine hundred thousand dollars" in opposition to the Wheeler-Rayburn utility control bill.

"That's just a small fraction of the $300,000,000 equity in our companies which would be destroyed if the bill becomes law and remains law," he declared.

Late in the day Hopson calmly walked into Black's committee room and asked: 'Is some one here looking for me?" Black and his committee then questioned the utilities man for an hour or two and got mighty little out of him except smooth sarcasm that made the chairman quite furious.

Schacht Scolds Nazis for the Persecution of Jews

DR. HJALMAR SCHACHT, economic dictator of Germany, is a brave man. Once more he has dared to speak out strongly in reprobation of the Nazi persecution of the Jews in the reich, and of those who are attacking Christian churches. He declared such individuals were doing great injury to Germany's economic condition and retarding her recovery, and this is especially his interest as he is president of the Reichsbank as well as minister of economics. His strictures were applied to Julius Streicher, chief Jew-baiter, and Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, though he mentioned no names.

"There are certain contemporaries of whom one can think only with the prayer in mind, 'O Lord, preserve us from our friends,'" Schacht asserted scathingly. "These are the people who at nights heroically smear paint on shop windows, who brand every German who buys from a Jewish shop a traitor, who call all former Free Masons scoundrels, and who are unable to distinguish between religion and the abuse of the pulpit.

"Their aims are worthy. Secret societies have no right to exist in the third reich. Pastors and priests must minister to the soul and not dabble in politics. Jews must resign themselves to a realization that their influence is broken in Germany once and for all.

"But all these problems must be solved under the guidance of the state and cannot be settled through sporadic actions which seriously disturb business.

"It is absolutely essential for the offices responsible for German recovery that the world keep faith in Germany as the state in which law is respected. According to point four of the Nazi program, Jews cannot be citizens. Point five of the program provides that special legislation be prepared for them. This legislation is being worked out. Until it is published, existing laws must be respected.

"The same attitude applies to the church problem, which is of definitely greater importance to Germany than the Jewish question."

Just before this speech was delivered, Streicher had ordered his henchmen to arrest on the spot all Jews seen in public with German girls, and directed the vendors of his newspaper to investigate in their areas and report all "Aryan" domestic servants who are working for Jews. This information he promised to publish, with names and addresses.

FDIC Reveals Great Losses Written Off by Banks

FROM the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation comes a report showing that in 1934 the banks of the country wrote off their books a total of $1,131,000,000 in losses accumulated during the depression. The FDIC added that this was made possible because the banks received $650,000,000 net in new capital, which was supplied largely by the government's Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Despite these losses, the FDIC figures disclosed, the banks' assets rose from $40,610,000,000 to $47,370,000,000 during 1934, and that deposits increased from $31,300,000,000 to "about $39,000,000,000."

A belief that deposit insurance is not a cure-all was expressed by Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the FDIC, in his report to congress. He said insurance is "not a complete remedy for the ills of the banking system" nor for unstable business conditions. He added that a chief controlling factor with regard to these conditions will be "general economic conditions and monetary and credit developments."

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ellers and daughter, and Everett Buskirk, who had been visiting at the Fred Kluckhohn home, left Thursday for their home at Remington, Indiana. Mr. Ellers is a brother of Mrs. Kluckhohn.

Howard Wiles and family and Mrs. Sarah Behringer, of Yaukeshau, Wis., who had been visiting with Mrs. Hulda Wiles and Klemme friends, left for Des Moines Thursday to spend a few days visiting before returning to their home at Waukeshau.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hoffman and two sons, of Muskegan, Michigan, came Friday evening for a visit with Klemme relatives and friends. The Hoffman family resided on a farm near Klemme several years ago, moving away from the community some 14 or 15 years ago.

Dr. E. G. Schaeffer and bride, the former Miss Florence Wilson, returned to Klemme Sunday from their week's honeymoon spent at Lake Okoboji. Dr. and Mrs. Schaeffer have an apartment at the Wellemeyer Building and they are getting their home in readiness for housekeeping.

Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Dulmes, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Waterman and daughter, Marian, returned Sunday afternoon from their trip to Colorado, where they visited Estes Park, Denver, Colorado Springs and the Garden of the Gods. They drove across Kansas and spent Saturday afternoon to Sunday forenoon visiting with the Hugh Chapman family at Kansas City. Their trip covered a distance of over 2,000 miles and they were gone a week.

Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch and family returned Friday from their visit with relatives and friends at Menno, South Dakota. Rev. Grosshuesch reports that the small grain crop around Menno was good this year, but that a lot of corn has been damaged by hot winds which fired it. Menno and vicinity was hard hit by the drouth last year, but the farmers around there are feeling much better this year because they have plenty of feed for their livestock.

The individual who has any conscientious scruples that he cannot readily overcome had better refrain from taking up politics as a vocation.

A local philosopher figures it out that about the only thing that can happen to a man that would be worse than being talked about would be to be completely ignored.

A sign by the side of the road as you enter a western town reads: "4,076 people died last year of gas. 29 inhaled it; 37 put a lighted match to it and 4,000 stepped on it."

The open air crank should take up aviation. He'll get all the open air he can stand a good deal quicker than he can by using his sleeping porch.

The Klemme man interested in putting his money into a going concern should make sure which way it is going.

AVERY HAS RETURN SHOWING OF "NAUGHTY MARIETTA"

Owing to the many demands for a reshowing of "Naughty Marietta" that played at the Avery some time ago, Manager Marks has arranged to bring back this greatest of musicals for one day, Thurs., Sept. 5th.

"Naughty Marietta" is the finest singing picture ever made, and with the glorious singing of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, it is conceded to be the grandest picture to come out of Hollywood this season. Thrill to the wonderful music of victor Herbert and to the songs that will thrill you: "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "I'm Falling In Love With Some One," "'Neath the Southern Moon," "Italian Street Song," and "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp."

If you have seen the picture, see it again. If you have missed it, now is your chance to see the finest picture ever flashed on the screen.

KLEMME STREETS RESEMBLE BATTLE FIELD

The streets of Klemme are beginning to look like a shell-torn no-man's-land as workmen are digging ditches and laying water pipes and sewer pipes and getting ready for the paving. The work of installing copper water pipes and sewer connections to each lot on Main Street will be pushed right along as the paving will be put in this fall.

The Town Council have passed ordinances pertaining to this work and the ordinance is published this week.

A New Town Ordinance

ORDINANCE NO. 33

An Ordinance prescribing and regulating the manner of connection with water mains in the Town of Klemme and prescribing penalties for the violation.

Be it Ordained by the Council of the Town of Klemme, Iowa:

Section One

That all connections with the water main on Main Street in all lots in blocks seven, eight, nine, ten and eleven in the Original Town of Klemme, Iowa, shall be made with copper water pipes from the water main to the curb line and all fittings and connections shall be of copper. That any connections now made of any other material than as herein provided shall, within ten days from this date, be removed and replaced with copper water pipe, connections and fittings from the water main to the curb line as herein provided.

Section Two

That each lot in said blocks named in Section 1 thereof, shall be separately connected with the water main to the curbing line within ten days from this date.

Section Three

That from and after the adoption of this Ordinance that all connections hereafter made with the water mains in said Town of Klemme, shall be of copper water pipe with all copper connections and fittings.

Section Four

Be it further ordained that the copper connections on the lots included in block seven to eleven both inclusive, as defined in Sections 1 and 2 hereof, shall be made within ten days from this date, and that notice substantially in the following form shall be given to the owners of the lots described in Sections 1 and 2 hereof, towit:

"Notice is hereby given that the Council of the Town of Klemme by Ordinance duly adopted on the 2nd day of September, 1935, ordered that all service connections with the water mains in blocks seven to eleven both inclusive in the Original Town of Klemme, Iowa, shall be re-placed with copper water pipes, connections and fittings from the main to the curb line, in accordance with specifications on file in the office of the Clerk. Unless said connection is re-constructed or re-placed within the time and manner specified and of the material specified the Council will cause the same to be done and the costs and expense thereof, will be assessed against said lots.

"Further notice is given that a separate connection must be made for each lot and that the work of re-placement of said connection must commence not later than four days from the date of service of this notice and be completed not later than ten days from the date of service of this notice.

"Dated at Klemme, Iowa, this 4th day of September, 1935.

J. E. Stille, Mayor

Attest: A. J. Kudje, town clerk"

Section Five

That the foregoing notice shall be served by either regsitered mail at the last known Post Office address of the owner of the lot or lots in the blocks described in Sections 1 and 2 hereof, or by personal service by the Marshall of said Town.

Section Six

That if any person served with such notice shall fail to comply with this Ordinance and said notice within the time as herein provided, that the Town Council shall proceed with the said work and cost thereof, shall be assessed to the lot or lots to which such connection was made, and the Clerk shall thereafter certify the cost thereof to the County Auditor of Hancock County Iowa, for collection in the same manner as is provided by law for the certification and collection of special assessments.

Section Seven

Be it further ordained that any person, firm or corporation who shall fail to make said connection as herein provided, or shall violate this ordinance shall be fined upon conviction in the sum of not less than twenty-five dollars and costs prosecution. This ordinance shall be in force and effect from and after its passage and publication as provided by law.

The foregoing Ordinance was passed, approved and adopted by the Town Council and signed by the Mayor this 2nd day of September, 1935.

J. E. STILLE, Mayor

Attest: A. J. KUDJE, Town Clerk

PROPER WINTER STORAGE FOR VEGETABLES IS IMPORTANT

To keep for winter use such vegetables as can be stored, it is necessary to provide proper storage space and careful handling. In the home there is no better storage place than the cellar without a furnace. Furnace heated houses are not suuitable places unless a special cellar room or cave is prepared. Unless a temperature of 40 degrees or less can be secured for most of the storage period it is not wise to attempt storing many vegetables.

Potatoes Should Not Freeze

Potatoes are best stored in covered barrels or bins rather than in orates or shallow piles. No potato should be more than 4 feet from the air and earth should be kept out of them. The vegetable must be kept absolutely dark to prevent greening, it must not be allowed to freeze, and storage spaces should not be too dry nor too well ventilated.

Cabbage is fit for storing only if it is a late variety. If the outer leaves are left and the cabbage wrapped in paper it helps to keep crisp. For use after Christmas most cabbage is best stored frozen solid in a pit.

Onions need to be thoroughly cured when harvested, dryness being a first requisite for storage. They should be kept cold. For best storage results the onions should be topped about 1½ inches long.

Beets, turnips, winter radishes and carrots store best in sand in cellars, pits or caves, or in tightly covered boxes or crocks. It is important to keep them cold and to prevent evaporation.

Keep Squashes On Shelves

Squashes, sweet potatoes and pumpkins must be well ripened, cured and free from bruises. They are best kept on shelves in a very dry place.

Parsnips, parsley, vegetable oysters (salsify) and horseradish may be kept in the ground where grown all winter, but since alternate freezing and thawing destroy them, they should be covered lightly until severe weather, uncovered to freeze solid and then covered again.

Celery may be rooted n earth in a cellar or cave, and with occasional watering may be kept until about Christmas.

LEONARD LAU TELLS OF TRIP TO IOWA DEAF CONVENTION

Early Wednesday morning, Aug. 21, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Lau, accompanied Mr Palmer Lee, of Kensett, to Davenport, where they attended a convention of the Iowa Deaf Association.

They stopped at Keystone, 35 miles west of Davenport, and enjoyed dinner at the farm home of a former schoolmate. In the late afternoon they arrived in Davenport and registered at the Black Hawk hotel where the headquarters of the I. A. D. was held. Here they met a number of former acquaintances who live on the Pacific coast.

The thirteenth triennial convention of the association was formally opened Thursday with invocation given by Rev. Grace, prominent deaf minister of Denver. Message of welcome from the city of Davenport was extended by the city attorney. Responses were given by 2 deaf members.

Mrs. Petra Howard, Minnesota State Labor Commissioner of the Deaf, spoke on the subject "What are our Industrial Problems?" She has the large burden of placing the deaf persons in positions in factories and offices. She advised that vocational departments of schools for the Deaf should keep in close contact with the industrial concerns in order to offer the pupils the proper training. A general discussion followed her address.

Mr. Tom Anderson, vocational principal of the Iowa School for the Deaf, gave an interesting talk on "Standards." He then told of the progress made in the Council Bluffs school. That evening seven reels of film were shown picturing the advanced departments at the school.

A banquet, boat ride and sight seeing trips in Rock Island and Davenport were arranged by the committee.

On the way home they stopped to see the Amana colonies and visited at Ames with a school mate who has a position at the college there.

They found the trip well worth while and hope to be at the next convention in Des Moines in 1937.

Garner Won Over Williams In Afternoon Base Ball Game

Klemme's Big Celebration Day has now passed into history. The day was ideal and an estimated crowd of over 4,000 people were in Klemme.

The streets were well lined with concessions of all types, some of which did a good business, while others found slow pay.

In the afternoon Garner defeated the Williams baseball team in an exciting game which ended with Garner leading 8 to 5.

A full program of street sports and contests interested a large number of people. The early evening program included an exhibition drill by the Garner Junor Legion Drum and Bugle Corps. They put on a half hour of entertainment that was one of the best attractions on the program. Bethke's Little German Band next held the attention of the crowd and their quaint musical numbers were greatly enjoyed. The free talking pictures and the open air dance both attracted big crowds.

The Klemme Band and free street acts provided entertainment during the forenoon and afternoon.

Goodell held their celebration on Monday but struck a rather poor day as the weather was bad with a rain in the morning and another rain in the evening.

What Do We Mean by "America"?

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

OU'RE going to hear plenty in the 1936 election campaigns about "what America wants" and "what America needs." These are phrases which roll off a political orator's tongue like peas off a boarding house knife.

It takes all kinds of people to make a nation. Left: Nearly 5,000,000 Americans are criminals, but more than 4,000,000 are at large. Center: Probably 20,000,000 are on the dole. Right: Only 46 persons have a million-dollar income.

ng conditions of the great mass ,000,000 on relief are certainly below standard, but these condi- vary greatly with the geography country. To people on relief issippi or Arkansas, the living rds of relief families in Chicago, York or one of the other larger would look pretty good. The group is equal in the condition has been parted from all valu- possessions.

search conducted by the PWA that 36 per cent of all the hous- the United States is "definitely ndard." In some southern states, the share cropper and his ill lot familiar figure, there are many of 10 or 12 persons living in s of one or two rooms.

Relief Standards Are Poor.

1930 any apartment in Chicago rented for less than $30 a month likely to be far below standard, with such a thing as a bath tub regarded as a luxury, and with rooms having no outside window a commonplace. Yet at that time nearly one-fourth of all housing in Chicago rented for less than $30 a month and nearly one-tenth for less than $20.

Not all relief families live by such standards, of course, but those who don't are the exception—rehabilitated farm families, for example. But it may be said that at best all relief living is subsistence living or less, and that malnutrition is common and starvation sometimes existent.

A large portion of the farm families of course fall into the class which have a yearly income of less than $2,000. Since the farmer is able to raise much of what he and his family eat, this income would be proportionately greater than the same income for a city family.

Yet that would be speaking of the average in the class. It must be remembered that individuals in each one of these class groups vary with amazing difference. In the southern Appalachians, even in the golden year 1929, there were 52 counties where the annual income per farm person was less than $100—and even this is an average! These people, too, must be considered when we speak of "what America needs"—yet they, with their primitive methods and manners, belong to the Eighteenth century more than to the Twentieth.

More than 10,000,000 of the 49,000,000 gainfully employed persons in 1930 were employed in agriculture. Most of these fall below the $2,000 line. In fact in only a few farm counties was income equal to that in industrial areas.

Thirty Million on Farms.

Some light may be thrown on the living status of the farmer today when it is cited that even in Iowa 62 per cent of all the farmers are tenants. The tenant-farmer situation in the South, with its desperate plight of the share-cropper, who lives at the very lowest ebb of subsistence standards, has been widely publicized of late.

When the political orator says "we, the people," he includes, whether he knows it or not, 30,000,000 persons who are dependent upon farming for a living. How do these people live? The facts may surprise you.

If the figures compounded by Morris L. Cooke, head of the Rural Electrification administration are correct, 25,000,000 of these people have derived little benefit from the inventions and the advances of science which are said to have so much bettered our living standards in recent years.

Here is what he claims to have found out: That 93 per cent of all persons who make their living from the soil have neither bath tub nor shower. That 76 per cent are still lighting their homes with either gasoline or kerosene or less efficient means; that 10 per cent of this figure either use candles or go without artificial light. That 73 per cent have to carry water from wells or other sources of supply. That 33 per cent use fireplaces in heating their homes.

These estimates seem to have been substantiated by another government bureau, the PWA, whose research men say that between 75 and 80 per cent of all farm homes have no modern conveniences whatever. It is safe to say that all of such homes fall below the $2,000 income.

Now we come to another group, and in the transition it is well to remind ourselves that there is bound to be some duplication in segregating the various classes.

Six Kinds of Workers.

The census bureau divides all workers into six classes—professional persons, proprietors and managers, clerks, skilled workers and foremen, semi-skilled workers, and unskilled workers. At least the unskilled and semi-skilled workers come into the class of less than $2,000 income. There were nearly 3,000,000 semi-skilled workers listed in the 1930 census, but this figure has probably shrunk considerably since then because of the increase in unemployment.

Among the "clerks and kindred workers" in 1930 there were 4,877,235 men and 3,072,220 women, most of whom were office workers and hovered just a little below the $2,000 mark. Most of them live in houses or flats of three to five rooms, and some have a small car. You don't really begin to get above the $2,000 mark until you get into the "skilled workers and foremen," and even then it is difficult to tell just how many are above. The group which the depression has injured least is that labeled "proprietors and managers." Unskilled workers, of course, have suffered most, although not much more than the "professional persons."

The great bulk of the 3,339,602 persons whose income in 1933 was between $2,500 and $5,000 comprises "proprietors and managers." These folks, on the whole, live comfortably in the better suburbs in houses that cost $12,500 up and were all built several years ago. They have economized largely by limiting themselves to only one car, cutting down on the number of servants and sending their children to the state universities instead of the more expensive private schools.

They and their families are the great "middle class." Figuring four to a family, this class totals about 13,350,000 persons. Of all the Americans filing income tax returns on incomes of more than $2,500, 91 per cent were in the $2,500 to $5,000 class. There were only 318,456 persons, or about 1,273,824 families with incomes between $5,000 and $10,000. Certainly this would indicate that the top class, in regard to income, the class making more than $10,000 a year, constitutes a very small slice of the nation's population.

Another group severely hit by the depression has been the "professional" class—doctors, lawyers, artists, actors, reporters and the like. Many of these in the past two or three years have dropped into the division below $2,000 and many more are even worse off. Relief rolls include plenty of dentists, doctors and artists.

Teachers Have Suffered.

There are of course a few at the peak of each profession who have large incomes. But the majority of artists, authors, actors and reporters have not. A recent survey, which was concerned principally with metropolitan newspapers, where the wage scale is higher than it is on small town papers, placed the average reporter's salary at a little more than $38 a week. Teachers, who include 202,337 men and 860,278 women, have had their pay checks badly cut—when they get pay checks at all.

According to Prof. Walter Rautenstrauch of Columbia university, the income of persons engaged in production has diminished far more rapidly than that of persons in service and distributive industries, which latter he refers to as "overhead." He says that the cost of overhead, increasing quickly in the last 15 years, has been further speeded upward by the depression. Service and distributive workers increased their income as a group 186 per cent from 1917 to 1932.

In 1917 actual producers numbered 24,677,000; in 1932 they had slipped to only 17,279,000. Whether employed or not, their average yearly income was only $638; for those employed, it was $875, neither of which figures, says Dr. Rautenstrauch, is sufficient to support an average family "decently."

At the end of our study of the population are the 46 persons whose incomes are more than $1,000,000 a year. They are, to most of us who read newspapers, not a class, but a group of individuals whose names are more or less familiar in headlines.

This, then, is "America." We have to remember the problems of all these vastly different classes when we ponder with the orator over "what America needs."

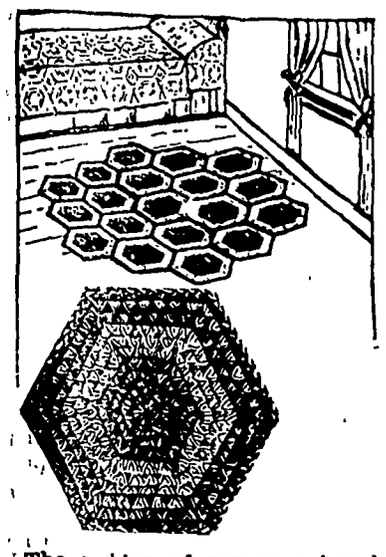
Different Ways of Making Rugs

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



The making of rag rugs has interested needleworkers for hundreds of years. One very good reason for this is that rugs are practical and wanted in every home. The larger the rug the harder the work; the weight increases as the work progresses. Making a rug of motifs and then assembling takes the hard labor out of rug making and the work becomes interesting. Work these motifs in spare time at home or elsewhere and, when all are finished, assemble.

Folder No. 532 contains a lot of information about making the hexagon motif in various sizes in hexagon shaped rugs and in various color combinations. Hexagon motifs are crocheted in any size and color scheme according to your own idea. Amount of material and all the stitches are given and other hints of value to rug makers. A new kind of chart for selecting your colors gives you an opportunity to see what your rug looks like before you go ahead with the work. You can get some wonderful ideas from this folder on "Different Ways to Make Rugs." It will be mailed to you upon receipt of 10 cents.

PROBLEM OF HOW BEST TO PUNISH CHILD SERIOUS

The problem of how best to punish a child to help him or her to understand the error of his ways so that a like mistake will not be made repeatedly, is one of the things which puzzles parents. Should the child have careful explanations of why the thing is wrong for which he is punished? Should he learn to obey arbitrarily with the reliance on father and mother's word and judgments being right? Should corporal punishment be banned in favor of restrictions? When many different methods have been tried and still no change for the better is the result, the problem assumes grave aspects, as there is a tendency to disregard rightful rules. This is, of course, assuming that the parent's judgment is correct, and not capricious. A child soon appreciates when the disciplining is not just.

Children are governed in so many different ways, that no hard and fast rule can be given that will apply in all cases, but, as a general thing, very little folk have to depend upon mother's and father's commands being final. For this reason parents should learn to be guarded in what they demand of their little ones. Implicit obedience of officers' commands, seldom understood by soldiers, is expected in army life, but home life is a different matter.

Affection is the guiding power. The parents love their children so much they want to bring them up to have respect for their maturer judgments, to understand that what was done was to help them to adjust to life, to deport themselves in an upright and honorable way, to strengthen home affiliations, and at the same time to teach them self government and that independence which is founded on a respect for the laws of the land.

The reaction of training the children in these things is beneficial on the parents. Their high ideals for their off-spring are stimulating. The knowledge that they, themselves, are patterns of excellence and represent all the virtues to the children whose belief in their goodness is steadfast, and also their belief in the goodness of other people is founded on this faith in them, bring out fine traits and qualities in the older folk.

Termites Everywhere; Do Much Damage Every Year

It has been estimated that termites, tiny ant-like insects that feed on wood, annually damage buildings to the extent of millions of dollars, asserts a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

Termites, sometimes improperly called the white ants, are prevalent in practically every section of the United States. They live in colonies just beneath the surface of the ground and commute daily to their cafeteria, which is your house. They feed with gusto on foundation posts, siding, joists, walls, studs or wood flooring that may be handy. The flavor of the inner portion of wooden members seems most to their liking, since they bore into the wood, leaving the surface intact, thus escaping detection.

Persistent and resourceful creatures, if they find no wood in direct contact with the ground, they will often blaze a trail through poor mortar joints in old foundations and build tunnels up the inside wall to reach the wood, which they completely destroy in time.

It is easy to determine whether termites are present in a building by simply examining the outside of the foundation. Tiny dirt tunnels, which may appear to be soil washed up on the masonry, reveal the trail of these destructive insects.

Britain's King's Silver Jubilee From the Bible

There have been a number of occasions when a Silver Jubilee could have been celebrated in observance of a sovereign's accession to the throne, says the Montreal Herald. The last was in 1862, when Queen Victoria completed her first 25 years as monarch. But the death of the Prince Consort just six months before the anniversary made any special rejoicing out of the question.

Kings whose Silver Jubilee could have been celebrated were George II, George III, and Henry VIII. In all three cases there were reasons which would have made public celebrations rather inappropriate.

The idea of the jubilee comes to us from the Bible. The Hebrews used to keep every fiftieth year as a year of jubilee, and the Roman Catholic church took over the idea by instituting years of remission, during which plenary indulgence might be obtained by pilgrimage to Rome and by other works of piety. The intervals between these jubilee years have varied from time to time.

Tottering Pyramids

Chichen-Itza means in translation "The Mouth of the Wells of the Itza Tribe," and in the meaning of this short name, notes the Boston Herald, is embodied the keynote to the whole panorama of a decayed civilization which reared monumental white limestone buildings covered with carvings of the god of rain and water whom the Mayans worshipped, and of the serpent god whom they feared. In its name this bygone city succinctly tells why it became the queen of all the stone metropolises that dotted Yucatan in the empire of a thousand years ago, a city of wells and water, and the ceremonial and cultural center of a race whose descendants now only look upon these tottering pyramids, gleaming in the hot Mexican sun, and dream idly of the grandeur of their ancestors.

Jaboticaba Tree Exhibit

The curious jaboticaba tree, native of the southern states of Brazil from Rio Grande do Sul to Minas Garaes, is represented by an exhibit in the hall of plant life at Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago. This strange tree has delicious grape-like fruit which grows abundantly in small clusters directly from the thin bark of the trunk and large branches. In South America the jaboticaba tree is cultivated as well as growing wild over a large area. The globular fruit has a tough and rather thick skin inclosing a juicy vinous pulp and one or more large seeds.

Pay for "Air Rights"

Not only are large amounts paid for "air rights," or the privilege of erecting buildings over railroad tracks, but sizable sums are sometimes paid merely for the right to use the light and breathe the air over certain areas. For example, in 1929 a skyscraper in New York leased for 33 years the light and air rights over a five-story building next door for $742,500.—I. J. Kline, New York city, in Collier's Weekly.

Affect Man's Health

Meadow mice affect man's health. They are the natural hosts of the dog tick which is the bearer of the virus causing the dreaded Rocky Mountain spotted fever. The young tick must attach and feed upon the blood of a mouse before it can mature and attach itself to a dog or to man. Without the mouse the tick could not complete its life cycle.

Pictures on Cork

Artists paint pictures on all sorts of unusual materials, ranging from sheets of aluminum to cork. Wall decorations or murals are done on frosted glass, cellophane and even rubber. Some decorative effects are obtained by leaving part of the background exposed.

Chicken Feather Buttons

Making buttons from chicken feathers is possible as the result of finding that the feathers may be dissolved in caustic soda and after several processes hardened into a new plastic material.

Swans Mate for Life and Share Responsibilities

Swans are perfect models of conjugal conduct. They mate for life and the sexes share the domestic responsibilities, notes a writer in the New York Herald Tribune.

The downy young when first hatched are not the "ugly ducklings" of popular belief, but lovely little creatures, clothed in silky, golden down and without the exaggerated neck and huge paddle-like feet of their parents. Very soon, however, these characteristics begin to appear and ungainliness replaces their natal loveliness until the grace and beauty of maturity appear.

Geese, like swans, pair for life, and the young birds remain in the company of their parents for nearly a year after they are hatched.

Endowed with keen intelligence and extreme wariness, they can be depended on to maintain a fair degree of abundance as long as adequate wintering grounds are afforded them. But, above all, they, like swans, require freedom from molestation when they are at rest, so that a large measure of solitude and wide spaces are the chief requirements for their perpetuation.

Ducks, for the most part, are very different from swans and geese in their family habits. While they pair like other birds, and are not as a rule polygamous, the male in most species is not a constant husband, and abandons the female and all family cares as soon as incubation of the eggs is well under way. Stiff-tailed ducks, however, are notable exceptions to this rule.

Indian Is Given Credit for Discovering Oyster

Cleopatra set the fashions in the days of the Roman empire. However, history leads us to believe that Caesar planned the menus. Humming bird tongues on toast were used sparingly, but the "ostrea" was plentiful and highly prized among the Romans, writes Dorothea Duncan, in the Washington Post. The "ostrea" in English-speaking countries is an oyster. Sallust (86-35 B. C.), after returning from a jaunt to England with Caesar, said he could find only one good thing in the Britons; "they eat oysters."

The Greeks had a word for oyster, too—"ostrean." The word means bone or shell. The French took the term and changed it to "oistro" and from this our word oyster is derived.

An Indian is given credit for discovering the oyster in America. One day he was fishing and seeing a peculiar looking "stone" in the water, stretched out his hand to it. The oyster shell closed on his finger. He smashed the shell from his hand with his tomahawk, put his finger in his mouth and discovered the delicious flavor of the oyster.

Oysters were so popular in early England that they featured in the social customs of the country. In the midlands, at Christmas, oyster suppers were given.

Succeeded to Office

Presidents sworn in to fill the unexpired terms of the Presidents who died or were killed in office, since Garfield's time included: Chester Alan Arthur was sworn in at his home, 123 Lexington avenue, New York city, on September 20, 1881, by Judge Brady of the New York Supreme court. Theodore Roosevelt was sworn in at the home of his friend, Ansley Wilcox, on Delaware avenue, Buffalo, N. Y., on September 14, 1901, by District Judge John R. Hazel. Calvin Coolidge was sworn in at the Coolidge home, Plymouth, Vt., on August 3, 1923, by his father, Col. John Coolidge, who was a justice of the peace.

Mt. Shasta's Peak

Mt. Shasta's peak is the crater of an extinct volcano. Scientists say the last eruption occurred many thousand years ago. However, after all these centuries, steam and hot fumes rise continuously from the crater. At times food may actually be cooked by merely setting the pans on the ground. A meal may be warmed in a few minutes in this manner—and this just a few feet from snow and ice banks 30 feet deep. The Indians say in whispers that the summit of Shasta is the tepee of their ancient chief, mighty Isasta, for whom the mountain is named, and that the heat on the crest is kept for the day when he will return once more to be the head of many braves.

"Little Peter"

The little Mother Carey's chicken, or "storm-petrel," is a small bird and sooty black save for a large white patch at the base of the tail. Its habit of pattering with its feet on the water as it flies is familiar to mariners, who in consequence, likened its action to that of the Apostle Peter, who, we are told, walked upon the water, and hence the name petrel, French "Peter-elle," meaning "Little Peter."

Criminals to Fly

Forty years ago an aeronautical congress was held in Chicago. An eminent scientist there suggested that in view of the risk in experimenting with flying machines, criminals should be detailed for duty in the common cause of science and humanity.

French Architect Responsible

The popularity of mirrors as decorations and ornaments in public edifices and private homes traces back to an innovation introduced by Robert de Cotte (1657-1735), a famous French architect of the period of Louis the Great.

WILD AND WOOLY

By STANLEY CORDELL

© Associated Newspapers. WNU Service.

IT WAS hard to believe that the thing was actually happening. The Lee MacReadys, who had never been west before, thought such dramas only occurred in fiction. Mrs. MacReady uttered a little suppressed scream of fright and pointed toward the gap. "Lee! They're going to hold up the stage! Oh, why did you ever insist on leaving the main automobile road and driving into this dreadful country?"

"Because," said Lee, "nothing exciting was happening on the main automobile road and we came west looking for atmosphere, didn't we?" He tried to sound jovial, but his lips were white.

Above them and to the right an old-fashioned Concord stage coach, pulled by four horses and with two men perched on the box, had rocked into view and was descending the slope. Beyond, to the left, a band of horsemen, shouting and flourishing guns, had dashed from behind the shelter of a pile of boulders and was racing madly to intercept the vehicle's progress.

Mrs. MacReady screamed when one of the men aboard the stage fired toward the approaching horseman. The driver began whipping up his horses as answering shots came from the bandits. The stage swayed precariously as it swept down the slope.

Mrs. MacReady grasped her husband's arm and squeezed fiercely. "Lee!" she screamed. "We're right in the way! The stage is heading for the road, and we'll likely be shot. Hurry!"

But Lee didn't need to be urged. He had estimated the spot where the final showdown would take place, slightly to the rear of where they were now located. His foot bore down on the accelerator and he bent grimly over the wheel. But speed was something to be wished for and not attained, for the road was unpaved and rutty, much more suited to shod hoofs than rubber tires.

They went bouncing at what seemed a terrific pace, yet couldn't have been more than 20 miles an hour because the stage, having gained the roadway, was tearing along almost at their rear bumper. Behind the stage came the bandits, shouting furiously for the coach to halt and emphasizing their demands with volley after volley of shots.

Looking back, Mrs. MacReady suddenly said tensely: "Lee! Some-

They Went Bouncing at What Seemed to be a Terrific Pace, the Stage Tearing Along Almost at their Rear Bumper.

thing's gone wrong. There's another band of horsemen following after the bandits!"

"Probably the sheriff and his posse!" Lee replied. Abruptly his face brightened. "There's a town!" he cried. "We're safe!"

"Maybe," his wife answered. "If that's a posse the bandits are caught between two fires and we're in the thick of it."

Lee didn't reply. He had jammed home the accelerator, risking broken springs and axles in order to gain the sanctity of the huddle of buildings which loomed ahead, before a careless bullet pierced him between the shoulder blades.

The town was alive with men, all carrying guns and all rushing about aimlessly. As the MacReadys swept down the street, puffs of smoke began to jet out from windows and behind doors. The sound of shooting mingled with the shouts of men, the roar of the MacReady motor and the rumble of the stage, was deafening.

Lee saw a sign that read "Hotel," and skidded to a stop. "Quick. Inside! It looks as though this fight has just begun!"

They raced up the steps. A door opened and they ran for it. Inside a bearded man, holding a rifle and with six-shooters strapped about his waist, grinned at them. "Just made it, eh?"

"Ca—can you hide us?" Mrs. MacReady asked.

The man with the beard eyed them uncertainly a moment. "O. K. Come with me."

He led the way up a flight of stairs. "You'll be O. K. in here," he said, opening a door.

The MacReadys looked around. They were in a scantily furnished hotel bedroom. Two windows faced on the street, and from beneath them came a bedlam of sounds. Already it had begun to grow dark, and the flashes of rifles and sixguns were plainly visible.

"Stay close to the farther wall," Lee said, "I'll close the blinds." He crept across the floor, reached up and pulled down the shades. Then he wriggled back to a position beside his wife. Terrified, clutching at each other, they huddled on the floor there. Hours passed, or a period that seemed like hours. Outside the shooting continued, but as darkness settled it grew less intense and finally ceased. There was the sound of running feet and much shouting. The MacReadys heard someone say: "Lynchers!" And the cry was immediately taken up and repeated by a dozen throats.

Minutes later a dull glow showed against the curtain. Lee crawled across the floor and peeped out. "They've hung three men!" he reported. His face was white. "And they've built a fire and are celebrating!"

Mrs. MacReady gasped and slumped forward. Lee picked her up and carried her to the bed. After a while she regained consciousness, but was too weak to move. Lee lay down beside her and did what he could to be a comfort. A long interval passed, and then the red glow grew faint and died. The sound of shouting diminished and presently there was stillness. For the first time Lee relaxed. He lay for a long time, expecting to hear footsteps approaching their room, or a renewal of the hubbub in the street. At length, overcome by complete exhaustion, the MacReadys slept.

Day had come when they awoke. Lee climbed off the bed and timidly lifted up the curtain. It was somewhat of a shock to discover a quiet, unassuming and peaceful country; hard to believe that the horrors of the night before had actually taken place here. A hundred yards up the street three limp bodies swung in the breeze. Lee shuddered and turned away.

"Come on," he said. "Let's get out of here."

Below stairs a pleasant-faced young man was standing behind the desk. It was only when he spoke that the MacReadys recognized their host of last night, without his beard. He smiled at them.

"Enjoy our little celebration?" he asked. "I gave you the only front room we had left, so you could get a good view."

Lee merely stared. "Celebration?" he said, sounding ridiculously like an echo.

The young man nodded. "Of course, being from the East, you wouldn't know about Dusty Rembrandt. Worst bandit this section of the country ever knew. Twenty-five years ago today he was captured and hung with two of his henchmen. We celebrate the event every year by staging a pageant exactly as it happened on that memorable day. Those dummies you see hanging in the square represent Rembrandt and his lieutenants. The old stage is the one used to bait the outlaws into town. Sheriff Wells, the man who made the capture, led yesterday's posse." The young man laughed. "It's a great day here. All the men grow beards and the women wear calico dresses. The affair winds up with a bonfire and then a dance at the circle R ranch."

Lee gulped and stared at his wife. Mrs. MacReady said: "Then—then it wasn't real?"

The young man shook his head. "Looked almost real, didn't it?" he said proudly.

An hour later the MacReadys bumped out of town in their car and on their faces were expressions difficult to describe. Presently they came to a crossroad and Lee pulled up. "We'd better turn here," he said, "and get back to the main automobile route. It'll be easier driving and I guess things of exciting nature are just as apt to happen there as any place."

Mrs. MacReady nodded sadly. There was disappointment in her face. "I guess so," she said.

Science Seeks Enduring Paint Used by Indians

Mysterious Indian "spirit" pictures have given a clew to a paint which can withstand exposure to weather for hundreds of years, states a Washington Press correspondent.

The Smithsonian institution recently announced that Dr. John P. Harrington, ethnologist, will visit southern California to study the basic ingredients used in Indian drawings on mountain cliffs which still retain their original luster 150 years after they were painted.

According to Indian legends, the pictures were painted by spirits of the dead. Investigation revealed that the work was done at night by medicine men.

On an expedition among the Mission Indians of southern California last fall, Doctor Harrington found that an oil pressed from the seeds of a rare species of wild cucumber was used in mixing the paint.

Doctor Harrington will try to find enough of these cucumber seeds to obtain a supply of oil for experimental purposes. From a chemical analysis, it may be possible to find out the remarkable element which enabled the crude Indian paintings to last through more than a century's diverse weather conditions.

The Indians obtained the oil through the simple process of crushing it out of the seeds with a stone pestle. Formerly, these cucumber plants were fairly common all over the United States, but now they are a botanical rarity. The Indians obtained five colors—red, white, yellow, black and blue—by mixing the oil with clay and minerals found in southern California.

Indian women also use the oil of this wild cucumber as a sunburn lotion. In spite of their red skins, the women burn readily when exposed for long periods to the summer sun. Apparently the oil has the ability of absorbing the harmful rays in the sunlight.

TASTY DESSERTS ARE NO PROBLEM

By EDITH M. BARBER

A WRITER asks for ice cream recipes which can be made in an automatic refrigerator.

Perhaps it is just as well to go on record first of all that the frozen deserts, good as they are, which can be made in the refrigerator are not exactly like ice cream. If you have ever made ice cream, you will know that it is the turning which makes the mixture smooth and increases their quantities. For this reason it is always necessary to whip the cream used in preparing the mixtures which are to be frozen in the refrigerator.

Perhaps the most successful deserts of this sort are the mousses or parfaits which are combinations of whipped cream, or whipped cream and beaten egg whites, with various flavorings.

A mousse is, of course, a rich dessert, and it is possible to make other desserts with combinations of milk and cream. I have found that a combination of sweetened condensed milk diluted with water plus whipped cream is as satisfactory as any recipe I have tried. In my own refrigerator I get good results without stirring the mixture during the freezing process. You may have better results in your own box if you stir the mixture at least once during the freezing period.

It is also possible to produce good desserts with whipped evaporated milk to replace the cream, especially if you use with it crushed fruit or chocolate. The milk must be heated and then chilled before it is whipped. A very little gelatin is dissolved in water and added to the hot milk. I have found that unless I use condensed milk which is already sweetened, powdered sugar is needed to give the dessert a smooth texture.

Another type of frozen dessert which can be made successfully is a combination of milk, marshmallows and whipped cream.

There are a number of other desserts which can be made with the help of a refrigerator, in which they will set but not freeze.

One of the easiest refrigerator deserts is made by spreading thin chocolate or ginger wafers with whipped cream which has been flavored with almond. They are then piled together and the roll is laid on a plate and covered with whipped cream. After chilling for several hours in the refrigerator it should be sliced diagonally for serving.

Marshmallow Ice Cream.

1 cup milk
25 marshmallows
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup cream, whipped
Salt

Add marshmallows to milk and melt in double boiler, chill until slightly thickened. Whip cream, add vanilla and salt and beat into cold mixture. Turn into freezing tray and freeze three to four hours. Fills one pint tray.

Variation—Add one cupful crushed berries or fruit.

With Evaporated Milk.

1 cup evaporated milk
½ teaspoon gelatin
2 tablespoons water
2 teaspoons vanilla
⅔ cup condensed milk
½ cup water

Heat milk uncovered in double boiler or saucepan until scum begins to form. Add gelatin which has been soaked five minutes in cold water. Stir until dissolved. Do not remove film formed on milk. Pour into bowl and chill icy cold about 15 minutes in a bowl of cracked ice before whipping. Whip until stiff; add vanilla and condensed milk mixed with water. Pour into freezing trays and freeze three to four hours. Fills two pint trays.

Chocolate Filling.

4 squares chocolate, cut in pieces
1¾ cups milk
¼ cup flour
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Put chocolate and milk in double boiler and heat. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until smooth. Sift flour with sugar; add a small amount of the chocolate mixture and stir until smooth. Return to double boiler, cook until thick, and add butter and vanilla. This filling may be stored in the refrigerator in a covered jar. It may be used in the inexpensive pudding, or to put between layers of cake or as a pie filling.

Refrigerator Pudding.

Chocolate filling
Sponge cake or lady fingers

Line bowl with slices of stale sponge cake or split lady fingers, crust side out. Fill with chocolate filling in alternate layers with cake and chill in refrigerator several hours.

Banana Delight.

3 large bananas
¾ cup powdered sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup cream, whipped
1½ teaspoons vanilla
½ cup nut meats, chopped
2 egg whites.

Mash bananas to a pulp, add sugar and lemon juice. Chill. Whip cream, add vanilla and nuts and add to first mixture. Beat egg whites stiff and fold into mixture. Nut meats may be omitted. Turn into freezing trays and freeze two to three hours.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

AS PEOPLE advance in years, it is important for them to be able to enjoy themselves alone. It is a wise thing to learn this trick at any time, but it becomes almost an essential to happiness to know how to employ time in pleasant ways without any companionship, when past the prime of life.

Just what shall occupy the attention is for each individual to determine, as tastes differ widely, but there are certain ways which may be suggested that lie within the scope of possibility for almost everyone. That is, none of the things require expensive outfits, nor are costly to do.

Games of solitaire are a recognized diversion. Of these there are endless kinds. Most of them are played with a single deck of cards. Some require cards other than the regulation ones.

Entertaining Oneself.

Numbers is one such game for those who do not care for playing cards. Denominations rather than suits of diamonds, clubs, spades and hearts are manipulated in much the same ways, but not so pictorially.

There is a game called solitaire that is played with marbles on a board. It is intriguing.

Puzzles of all sorts and descriptions come to keep a person mentally occupied. They take just enough physical activity to co-ordinate mind and body without actual exertion.

Anagrams and cross-word puzzles are a delight to thousands of people. Besides the puzzles in newspapers, books of these entertaining types of solitaire are on the market. Picture puzzles are favorites with many persons.

There are Chinese puzzles which are so ingenious that hours can be whiled away in the attempt to solve them, such as a ball made of many pieces which lock together into this shape only when matched deftly.

Occupations in Variety.

Embroidery, knitting, crocheting, tatting, and all forms of artistry done with a needle of one sort or another employ a woman's time pleasantly, and with such good results that her handiwork can aid in decoration of a home, in practical ways, as found in rugs, table linens, etc. Also, handsome accessories of costumes can be so made, or ornamented, such as bags and scarfs.

Interest in collecting special articles is a marvelous way of keeping one's interest in things that are broadening in scope. This can be done without companionship, but whatever the subject chosen, it never fails to bring one in contact with those of similar interests. So it works to the advantage of occupation alone, and to companionship at times with those mutually minded.

Games of cards come in the category of entertainments that are inactive enough for those in advancing years to enjoy. These, also, help to foster contacts of social life. Those past the prime of life should know how to play good games of cards.

The Joy of Living.

It is surprising how easy it is to complain and how hard it is to be thankful. This seems to be an actual attitude toward the things of life, even though by so doing we strengthen and exaggerate the difficulties, and decrease and render less effectual the fortunate ones. We are inclined to blame circumstances and sometimes other people for our misfortunes without realizing that, in small or large measure, we have ourselves to blame—not in causing the troubles, perhaps, though we often do that, but in making the effects of them continue and thereby adding to the weight of them.

Without being a Pollyanna, we can be thankful much more often than we are. It is more than likely that circumstances, and other people are partly or entirely responsible for the good as well as the bad things. But for the fortunate matters we are prone to feel that, to our own efforts, credit is due. It is not suggested that we attribute to misfortunes any need of good fortune. However, if we scan the former carefully we shall find that there are certain aspects not all bad. For these flecks and areas of good we can rejoice. It it amazing how one good thought will lead to another, and we may find, without forcing joy into trouble, we still may lessen the latter by our discernment.

Spanish Influence

That pleasant asset of Spanish type houses—the patio—is now being adopted more and more widely by modern day builders. Pictured in a current issue of the American Home the red brick paving of a patio is particularly effective against the dead white of the exterior house walls. The lattice trellis, designed for grapevines, makes a picturesque pattern around a doorway and the high walls of the brick enclosure which face the patio are painted a soft yellow.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

A Rogers Highway
Our Policy? Here It Is
Why Go to Town?
To Discourage Vice

From Tusia, Okla., in which state Will Rogers was born, J. D. Underwood telegraphs suggesting as "the highest tribute and a lasting memorial to Will Rogers," that Highway 66, which runs from Rogers' new home in California to his old home at Claremore, Okla., be extended on to New York, and the whole road named "Will Rogers Highway."

Arthur Brisbane

If every American highway with friends of Will Rogers living on both sides from one end to the other were named for him, there would be many "Will Rogers" highways.

Thus run the headlines:

"ITALY BARS ALL PEACE TALK."

"BRITAIN WEIGHS SANCTIONS. WANTS TO KNOW OUR POLICY."

If she wants to know the policy of 90 out of a 100 ordinary Americans, and 100 per cent of all common sense Americans, it would be this:

To mind our own business; let European nations, alternately murdering each other and robbing inferior nations, attend to their business, in their way.

Our policy now, with Italy swallowing Ethiopia, should be exactly what it was when our British friends were busy swallowing the lands of the Boers, absorbing that country with its valuable gold and diamond mines. We did nothing then. Why should we invent a special policy for Mussolini now?

France and England "fear Mussolini may involve three continents in the Ethiopian war." Has Europe heard of the New England farmer who said: "I'm on my way to town to get drunk, and Lord, how I dread it!" He need not have gone to town. European nations need not be dragged into a tri-continental war if they don't want to be dragged.

A very old poker player of the New York Press club, when he "raised the pot," remarked usually: "The only way to discourage vice is to make it expensive." That idea seems to be working in Germany. Doctor Schacht, head of the great German bank, leading financier of the Reich, warns Germany that Nazi individuals indulging themselves in the pleasure of treating defenseless Jews brutally, are endangering German's prosperity. Such wanton brutality constitutes a great menace to German trade everywhere, according to Doctor Schacht, who knows.

Republicans report greatly increased demand for the nomination of Senator Borah, since the announcement that, if nominated, he will run. This will be mournful news for some Republican corporation-best minds, for whether they have to be "lashed with scorpions," or with something else, would make little difference to some of them who consider Senator Borah distinctly in the "scorpion" class.

An old gentleman of eighty-one strolled into a New York police station, remarking: "I have just walked from Kansas City and shall walk back again tonight." He was removed to a psychopathic ward. If he had substituted the verb "fly" for "walk," the police would not have disturbed him, for he could have flown in from Kansas City during the day very easily and flown back again at night. If 25 years ago he had said, "I just flew in from Kansas City," he would have been sent to the dangerous ward.

So there is progress.

At Sverdlovsk, Russian government engineers, digging sewers under the city, find gold ore that indicates a rich gold field underlying the town. The government owns practically all the city, and can easily take the rest, and a further increase in Russia's gold production, already more than three times as great as that of the United States, may be expected.

Those that believe in the wickedness of Russia may ask:

"Why does Providence allow such wicked people to find so much gold?"

One answer is, "The quickest way to make them stop their wickedness is to make them rich, and gold would do that." Gold might not change the existing government of Russia. But another generation will see another kind of government, and ownership of such a lump of gold, as we possess, might make that next Russian government consider Lenin and Stalin "old fashioned."

Providence works mysteriously.

Physicians at St. Vincent's hospital in New York report the extraordinary case of a baby, that lived for 27 days, appearing almost normal but possessing no brain.

Disgruntled "best minds" will tell you there are "babies" in Washington, some of them full-fledged professors, that have lived longer than 27 days "without any brain."

Disinfect Your Drains

You can easily disinfect your drains and prevent odors in your bathroom. At regular intervals, as often as you think necessary, use the following solution: Dissolve two ounces of chloride of lime in one gallon of water. Pour this down the drain and allow it to remain for a couple of minutes, and then flush.

Heritage From the Old Days

The old traditions of the sea prevail. Meal time is not a conventional tea. At the captain's table it is not proper even to talk unless the Old Man speaks first. The mate always removes his cap and knocks before entering the master's quarters. If standing to windward on the poop when the captain comes on deck the mate promptly moves to leeward, so the Old Man will get the breeze uncontaminated. Ladies, if you will, but the hand of the schooner captain is iron and the etiquette still prevail.

What sort of men sail on schooners? All sorts. Crews are sometimes negro or brown-skinned, with a little men from West Indian islands, ruled by white officers, of course. More often they are Norwegian-born, Swedish-born, Danish-born, German-born, Russian-born officers of the old school. Most of them are citizens now, but few schooner men were born under the United States flag.

Congress Session Ends; Long's Lone Filibuster

CONGRESS ended its session at midnight Monday—after the clock hands had been moved back three times—the house hilarious with refreshment, song and rustic antics, the senate furious because Huey Long of Louisiana had conducted a lone filibuster for seven hours and talked to death the third deficiency appropriation bill. This measure carried $03,000,000 tax to pay pensions to the aged, retirement pay to railroad workers and money for crippled children.

Senator Long

The Kingfish defeated all efforts to silence him and was adamant to pleas that he was cutting off funds for humanitarian purposes. He was insisting that the house be forced to vote on the cotton and wheat loan amendments to the bill which the senate had inserted but which the lower chamber had rejected. A compromise had been reached between the administration and the bloc of cotton state senators by which the cotton raisers were to get government loans of 10 cents a pound, and the wheat farmers were left out. Long would not stand for the elimination of the amendments thus arranged.

The Democratic leaders were afraid that if submitted to the house government loans not only on wheat and cotton but on other commodities would be voted at a cost of upward of $2,000,000,000.

They determined to let the appropriation bill fail rather than submit to Long's terms, although Robinson stated that information from the controller general's office indicated there would be no available funds for the social security program unless the deficiency measure were passed.

Most congressional authorities held that failure of the $103,000,000 third deficiency bill may delay operation until January of the bulk of New Deal legislation enacted the last two months of congress. It provided funds for many purposes besides those mentioned above.

The compromise cotton plan was accepted reluctantly by the AAA, and many of the southern senators were dissatisfied with it. The senators from the wheat states were disgruntled because the wheat loan policy was completely abandoned.

Sept. 12 Is Deadline for Works Relief Applications

APPLICATIONS for money from the four billion dollar works relief fund must be in by September 12, according to an executive order issued by the President. In addition, he directed all agencies—federal, state or municipal—to be prepared either to ask for bids or begin works operations by October 22.

The President has set November 1 as the date for putting his works program into high gear and taking all the unemployed off the relief rolls. The new orders, issued to the heads of all departments and emergency agencies, were regarded as moves to realize that goal.

Uncle Sam Warns Russia to Keep Its Pledges

FRIENDLY diplomatic relations between the United States and Russia, established in November 1933, will not longer be maintained unless the Soviet government mends its ways and keeps its solemn pledges to prevent Communist organizations on its soil or under its control from plotting to overthrow the government of the United States. This was the warning handed to N. N. Krestinsky, assistant foreign affairs commissar of the U. S. S. R. by Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Moscow, whose note was written by direction of the Department of State in Washington.

Ambassador Bullitt

The language of the note was not quite so blunt as the above, but it did not mince words and its implications were not to be doubted. It said the United States "anticipates the most serious consequences if the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is unwilling, or unable, to take appropriate measures to prevent further acts in disregard of the solemn pledge given by it to the government of the United States."

It was thought in Washington that Russia's reply might be delayed until the return of Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov, who was in Geneva helping deal with the Italo-Ethiopian crisis. It was Litvinov who personally gave to President Roosevelt the pledges that Russia would prevent Communists under its control from interfering with the internal affairs of this country, and in Mr. Bullitt's note these pledges are quoted in full, with the assertion that they have been flagrantly violated.

The American note called attention to the recent meeting in Moscow of the Communist International where the speakers discussed openly the plans for subversive Red action in the United States. The chief American delegates to this congress were Earl Browder and William Z. Foster, present and past heads respectively of the Communist party in the United States; Gil Green and Sam Darcy. Ambassador Bullitt sent to Washington daily reports on such of the doings of the congress as he was permitted to know, and after his final report he was instructed to lodge the protest.

Recognition of the Soviet government was, and still is, severely criticized by various elements in the United States, notably organized labor; and the friendly relations established by the Roosevelt administration never have "paid out" in the way of increased business with Russia because the Soviet government demanded extraordinary credits in exchange for orders. So perhaps our administration will not be too sorry if there is a rupture of relations.

Winant Made Head of the Social Security Board

JOHN G. WINANT, former governor of New Hampshire and a Republican, has been appointed chairman of the social security board, the body that will direct the part of the New Deal of which the President is proudest and which he declares is one of the outstanding social reforms in the history of the government. Mr. Winant's two associates on the board are to be Arthur J. Altmeyer of Wisconsin, who has been serving as an assistant secretary of labor, and Vincent Morgan Miles of Fort Smith, Ark., an attorney who has been associated with the Public Works administration. Each is to receive an annual salary of $10,000.

J. G. Winant

In sending his nominations to the senate the President stipulated that Winant will serve six years, Altmeyer will serve four years and Miles one year. All appointments date from last August 13 when the social security bill reached the White House.

As chairman of the new national labor relations board, operating under the Wagner act, the President named Joseph Madden, a Pittsburgh attorney. The other members appointed are John M. Carmody of New York and Edwin S. Smith of Massachusetts. J. D. Ross was nominated as a member of the securities and exchange commission, a job that it had been thought would be given to Benjamin Cohen, co-author of the utilities bill.

Mussolini Says Italy Will Fight Sanctions

GREAT BRITAIN, having ordered a concentration of naval strength in the Mediterranean for the purpose of protecting the Suez canal in case war breaks out between Italy and Ethiopia, followed this up by sending 1,000 troops to reinforce the garrison on the island of Malta. Immediately thereafter Premier Mussolini, in an interview in the London Daily Mail, made this portentous declaration:

"It should be realized without the possibility of misunderstanding that whoever applies sanctions (penalties for treaty violations) against Italy will be met by the armed hostility of our country."

The duce added that if the League of Nations voted sanctions against Italy, his country would at once leave the league.

In reply to a direct question whether there is the slightest possibility of his changing his attitude, Mussolini replied in the negative, saying "none at all—unless Ethiopia gives in."

Opening up of the vast Ethiopian interior, he said would benefit "all civilized states." Colonization of Ethiopia by Italy would "completely fulfill all colonial aspirations of Italy."

Death of J. N. Willys, Motor Magnate and Diplomat

JOHN N. WILLYS, long prominent in the automobile industry and ambassador to Poland for two years in the Hoover administration, died in New York at the age of sixty-one. He had been ill since last May when he suffered a heart attack. Mr. Willys, forced into business at eighteen by the death of his father, made his first fortune in selling bicycles. In 1908 he took over the Overland Automobile company, which was about to go into the hands of a receiver, and organized the Willys-Overland company at Indianapolis. Later he purchased the Pope-Toledo company at Toledo, Ohio, and moved the Willys-Overland plant there. He sold his automobile holdings to a syndicate in 1929, the deal involving several million dollars.

Thomas Alva Edison, Jr., eldest son of the famous inventor, died suddenly in Springfield, Mass. He was head of the research engineering department of the Edison plant at West Orange, N. J.

Roosevelt Talk to Youth Answered by Snell

IN HIS radio address to the convention of Young Democrats clubs in Milwaukee President Roosevelt insisted that he was not speaking with any political motive but was saying "precisely—word for word—what I would say were I addressing a convention of the youth of the Republican party." He justified the New Deal as an intervention by government to protect and aid common men in the complex scheme of modern existence, and asserted its aim was not socialism, but regulated individualism.

Rep. Snell

Championing a philosophy of change, the President said that "rules are not necessarily sacred—principles are. The methods of the old order are not, as some would have you believe, above the challenge of youth.

"To the American youth of all parties I submit a message of confidence—unite and challenge."

Under the auspices of the Republican national committee, Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York spoke over the radio in direct reply to the President's appeal to youth—for both parties are making strenuous endeavors to capture the allegiance of the young men and women. Mr. Snell argued that a change in the Constitution abolishing rights of individual citizens would place "those who possess the power, the wealth and the cunning" in control of the government.

"Surely the youth of America," he said, "are not prepared to endorse any administration which is seeking to bring about such a condition."

High Prices of Food Will Be Investigated

BEFORE adjourning the house passed a resolution, previously adopted by the senate, appropriating $150,000 to enable the federal trade commission to make a general investigation into the rising prices of food. The commission is to analyze and allocate the costs of producing and distributing foods to the American consumer. Representatives from agricultural districts supported the measure, contending that the farmer is not receiving his proper share of the food dollar.

"One statistician has estimated," a committee report stated, "that in 1932 it cost the final consumer of five major American farm products 19 billion 21 million dollars. That is the sum the consumer paid to the retailer."

Of this total sum it is estimated that the farmer received only 7 billion 556 million and that it cost somewhere in the neighborhood of 11 billion 500 million to get the farmer's products to the consumer.

Guffey Coal Control Bill Is Forced Through

LEGISLATIVE action in both house and senate was fast and furious during the closing days of the session. White House pressure was freely used; filibusters were started and stopped; senators and representatives, hot and bothered, were inclined to be quarrelsome. But congress had its orders and it wanted to go home, so the administration program in general was pushed through.

Senator Guffey

One of the most controversial measures on that program, the Guffey coal bill, had been driven through the house by orders from above and threats of a strike, and when it was taken up by the senate every effort to kill it, by eliminating the tax feature, was defeated. During the debate Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, Democrat, created a sensation by denouncing the bill in these words:

"Outside of political circles, it is questionable whether there are five reputable lawyers in the United States who would declare this measure constitutional. However, that is not the worst feature of the bill. The worst feature is the defect and infirmity in the legislative program that we are developing. This nation cannot remain free and happy, if we are to legislate for groups, and beyond all of that, if groups are to legislate for themselves the end of things is not very far distant."

The house gave up the fight against the "death sentence" in the utilities bill and instructed conferees to accept a "compromise" that was pretty much one-sided. This means that all holding companies beyond the second degree are to be sentenced to death by the SEC promptly after January 1, 1938. Even a holding company in the second degree would not escape unless its operations were confined to a single integrated system within a state or within contiguous states.

Both senate and house adopted a resolution making mandatory the embargo on munitions shipments to both belligerents in case of war. This was what the administration did not want, claiming it would tie the hands of the Executive so that he could exert no influence toward averting war.

Senate and house accepted the conferees' report on the bill increasing the powers of TVT and legalizing that body's past actions and it was sent to the White House. The senate passed without a record vote the railway bankruptcy amendments recommended by Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman, which are designed to prohibit minorities from blocking reorganization plans.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—Politics being inseparable from governmental administration under our system, it becomes pertinent at this time to examine what has happened in the late session of congress. In a nation where a two-party political structure obtains, politics cannot be segregated from the administration in the larger sense. It is not with a critical attitude, therefore, that the magnifying glass is held over the doings of President Roosevelt, his cabinet and brain trust advisers and the congress that has lately adjourned.

Build Campaign Battle Lines

I believe it will be agreed that politics has predominated in the management of our national affairs during the last eight months especially. The fervor and appeal that was held for recovery by all of us during the earlier days of the Roosevelt administration seems to have been largely dissipated. That is not to say that no one wants to see recovery accomplished. It is to say, however, that this fervor and this appeal has been somewhat subordinated. Thus, it can be summarized in a brief sentence: The administration, looking to the elections of 1936, has been engaged in building campaign battle lines and forging campaign ammunition.

The 1934 congressional elections presented to the country an issue based on the performances and the future program of President Roosevelt. It was accorded a proposition where citizens were voting either to give the New Deal a future mandate and the President authority to proceed as he thought best or to vote a mandate that would call a halt on those same performances and policies. The country supported Mr. Roosevelt, some of his advisers since have told me, in a manner even more substantial than he had anticipated. He emerged from that campaign with a larger Democratic majority in the house than he had before. In addition he was accorded much more than a necessary two-thirds of the senate. The picture looked roseate.

Though the congress that has just ended its session gave the President many anxious hours, I think that on the whole it can be regarded as having provided him with a record of rather arduous and faithful response to his wishes. He did not obtain quite all that he wanted nor did he obtain that portion of his program exactly in the form he desired. But, again, politics in congress is almost a matter of general compromise anyway so that the President can be said to have come out very well. He can proceed now to any plans for that session of congress which convenes next January and which, in accordance with nearly all precedents, will adjourn ahead of the national political conventions next June.

Politics being the game that it is, one must look into the future to discover the ultimate goal. So, looking into the future, one discerns several objects or objectives of decided, as well as important, interest to the individual voters.

Looking to the Future

In the first place, the consensus surely is that Mr. Roosevelt has built a legislative and administrative structure in our government that presents a concrete and unqualified issue to the American people, namely, to proceed along New Deal lines and make the necessary changes in the Constitution to permit execution of those policies or to throw the whole thing overboard. There can be no equivocation.

As the structure stands at this time and as it will stand until the next session of congress is under way, many New Deal propositions are of doubtful constitutionality. If they are so held by the Supreme court of the United States then Mr. Roosevelt is believed certain to turn to the country and request Constitutional revision.

His latest and perhaps his most definite move in this direction was in connection with the so-called Guffey coal bill. It will be recalled that, in placing that piece of legislation on the "must" list of measures to be acted on before congress adjourned, Mr. Roosevelt advised house leaders that he wanted it passed and he did not care particularly whether some members of congress had "reasonable doubts" about its constitutionality. In effect, therefore, the President commanded passage of legislation that must place before the Supreme court a vital question for determination. It will be tested. Of that there is no doubt. If the law is held unconstitutional, it merely means that its provisions form another part of the campaign battleground observed to be shaping.

Mr. Roosevelt also succeeded in forcing through congress the legislation destroying the public utility holding companies. It was a tough fight but the President was victorious. Now, I hear from many sources that court examination of the legislation likewise will come because some folks are convinced it is confiscatory. If it is, it is unconstitutional.

And so it is in the case of several other pieces of legislation enacting New Deal ideas into statutes. One by one, it appears they will get before courts for review.

Thus, the line of cleavage is marked. While the President has remained silent, neither denying nor confirming the undercurrent of information that I have reported here, one cannot fail to reach the conclusion that if many of the New Deal measures are held invalid, the President and his New Deal supporters, of necessity, must go to the country in the next election seeking constitutional modification to permit the use of policies now inimical to our form of government. That is the issue which the voters will be called upon to decide.

Since we have examined the circumstances from the New Deal side, let us likewise see what the Republicans and other oppositionists are doing. Lately, I have talked with some of the recognized Republican wheel horses. Whether they speak the sentiment of the masses of Republican voters or whether they voiced only their own views is not important here. Political straws do show which way the political winds are blowing. So when these veterans of many political battles say that they welcome the creation by the New Dealers of an issue, they evidently see in the situation worthwhile opportunities. When they say that they are willing to go to the country in defense of the Constitution as it stands and the traditions it represents, they evidently feel they are on firm ground.

As to the Opposition

Much water can go over the dam between now and November, 1936, and much sentiment can be changed in that time. But the Republicans thus far have done very little in the way of building up their case. While they appear to be enthusiastic about their chances against Mr. Roosevelt in 1936, they have thus far failed to develop even a nucleus of an organization.

It may be their strategy not to start their cannonading too early. Indeed, I have heard the thought expressed that it would be unwise to use ammunition too far in advance. At any rate, there have been only a scattered few direct attacks on what certainly must be the issue of 1936, the question of revision or retention of our Constitution. It is to be noted in this connection that those Republicans who have let go with a few shots have been of the ultraconservative type. I think it is generally agreed that the Republican set-up next year will be managed not by the old ultraconservatives but by those who have pulled away to some extent and who are willing to admit that times have changed conditions and a new model, perhaps not streamlined, is necessary.

One argument advanced why Republican leadership has not been more active is that if a start is made too early, the Roosevelt administration will have an opportunity to answer all of the criticism. Said one Republican leader: "We would be utterly foolish to permit the New Dealers to know all of our arguments too far in advance. I, for one, am content to let them proceed with their socialistic regimentation because I know that every time a calf is given too much rope, it chokes itself to death."

G. O. P. Bides Its Time

Then there is another factor which I understand is responsible for the delay in Republican attacks. A good many Republicans have a hope, at least, that a campaign based on a plea for maintenance of our Constitution and the traditions and modes of living which it represents will draw to the Republican candidate a certain segment of Democrats who are unsympathetic with the New Deal. There has been plenty of evidence in the session of congress just adjourned that at heart numerous Democrats lean to the conservative as distinguished from the New Deal method of government. The closing hours of the congressional session seemed to belie this. But anyone who mingled among old time Democrats in the house could not fail to have observed existence of a doubt as to the wisdom of many New Deal policies. Those men were forced to line up behind the Presidential program not because they believed in it fully but for two other reasons. These reasons were: first, they still entertained some fear that if they broke with the President it might mean their political defeat for renomination and re-election, and second, they were harassed and physically and mentally tired and wanted to go home.

The late summer and fall months during which these representatives and senators naturally will be among their constituents is rather likely to provide them with a better knowledge of where they stand. They will come back next January either convinced that they must tie fast to the New Deal or they will be more obstreperous than they have been in the recent session. If the strength appears to be on the Roosevelt side, the next session of congress will be simply a rubber stamp for the Chief Executive. If, on the other hand, they find that the enthusiasm for the New Deal has waned, I think it is fair to predict that the next session of congress will be one of the most troublesome with which any President has yet been confronted.

unters May Have Five Days Pheasant Shooting

TENTATIVE GAME SEASONS ANNOUNCED BY COMMISSION

The Conservation Commission at meeting held August 29th, dis- ed and approved tentative sea- s and bag limits on migratory d fowl, pheasants and quail. The lative regulations now go to pub- hearings where evidence will be en and then adopted by the Com- sion and become law.

Public hearings are to be held the Y.M.C.A. at Mason City, on tember 12th at 8:00 p. m. and New Hampton, in the Knights of lumbus Hall on Sept. 13th at 00 p. m. One hearing was held at encer on September 7th. Three ditional hearings will be held in uthern Iowa according to the nouncement. The dates have not en fixed. Hours for taking migra- y wild fowl was fixed at from 00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m. each day.

Ducks and Geese

The Commission approved the deral regulations on migratory ld fowl, except that rails and odcock were not included in the proved regulations. The federal gratory wild fowl regulations for a provide that 10 duucks, or 4 ese or brant may be taken in any e day during the open season ich has been fixed from October to November 19, both days in- sive. Not more tham 15 mudhens cksnipe or Wilson's snipe may be ken in any one day. The posses- on limit fixed in the Federal re- lations is not to exceed one days limit.

roposed Pheasant Season Longer

The tentative regulations for the king of pheasants provide for 10 ys in some counties according to e announcement. From November to 25 both dates inclusive are e days provided in Lyon, Osceola, ickinson, Emmett and Winnebago unties and those portions of Clay oux, O'Brien, Palo Alto, Kossuth d Hancock counties lying north Federal Highway No. 18.

Five days or from November 16 20, the season would be open in orth, Mitchell, Floyd, Cerro Gor- o, Butler, Grundy, Franklin, Hum- oldt, Wright, Pocohantas, Buena sta, Cherokee, Plymouth, Wood- ry, Ida, Sac, Calhoun, Howard, hickasaw, Bremer, Fayette and Winneshiek counties and those por- ons of Sioux, O'Brien, Clay, Palo lto, Kossuth and Hancock counties ing south of Federal Highway 18 d all those portions of Pottawat- mie, Mills and Fremont Counties ing west of Federal Highway No. 75.

The daily bag limit was propos- d at three birds per day of which mber not more than one may be hen. The possession limit was pproved at two days bag limit or ix birds.

Open Quail Seasons Studied

Under the plan proposed there ould be a 25 day open quail sea- on on Class A Game Management reas where a shootable surplus of ds exists and on farms where the tock of quail is large enough to ermit the surplus to be taken. Farmers must make application to the Commission to have their farm pened to quail hunting. The Com- mission would then have the farm examined to determine the number of quail on their land, before the permit is issued.

The proposed dates would open the season from November 15 to December 10 both dates inclusive and shooting hours would be from 8:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m. each day.

The daily bag limit and possess- ion limit is proposed at 8 birds.

LIBERTY CHURCH PLANS FOR FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

The Liberty Methodist church in Liberty township, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the dedi- cation of the first church on Sun- day, September 22nd. The first church was dedicated on September 20th, 50 years ago. Several former pastors will be present to join in the occasion. Services will be morn- ing afternoon and evening with a basket dinner at noon. Further announcement of the program in next weeks paper. The public is in- vited to join in any or all of the services.

Surprised On Birthday

Miss Novella Bredbenner was pleasantly surprised Friday evening when her mother had several fri- ends in for a six o'clock dinner in honor of Novella's birthday. Her mother had baked a fine birthday cake in honor of the occasion. Those present were the Misses Ruth and Nora Wellemeyer, LaVohn LaVeen and Gladys Zabilka. The girls enjoyed a very pleasant even- ing together.

GOOD JUDGMENT NEEDED IN HOGGING DOWN CORN

Though hogging down corn de- creases the physical labor necessary to finish hogs, good judgment is essential to the application of the method.

Since a large amount of water is required by hogs on full feed, it is important that an abundance of clean drinking water is available, conveniently located, for fattening hogs especially when they become fairly well finished, will not trave long distances to get the water needed for the production of maxi- mum gains.

Use Self-Feeders

Care should be taken to see that hogs continue full feed after they have started. If the supply runs low they should be moved to a new area or additional feed should be given immediately It is better to let sows or young pigs finish up the field, for the fattenng hogs will shrink if the ears in the field become scarce. It is important to use some protiein supplement with standing corn.

If the finished animals are full- fed on corn, properly supplemented they should make profitable gains in the dry lot if they have been do- ing so previously in the corn field. If they do not make gains, the trouble probably is due to a de- crease in the ration when the hogs are removed from the field and placed in the dry lot. A self-feeder can be used to advantage in such cases.

"WHERE YA GONNA HUNT?"

Every hunter should ask himself this question and then go out and see the farmer or landowner where he plans to hunt. Arrangements should be made now. It may be that there is something the farmer would like to have the hunter help him with before the season opens.

How about the arrangements for winter feeding the game and for the posting of certain parts of the farm as closed in order to preserve the seed stock? How about assisting the farmer in controlling the hunt- ing? There are many things to be done prior to the open season, on which many farmers would appre- ciate the hunters help. The farmer does not want to wait until the morning of the opening day to make all these arrangements. He wold like to know who is going to hunt on his land so that he can go about his work without devoting all his time to the protection of his property. Help him out. After all he is the custodian of game and to him you must go to make arrange- ments to take game from his land. Make your arrangements early and assist the Conservation Commission in making the '35 waterfowl, quail and pheasant seasons as orderly as possible.

Commendation and not com- plaint is one of the best assurances of future open seasons.

M. E. AID NEXT THURSDAY

The Methodist Ladies Aid will meet next week Thursday at the church parlors. There will be a comforter to tie so come as early as possible. Election of officers will be held. Hostesses will be Mrs. R. W. Elder, Mrs. John Waddingham, Mrs. Summer Trumbell and Mrs Zabilka. Everyone is requested to come for the election.

RABBIT SEASON OPENS ON SEPTEMBER 15TH

Sunday, September 15, will be greeted by many Iowans as the date marks the opening day for taking rabbits. There are thousands of hunters in the State who hunt only rabbits for their sport and do not care to take any other game. Many a day's bag limit of rabbits has pacified the duck hunter when ducks were not flying. The lowly cottontail furnishes Iowa hunters with a great amount of their sport and for that reason rabbits are pro- tected in certain seasons and their killing regulated. The daily bag limit is set at 15 for any one per- son with the possession limit fixed at two day's bag or 30. The season will close on February 1, 1936.

CCC CAMP OFFERS ASSISTANCE TO DRAINAGE AREAS

Will Co-operate With Farmers In Repair and Maintenance Work

Through an offer made by CCC camp officials at Bancroft, farmers in the various drainage districts of counties located within 30 miles of the camp are being given an oppor- tunity to obtain some much needed repair and maintenance work on their drainage systems, according to G. E. Klipping, chairman of the Board of Supervisors.

Five CCC camps under the direc- tion of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, of which the Bancroft camp is one, have been assigned to Iowa and designated as drainage camps.

As such, the Bancroft CCC camp is able to cooperate with farmers of this and certain adjoining coun- ties in cleaning, repairing and re- building drainage systems in orga- nized and established drainage dis- tricts.

The CCC unit will furnish all the labor and hand tool which may be necessary in connection with the work and farmers will need only to supply the heavy equipment and materials for the projects.

Through this set up it is possible for many drainage districts to have open ditches cleaned and deepened, tile outlets repaired or rebuilt, tile cleaned and repaired, headwalls built or repaired, spoil banks level- ed and other badly needed work done with a very low direct taxa- tion on the district.

"This opportunity is one of which all drainage districts should take advantage. At a slight expense on the part of the fanmers in ad- joining drainage districts a great deal of work can be accomplished which would otherwise be quite impossible," said Klipping. "Word received at the office also indicates that the length of time which the Bancroft camp will be able to spend on drainage work is largely depen- dent upon the cooperation which it received from farmers in this coun- ty."

At the tresent time the camps are authorized for one year's work.

Any farmers or land owners who are interesed in having the CCC camp do some work on their dis- trict should either see the district trustee or one of the supervisors.

At the present time there are open ditches and tiles which need repairing in practically all of the townships in this camp area.

AVERY THEATRE ANNOUNCES CHANGE OF PROGRAM

The picture advertised in the Sept. Avery monthly program for the dates of Sept. 15, 16 and 17 is "The Girl Friend.' This picture Will Not Be Shown on those dates, as W. C. Fields in "Man on the Fly- ing Trapeze" has been substituted. This is one of the funniest pictures shown this season and with W. C. Fields with his own inimitable way of fun making, you are in for a solid hour of laughs and chuckles. "The Girl Friend" will be shown later. With W. C. Fields in "Man on the Flying Trapeze" and Laurel and Hardy in "Thicker than Water" both features on the same program, it is surely a treat the Avery pat- rons cannot afford to miss. Bring the family to this fun fest.

Nova Koerner, Orville Stokesbary Married By Former Schoolmate

At the home of Rev. Harvey Nel- son at Lakota, Iowa, on Thursday afternoon, September 5th, occured the marriage of Miss Nova Koerner and Mr. Orville Stokesbary, young Klemme couple. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Glen Bridges, Klemme.

The Bride wore a dress of green silk and her attendant wore black silk crepe. The groom wore a gray suit and the best man wore an Ox- ford gray suit.

Mrs. Stokesbary, who is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Koerner of Klemme, gradua- ted from the Klemme High School in 1932 Mr. Stokesbary, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Stokesbary of Klemme graduated in 1928. Rev. Harvey Nelson was a classmate of Mr. Stokesbary and also graduated from the local high school in 1928.

Both of these young people are well known in our community as both have lived here all of their life. They have a wide acquaintance of young friends who extend to them best wishes for a long and happy married life.

They will continue their resi- dence in Klemme and are living at the Koerner home. Mr. Stokesbary is assisting Mr. Koerner with farm work and dairying.

The Times joins with their many friends in extending congratula- tions!

Kings Heralds Had Picnic

The Kings Heralds met at the Methodist church Saturday after- noon and had a picnic which closed their year's activities. A fine time was enjoyed playing games after which lunch was served. Mrs. C. A. Arnold is the leader of this group.

Glen Parks of Seattle has brought suit to have the marriage of his son Earl annulled, on the ground that the bride hypnotized the young man into marriage. But Mr. Parks ought to know that this is an old feminine custom, sanctioned by precedent from time immemorial.

What manner of men were these thers of the Republic"? What was their aration for their great work? Under t circumstances did they bring into ex- nce one of the most important charters government in all history? What did think of the fruits of their labor after had finished?

ese and other questions which naturally to mind as we celebrate Constitution are answered in this article.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

T WAS hot in Philadelphia that summer of 1787—one of the hottest the little city had ever known. And of all its 20,000 inhabitants none suffered more discomfort than a little group of 40 or 50 men who gathered every day in a small room in the State house and sweltering there behind closed windows and closed doors wrestled with the tremendous task of saving a new nation from chaos.

For indeed the fortunes of the States of America had about reached lowest ebb. Only 15 members, represent- ren states, were attending the sessions of ontinental congress, which was making a effort, under the authority given it by the es of Confederation, to function as a gov- body. Measure after measure was pro- in congress to provide funds for govern- expenses but most of these failed for lack necessary nine votes. Even when the ere passed the states treated the demands them for funds with the greatest indiffer- In fact, a more appropriate name for the at that time would have been the Dis- States of America.

soldiers of the disbanded army which had he fight for freedom from England were and in an ugly mood. They wanted their , long overdue, and large numbers of them d outside the city and began threatening ne the building where the congress was g unless their demands were met. Pres- the situation became so threatening that ongress had to flee from Philadelphia to eton, N. J., where it sat for a while, then on to New York.

n New York the congress authorized the g of a constitutional convention and called states to send delegates to such a meeting lladelphia "to take into consideration the ion of the United States, to revise the Artl- f Confederation and to devise such further lons as should appear to them necessary der the Constitution of the federal gov- nt adequate to the exigencies of the ." Each state could send as many dele- as it pleased, since each was to have but ollective vote.

ll the states only Rhode Island, which had t odds with the federal government almost the beginning, refused to send any dele- at all and, consistent with its attitude, it e last to ratify the Constitution after one nally adopted. New Hampshire was in of the meeting but because of lack of its delegates did not arrive until the con- n was well under way.

gether 72 of the leading citizens of the 13 were accredited as delegates although f them failed or refused to go. Outstand- mong the latter was Patrick Henry, the orator of the Revolution, who was sus- of the purposes of the convention. Or, phrased it, "I smelt a rat!" Of the 72 ac- ed delegates, 55 took part in the delibera- of the convention at one time or another nly 39 stayed on the job until the end. were the following:

NNECTICUT—Roger Sherman and William nson.

LAWARE—Richard Bassett, Gunning Bed- Jr., Jacob Broom, John Dickinson and e Read.

ORGIA—Abraham Baldwin and William

RYLAND—Daniel Carroll, Daniel Jenifer ames McHenry.

SSACHUSETTS—Nathaniel Gorman and King.

W HAMPSHIRE—Nicholas Gilman and Langdon.

W JERSEY—David Breasley, Jonathan n, William Livingston and William Pat-

W YORK—Alexander Hamilton.

RTH CAROLINA—William Blount, Richard ight and Hugh Williamson.

NNSYLVANIA—George Clymer, Thomas mmons, Benjamin Franklin, Jared Inger- soll, Thomas Mifflin, Gouverneur Morris, Robert Morris and James Wilson.

SOUTH CAROLINA—Pierce Butler, Charles Pinckney, Charles C. Pinckney and John Rudledge.

VIRGINIA—John Blair, James Madison and George Washington.

Of this number more than half, 21, were lawyers. Six are classified as "statesmen," three were farmers, landowners or planters, three were merchants, two bankers or "financiers," one an educator, two physicians and one a soldier. Most of them were well educated. Nine of them had studied in the Inner Temple or the Middle Temple in England, one at Oxford under Blackstone and two in Scottish universities. Half of the delegates were graduates of American or European colleges, three were professors and one, Dr. William S. Johnson, was president of Columbia college, on leave of absence to act as delegate from Connecticut.

Moreover it was a convention of young men. The patriarch Benjamin Franklin was then eighty-one years old, but 20 of the 55 were under forty years of age. Jonathan Dayton of New Jersey was the "baby" of the convention—only twenty-seven years old. Charles Pinckney, who submitted the first draft of the Constitution, was only two years his elder. Alexander Hamilton of New York, destined to play a leading role in the convention but a more important one in securing the ratification of the Constitution, was barely thirty, and James Madison, who would become known as the "Father of the Constitution," was thirty-six.

John Marshall, then only thirty-two years old, was not a delegate to the convention. But because of his part in securing the ratification of the Constitution and the work he did as chief justice of the United States later in interpreting it and strengthening the federal foundations of the government by means of it, he is entitled to a high place among the "Makers of the Constitution."

The date set for the opening of the convention was the second Monday in May. The roads of that time were poor and travel was expensive and slow, so it was not until two weeks later that the first meeting was held.

The convention met formally for the first time on Friday, May 25, although only a few more than half the delegates had arrived by that time. Seven states were represented at this meeting, according to one authority; according to another, there were nine. Whatever the number, those present got down to business at once by electing a presiding officer. Benjamin Franklin, because of his age and the fact that this was his home city, was the logical choice for this position but he graciously waived that honor and suggested the choice of George Washington, the late commander in the struggle for liberty.

Washington's election was unanimous and he presided throughout the convention with his usual dignity. His chair was on a raised platform and it was a rule of the sessions that the members should stand at their places, upon adjourning, until he had preceded them from the room. Occasionally the great Virginian yielded the chair and took the floor as a Virginia delegate to express his views on the question at issue.

On Monday, May 28, the convention entered upon the business for which it had been called and from that time until September 17 these men struggled daily with their great task in that stuffy room in the old State house, suffering terribly from the heat and—it must be admitted!—also suffering from weariness with the long speeches of some of the delegates. One of them actually spread his speech over a period of two days, to the disgust of his audience, and while others were not so long-winded as he, they made up for it by the frequency with which they spoke.

Debate, argument, controversy, bitterness over clashing personalities and viewpoints—all of these characterized the convention which finally produced the Constitution of the United States. Nor was the sultry weather conducive to serenity and judicial consideration of momentous problems. More than once the convention threatened to break up and if it had it might have meant the end of the federal union. But more than once wise old Ben Franklin acted as peacemaker and saved the situation.

Once he tided the convention over a deadlock by suggesting that the delegates seek guidance in prayer. This brought from Hamilton the caustic remark that "no foreign aid was needed," a remark that was something of a fling at Franklin's well-known fondness for the French. When another crisis came Franklin suggested a temporary adjournment and along with the recess came a proverbial drop in the temperature in which tempers cooled both literally and figuratively.

The greater part of the controversy revolved around three principal plans of government—the Virginia plan, sponsored by Madison, which safeguarded the rights of the states; the New York plan, sponsored by Hamilton, which looked to a strong centralized federal government; and the New Jersey plan, which was in the nature of a compromise between the two. Eventually the substance of the Virginia plan, with its 15 "resolutions" expanded to 23, won out.

On July 26 the convention turned over the job of making a final draft of the complete Constitution to a "committee on detail" and adjourned until August 26. While doing this the committee embodied some suggestions of its own in the document. Then the delegates returned to their labors, studying and debating every line and every sentence with the greatest care, fixing exact definitions wherever necessary, making alterations and compromising differences in phraseology. Finally it was turned over to a "committee on style" which polished up the phraseology. Out of that committee, headed by Gouverneur Morris, came the sonorous "We, the People of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, etc."

Later the final draft of the Constitution was gone over again for there were still delegates opposed to one or another aspect of it. Indeed there were some who refused to be satisfied with it and who refused to sign it.

Gouverneur Morris won over several obstinate members with his suggestion that the delegates approve the Constitution as states even though they personally refused to sign it and at last all those present except Gerry, Mason and Randolph signed. Despite the fact that their great task was ended the delegates adjourned in gloom and with a feeling of doubt as to the outcome. Not even the words of Benjamin Franklin, as the last members were signing, could entirely reassure them. Pointing to the sun that was painted on the back of the president's chair, he said: "I have often and often in the course of the sessions and the vicissitudes of my hopes and fears as to its issue looked at that behind the president without being able to tell whether it was rising or setting. But now at length I have the happiness to know that it was a rising and not a setting sun."

And history justified Franklin's prophecy. For from that date 148 years ago a new sun in the constellation of nations has been rising steadily to its zenith. Its name is the United States of America.

SCHOOL LUNCHEONS

If the children cannot come home to lunch and there are no luncheon facilities at the school, remember that tempting food, attractively packed in the lunch kit, will whet lagging appetites.

This measuring stick will help you to be sure that the box lunch is a nourishing meal:

1. Milk.
2. Hot beverage or soup.
3. Sandwiches or salad and bread and butter.
4. A simple dessert (raw fruit whenever possible).

The first two items may be combined in a cream soup, vegetable soup with added milk, or a hot flavored-milk drink.—Good Housekeeping Institute.

Dainty Edelweiss Called Bride's Flower of Europe

According to Swiss stories, only the brave and the pure may find and pluck the edelweiss, a little white star-shaped mountain flower, notes a writer in the Washington Star.

Many poems and songs have been written about the little flower which grows high up in the Alps and the Pyrenees, and perhaps it is because of these stories that the edelweiss has won the reputation of growing only in remote and inaccessible places where he who would pick it must be daring to venture.

Only part of these legends are true, for the edelweiss is grown in many English and American gardens. It is a hardy little flower, kin to our daisy and black-eyed susan, and it flourishes with very slight encouragement.

On the other hand, left to its own devices, the edelweiss takes only to its favorite mountain heights, where it wears a little fuzzy coat as if for warmth against the icy mountain blasts. High up on rocky cliffs. it thrusts its roots into the cracks of limestone rocks and blossoms in a profusion of starry white flowers surrounded by wooly leaves. Its center is clustered and yellow.

But whenever and wherever it is domesticated, it invariably doffs its fuzzy cloak of hair and assumes the more commonplace texture of its garden neighbors.

Because of its romantic history the edelweiss has been much sought and much picked, until now it is protected by law in most of the Swiss cantons. Like the orange blossom in the United States, it is the bride's flower of Europe—a symbol of purity. Literally translated, its name means "noble white."

Goths, Teutonic People, Warlike and Unsettled

The Goths were a Teutonic people who in the First century A. D. appear to have inhabited the middle part of the basin of Vistula river, in what is now Poland. They were probably the easternmost of the Teutonic peoples, says the Boston Post.

According to their own traditions, they had come originally from what is believed to be Sweden. They do not enter into Roman history until the Third century when their frontier seems to have advanced considerably farther south. The Gothic peoples were warlike and not very settled, consequently they had probably not developed agriculture to any great extent.

From the Third century until well into the Seventh century the Goths were constantly at war with the Romans, and a great part of the Roman territory was conquered by the Goths, who were in turn overcome by the Roman culture, and the Gothic identity therefore disappeared.

Bakers Dozen

The "baker's dozen," which means 13 instead of the regular 12, had its origin in England long ago. Then, as in many countries at the present time, bread was sold by weight. But many bakers would "short-weight" their customers and a heavy penalty was inflicted for this practice. The city of London made a special provision for such cases. After the baker had weighed out the order the law said that he should add another piece of bread so that there would be no chance of dispute as to the quantity purchased and thus the risk of incurring the line would be avoided. Thus 12 pieces of bread and tbe one extra which was added for surety's sake came to be known as the "baker's dozen." The thirteenth was known as the "vantage loaf," and the expression "baker's dozen" is still used in both England and America to mean good measure.

Travels of Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln's first American ancestor with the name Lincoln settled in New England. The last male descendant of President Lincoln bearing the name died in New England. Thus the story of eight generations of American Lincolns opens and closes in a New England setting, says Lincoln Lore. Abraham Lincoln made two visits to New England. one in 1848 and the other in the spring of 1860. One was a political mission in the interest of the Whig party, and the other, which had as its objective a visit to his son, Robert, then in school in New Hampshire, should also be set down to Lincoln's political advantage.

Can Grow New Parts

Spiders grow new legs with no apparent pain or difficulty, snails can replace eye-bearing tentacles when they are lost, lizards grow new tails and jaws, crabs new claws, and some few creatures can even replace lost heads, says Pathfinder Magazine. Among the warm-blooded animals, however, these regenerative abilities are very limited. Most young birds are able to grow new beaks, but the ability takes its most outstanding form in humans in the growing of new fingernails.

Ancient Marriage Proposal

One of the oldest recorded proposals of marriage in the world was found by members of the German Institute of Archeology working in Anatolia. The message, from the widow of the Pharaoh Tut-Ankh-Amen to the Hittite King Shuppiluliumash, reads: "I am very young and beautiful. I do not desire remarriage with a man of my own country. Send me one of thy sons, and after marriage with me I shall make him King of Egypt."—Tit-Bits Magazine.

NEW U. S. GOLD VAULT

Having become possessed of the world's largest stock of gold, Uncle Sam is now preparing to take extraordinary measures to protect it from possible seizure by an invading nation. The bulk of this vast treasure is to be placed in a new vault to be erected on the military reservation of Fort Knox, Ky.

This location in the interior of the country was selected as being more difficult of access than one near the seacoast, while the vault itself is virtually impregnable. The construction for which a contract was recently let, will be of granite, concrete and steel, and capable of withstanding bombs or other explosive forces which might be directed against it.

In addition to the protection afforded by the vault itself, there will be a force of guards, equipped with machine guns, electric warming devices, flood lights and every modern means for insuring safety.

The nation's hoard of gold and silver is at present valued at more than nine billion dollars. The new vault will no doubt prevent anyone from stealing it, but something stronger would be required to keep the government from spending it.

It is a curious historical fact that the five presidents of then United States who have died in office were elected at 20-year intervals—in 1840, 1860, 1880, 1900 and 1920. Now we wonder if this peculiar series of happenings will cause superstitious aspirants to refrain from becoming candidates in 1940.

Languages of the World

Including all of its various dialects, Chinese is spoken by about 400,000,000 persons and is the most used language. Various languages are spoken in India, Hindustani being used by some 100,000,000. English is the second most commonly used language, spoken by some 180,000,000; then Russian with 140,000,000; German 110,000,000; French, 70,000,000; Portuguese, 60,000,000; Japanese, 53,000,000; Spanish and Italian, each 50,000,000; Polish, 10,000,000. These are the estimates made by Whitaker's Almanac, which gives the number of different languages spoken in the world as about 5,000.

Mathematical Ability

Rare mathematical ability is not always dependent on education. Some prodigies have been illiterate, others have known nothing of the principles of mathematics. Johann Dase (1824-1861), the greatest mental mathematical marvel in history, had no understanding of the fundamentals of mathematics, yet he could multiply two 100-figure numbers in his head in a very short time.—G. P. Elliott, Arlington, California, in Collier's Weekly.

Test Your Love

A good old Scotch custom for determining love affairs consisted of taking two nuts, bestowing on one your own name and on the other the name of your beloved, putting them on the fire, and watching how they burn. Should they burn quietly, side by side, then the issue of your love affair will be prosperous; but if one starts away from the other, the result will be unfavorable.

Heating Government Buildings

Practically all government-owned buildings in the District of Columbia which come under the supervision of the national park service are heated from a central plant. In some of the buildings rented by the government, heat is furnished from independent plants within the respective buildings.

New York Stock Exchange a "Gentlemen's Agreement"

The New York Stock exchange is a voluntary association of some 1,100 members, not incorporated, and has a written constitution, says the Indianapolis News. A president, a secretary and a governing committee of forty members, with absolute power, are the chief functionaries. It is housed near where 24 brokers met under a cottonwood tree opposite No. 60 Wall street. May 17, 1792, and signed an agreement as to the rates of commission to be charged. This association met irregularly at the Tontine coffee house, Wall and Water streets, and in 1817 a stock exchange along present lines was developed. In 1827 it was located at Merchants' exchange in Wall street, on the site of the old custom house. Thence, in 1854, after having moved to 43 Wall street and back again, it found a place at William and Wall streets; in 1856 at Lord's court, at William and Beaver streets, and in 1865 at Broad, New and Wall streets.

In 1869 it absorbed the Open Board of Brokers, and after the demise of the Gold board in 1879, bought the latter's premises and enlarged its own structure. Memberships or seats pass by sale, if the applicant is approved by the membership committee.

The price of a seat rose from something over $2,000 in 1871 to $34,000 in 1882, dropped to $20,000 in 1892 and since that time it has touched the $95,000 mark. The business of the exchange is by word of mouth, and dependent on individual good faith. A member's seat is responsible for his debts to the other members, in case of his failure.

Spaniels "Allrounders" in Hunting Dog Family

Spaniels are all members of one family, but a close study of their history fails to reveal any earlier mention of this active, sporting dog than that in Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales"; "For as a spaynel she wol on him lepe."

From this point, writes Maj. Mitford Brice in Answers Magazine, there are innumerable references to spaniels in books, and the household records of Henry VIII mention money paid to "Robin, the King's Majesty's Spaniel Keeper," for "hair cloth to rub spaniels with."

The most authoritative of all the ancient books is the "Treatise of Englishe Dogges," by Queen Elizabeth's physician, Doctor Caius, founder of Caius college, Cambridge. This was written in Latin in 1570, and the "Aquaticus or Spaniell which findeth game on the water" figures as one of the two headings under which all dogs are classified.

There scarcely exists a more popular breed than the merry Cocker or Cocking Spaniel, who, as a result of his great usefulness in woodcock shooting, acquired this name in 1870. Even though he prefers hunting to retrieving, his allround ability and hardiness are not easily surpassed.

Conch Used as Fish Horn

A musical blast on an enormous conch shell announces Bermuda fish peddlers. Now and then they give the shell a lusty toot, so that every housewife within a mile has time to run down to the roadside before they arrive. Most popular sea-food in the winter are spiny lobsters, large crawfish caught at night among the coral reefs. Their antennae often have a span of four feet, and their meat is so delicious that the supply barely fills local demands. Next to lobster in the favor of Bermudians are rock-fish, hamlet and other fish suitable for chowders. Recipes for this fish vary throughout the islands, resembling New England dinners in their diverse contents.

West Highland White Terrier

The West Highland white terrier, a small dog standing 8 to 12 inches at the shoulder and weighing 14 to 18 pounds, is distinctive because of his long, shaggy, white coat. This coat should be about 2½ inches long, hard and straight, with a dense, furry undercoat. The ears are small, pointed and erect; the eyes medium-sized, dark hazel, slightly sunk in the head and widely set apart; the tail 5 or 6 inches long, straight and held gayly in the air. The nose, roof of mouth and pads of feet are distinctly black in color. The dog has an appearance of a small, game, hardy terrier, strongly built, deep in chest and back ribs, straight back and powerful quarters on muscular legs.

Taller in the Morning

You're a bit taller in the morning than you are in the evening. You see, there are discs of cartilage—elastic-like substance—between the pieces that make up your backbone. During the day these discs are compressed by the weight of the body, and you shrink a little. During your night's rest the discs expand again and you regain your full height. With a grown man the difference between morning and evening height is half an inch or more. —Pearson's Weekly.

Electron and Positron

An electron is not so much a material particle carrying an electric charge as it is an ultimate particle of negative electricity itself. Consequently it could hardly be charged positively. There is, however, a somewhat similar but nevertheless distinct particle known as the positron, or positive electron. It has the same weight as the electron and a charge of equal magnitude but opposite sign.—Chicago Tribune.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY

By VIC YARDMAN

© Associated Newspapers. WNU Service.

"BALDY" MONTGOMERY rode into Devil's Gap with but a single purpose in mind: To satisfy the craving of six months for excitement in large and frequent quantities. For six long months he had nursed cows in a lonely range camp on the land of the Double O Bar cattle outfit. Six months of storing up a surplus of desire and craving for the best excitement that Devil's Gap could offer.

Baldy was new in the country, but brother cow waddies of the Double O Bar had advised him that Devil's Gap could satisfy any man's longing for diversion from the monotonous task of nursing cows and long-horned steers.

Hence the youth's spirits soared as the outlying buildings of the squat little town reared themselves on the horizon. With something like smug satisfaction on his features, he patted the bulge in his overall's pocket, a bulge which represented a little more than $200 in nice, crisp greenbacks. Six months wages! And six months of stored-up energy with which to spend it.

Baldy clucked to his tired mount and waved in friendly fashion as he passed the first dwelling and beheld an aged native sucking contentedly on his pipe before the door stoop.

Minutes later he was passing down the town's main street, with false-fronted business houses on either hand. His eye caught a sign, suggesting that behind a pair of green, swinging doors liquid refreshments could be had for the asking. Eagerly he turned his mount in that direction.

At his approach, a few loungers on the veranda of the saloon leaped suddenly to their feet and peered at him in excited fashion. Abruptly, one of them jerked out his six-shooter, deliberately aimed it and fired. Baldy's ten-gallon sombrero left his head and went soaring down the street, revealing the egg-like cerebellium from which the cowboy derived his sobriquet.

"It's him!" yelled one of the loungers. "It's him!"

The cry was repeated and relayed inside the saloon. More men appeared on the veranda. A fusillade of shots began to hum and whiz about Baldy's ears.

Baldy's first reaction was that the thing was a joke, that this was the Devil's Gap manner of greeting him. But when one of the bullets nipped a button off his shirt front, he changed his mind. These hombres were in dead earnest, no mistake.

Without pausing to give the matter immediate thought, Baldy leaped from the back of his sorrel and sprinted for the safety of a rubbish pile across the way. Bullets kicked up little dust clouds at his feet.

Once ensconced in temporary safety behind the boxes and barrels, Baldy produced his own six-shooter and began to take pot shots at whatever parts of human anatomy were visible on the saloon veranda. The odds, however, were very much against him. He knew he'd have to get out of there, and get out of there fast, if he desired to retain a whole hide, which he very much wished to do.

For just an instant Baldy thought of the peace and quiet of the Double O Bar range, and wished he were back there. Then his eye glimpsed an alley-way beyond the rubbish pile, and he decided to make a break in that direction.

After weighing his chances, briefly, he decided that the present was as good a time as any. His first leap carried him almost to the alley entrance. His next leap completed the journey. And, then, abruptly, he stopped. A half dozen men, guns ready, were crouched in the alley-way.

At sight of him they let up a shout and leaped forward. Baldy didn't have a chance. He was disarmed and bound before he could repeat his name twice. From across the street an angry mob of men swarmed from the saloon. They set up joyous shouts of glee at sight of the helpless victim, and laid ungentle hands upon him.

Baldy found himself being led down the main street of the town toward a cottonwood, with a rope around his neck. The purpose of the mob was plain. And it was plain also that they had mistaken him for some one else, a fact which they didn't, for one moment, seem to take into consideration. Baldy made one desperate attempt to explain who he was, and received a belt across his mouth that rattled his teeth. Thereafter he remained silent.

One end of the rope was thrown over a limb of the cottonwood. Baldy was placed atop his own mount, and the rope drawn tight.

"Baldy Simmons," said the spokesman of the group, "If you know how to pray, start now. You've led a low-down, mean life. In hanging, you till you're dead, we're doing a service to humanity that can never be repaid. Boys, pull the rope!"

Baldy opened his mouth for one last, frantic appeal. But at that moment, from the other end of the street, a hoarse shout was heard. Horsemen, riding hell-bent, guns drawn threateningly, were bearing down on the lynching party. The man who held the rope dropped it and set up a shout.

"It's Baldy's henchmen! Come to rescue him! Get to cover, everyone!"

There was a mad scramble. Baldy suddenly found himself alone, with a ferocious looking bunch of horsemen riding like mad in his general direction. As the horsemen drew near, the concealed lynching party opened fire. The riders returned bullet for bullet. Leaden slugs for the second time began to whistle and hum about Baldy's ears. Then, suddenly he felt the rope about his neck grow slack. The thongs that bound his wrists dropped away. The sorrel leaped forward.

Hardly aware of what was taking place, Baldy grasped the reins and guided his mount behind the protecting shelter of a group of buildings. The sorrel seemed to appreciate the seriousness of his task, and stretched out in a dead run, pointing his nose toward the Double O Bar and the lonely range camp.

Behind him Baldy heard the continued fighting of the lynching party and the raiders. The firing grew fainter and fainter, eventually fading into nothingness.

At length, Baldy drew the racing sorrel to a halt, rubbed his chafed wrists, heaved a great and vast sigh of relief and rolled himself a brown paper cigarette.

"Well," he soliloquized, "I'll be d—d!"

He turned once to stare back in the general direction of Devil's Gap, and shook his head.

"Giddup," he said, speaking to the sorrel. "I've had my six months of pent-up desire for excitement satisfied in six short minutes. We're going home and get the craving all over again."

The sorrel whinnied understandingly and, despite its fatigue, set off at a rapid trot. Both horse and rider seemed eager to reach once more the peace and quiet of the Double O Bar range.

Time Saved in Producing Disease-Resistant Plants

To satisfy the urgent and often frantic demands of canners and seedsmen for vegetables resistant to disease—but of good quality—federal plant breeders are developing new varieties in about one-third the usual time by growing several generations in one year. Wilt-resistant peas and mosaic-tolerant beans are examples. In 1934 investigators in the United States Department of Agriculture were able to produce four generations of beans—three in the greenhouse and one in the field, and four generations of peas—one in the greenhouse and three in the field.

Ordinarily 15 to 20 generations are needed to produce a resistant variety, fix the type and increase it to where there is seed enough for commercial distribution. With only one generation a year, growers are in distress, because invasion of disease, may be forced to abandon certain lands or the crop itself before the plant breeder can give aid.

To develop pure strains of quality, it usually is necessary to cross with less desirable—but resistant—types, and then make repeated selections for seven to twelve generations. Most of this can be done in the greenhouse until the production of seed in quantities begins.

Rapid increase of the seed outdoors may be done in a number of interesting ways. Growing seed crops south of the equator during northern winters is theoretically the best, but high costs, long sea voyages, and local unfamiliarity with American varieties are drawbacks. American peas have been successfully grown in New Zealand, and growing off-season crops in Argentina or other southern countries has been investigated.

Three generations of peas can even be grown in North America in one year, by harvesting in Mexico in March, in California in June and in Colorado in time for planting in Mexico in November.

The problem of growing and harvesting more than one generation of beans a year without greenhouse conditions, is more difficult, as they are sensitive to low temperatures.

Puppet Shows

Puppet shows were common among the Greeks, from whom the Romans received them. Xenophon, Aristotle, Gellius, Horace and others mention them. Such exhibitions, which are so pleasing to children and the uneducated, have naturally passed through various degrees of perfection in different ages. In 1674 there was a puppet opera at Paris which met with great applause.

Ancients Used Paint

Paint was, and still is, one of the most durable of decorative finishes. In ancient Egyptian tombs, wood furniture and mummy cases have been discovered that are still in good condition although they were painted over 5,000 years ago. Often wall paintings are found intact, where unpainted wood and stone have disintegrated.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS IN DIET

Their Minerals and Vitamins Are Necessary.

By EDITH M. BARBER

IT'S the fashion nowadays, and a very good fashion, to stress the use of fruits and vegetables in the diet, because of their minerals and vitamins. Important as these are, what would we do without bread? We use it nowadays because we like it, but when we eat it we are supplying ourselves with valuable nourishment.

While we think of bread ordinarily as "energy" food, it supplies us with a worthwhile amount of protein for muscle building. As almost all bread is made with milk, we get additional value from it. Bread is one of our most inexpensive foods.

Although most bread is used with butter as an accessory with meals, all leftover bread should be put to good use in connection with other materials. There is no reason for wasting even a crumb of this excellent food.

Mexican Salad.

¼ cup olive oil
3 slices onion
1 clove garlic or 3 slices onion
1 cup diced bread
½ cup diced celery
1 pimiento
1 cup diced potato
½ cup shaved onion
½ cup finely shaved raw carrot
2 tablespoons green pepper
1 cup cooked beans
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chili powder
2 tablespoons vinegar

Heat one tablespoon of olive oil and add the clove of garlic or three slices of onion. In this cook the diced bread until light brown. Remove garlic and add the rest of the oil, the vegetables, seasoning and vinegar. Serve in a large salad bowl with lettuce or watercress.

Meat Timbales.

1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 cup milk
4 tablespoons butter
1 cup finely minced chicken, veal or ham
Salt and pepper
2 egg whites

Cook bread crumbs and milk to a smooth paste over a low fire, stirring constantly. Add butter, meat and seasoning to taste. Fold in the beaten whites of eggs. Fill small greased individual molds two-thirds full. Set in pan of hot water and bake until firm in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) for about twenty minutes. Turn out on serving dish and surround with eggs, mushroom or cheese sauce and garnish with sprig of celery.

Vegetables With Crumbs.

¾ cup fine, dry crumbs
4 tablespoons butter

Melt one tablespoon butter, and when very hot add crumbs. Stir over fire until light brown, then add remaining butter. Serve hot over broccoli, carrots, beets, cabbage, onions or cauliflower.

Stuffed Onions.

Peel six medium-sized onions, parboil them for five minutes, throw them into cold water and drain. Scoop out the center of each onion and fill the cavity with a stuffing of sausage meat and bread crumbs. Arrange the onions side by side in a pan, dredge with a little sugar, lay a slice of bacon over each and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) until the onions are tender and browned, about twenty minutes, and the bacon is crisp.

New Peas.

Shell the peas just before cooking them and cook covered in just as little water as possible over a low flame. With a heavy saucepan not more than one-fourth cup of water will be needed for any quantity. When tender, in about fifteen to twenty-five minutes, add two tablespoons of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Little salt is needed when peas are cooked this way.

Special Sauce.

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
2 teaspoons salt
Pepper
2 egg yolks
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Melt the butter, add the flour and stir until well blended; then add the milk, salt and pepper and bring to the boiling point. Stir a little of the hot mixture into the egg yolks and add. Stir well and add the rest of the butter bit by bit and the lemon juice.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

RESTORING and ornamenting fine old linens is both interesting and practical. It does not signify returning the articles to their original uses, but to others, equally good, and making the designs woven in the damask serve as needlecraft patterns. In almost every home there are tablecloths which have worn places in them which render the damask unfit for this use, although most, or at least a good proportion of the linen is firm and good. It is these strong portions that are excellent for napkins, centerpieces, doilies, cocktail napkins, etc. By ornamenting the articles with embroidery in outline stitches of any preferred sort, they become distinctive, especially when the work follows the pattern motifs of the damask.

Damask Embroidery.

This damask pattern decoration is unique, and gives a certain charm and point to the embroidery. The articles should be so cut that one complete design unit comes at one of the corners of each napkin. Use fine embroidery medium, and fine outline stitches and work the outline of the unit, being very careful to follow each smallest curve and angle of the pattern. The medium should be in contrast to the whiteness of the linen, so that the tracery of the design is well defined, and delicate. For centerpieces and runners, select one of the chief pattern units and outline each one over the entire surface wherever it appears.

Floral designs lend themselves delightfully to this work, so also do leaf and foliage designs. Geometric patterns are not quite so attractive in this style of decoration but even they are good.

One of the decided advantages of this work that is sure to appeal is that the material itself supplies the embroidery design. It is all ready without any transferring or stamping of the design. Moreover, in damasks the weave in background and design differs, and the embroidered outline accents by its inclosure this inherent beauty of the material.

A Smart Set.

A grape leaf design was effectively brought out by this outlining in a set of table linen I saw recently. A friend was restoring some old napery by the method I have described. Green silk embroidery was used for the outlining of the handsome linen set once her grandmother's long tablecloth.

A dozen and a half 26 inch square napkins resulted from her work—measurements after hemming. Smaller and more worn clothes cannot be expected to supply so many, or else the napkins would be much smaller in size. Regular napkins should be no less than 18 inches square. Tea napkins may be smaller, so it happens that large napkins may be cut down for small napkins and doilies and for cocktail napkins. Filet or cluny lace is a good edge for round centerpieces and doilies, for runners and square centerpieces.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Off in the Mountains
Communists Would Weep
Congress Goes Home
Disobedient Twice

McCLOUD, CALIF.

This is far off in the mountains; telegraph office closed, you feel like an incurable "shut-in." But Jack Adams is here, an old-time telegrapher who can make a message go from anywhere to anywhere, and find wires to carry it. He will "dig up" Percy Thomas, another old-time telegrapher in the Universal Service office in San Francisco, 350 miles down the coast, and this unimportant message will go to many newspapers in many cities, just as though it were news from Ethiopia, or some dear little Hollywood lady's explanation of what caused her to separate from "Jack, but we are, and always shall be, the best of friends."

Arthur Brisbane

This is a city that would make a good Communist gnash his teeth, shatter them, hurry to Lenin's tomb, mumble Marxian prayers and butt his head against the walls of the Kremlin.

First, the whole city belongs to the lumber company. Nobody else owns or can own a house or any other property.

But no worker is idle, rents are low, prices in the company store are lower than in any big city, and for mountain climbing your narrator bought wonderful heavy socks, striped alternately red, white and blue, patriotic enough to make a true Communist mount his soap box and ask the crowd, if any, what the world is coming to.

It is good news that congress has gone home at last, really and truly gone home to stay, heaven permitting, until early next year.

Until the fire is out, and you count the furniture carried out on the lawn, you cannot know just what the fire has done to you. This session of congress seems to have been a pretty good fire. The San Francisco Examiner tells you that congress spent, in its short life, just $10,256,258,928.06, or, spelled out, ten billions two hundred and fifty-six millions two hundred and fifty-eight thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight dollars and six cents. Who do you suppose got the six cents?

Congress disobeyed the President only twice in the session. The senate refused to put this country in the World court. Can you imagine what that World court would do to us now, in connection with this Ethiopian marauding expedition?

Second, congress, in both houses, overrode the supposed wish of the President by passing a neutrality resolution, making it mandatory for the President to forbid shipments of ammunition to any nation at war.

Ethiopian rains are ending for this year and Mussolini is ready to go shopping for African land. France and England, now virtuously indignant, have taken almost everything, but the cool, high tablelands of Ethiopia offer good territory for Italians.

To other nations Mussolini says: "Keep your hands off unless you want a war in Europe. Let me do my fighting in Africa. Know when you are well off." He knows that France wants no war; that England, still digesting the anaconda supper of the last war, could not send her young men to war, even if she were foolish enough to want war. The young men would not fight.

You know, now, why Mussolini assembled half a million fighting men, that could not possibly be needed for an Ethiopian foray that airships can attend to. He wanted Europe to know that he was ready for a real war if anybody wanted it.

California's vigilante attack on extreme radicals is thoroughly organized, under a central command, with details of handpicked rifle marksmen, intelligence squads, and strong armed squads.

The American Civil Liberties union will bring suit on behalf of alleged Communists, tarred and feathered, and offers $1,000 reward for the conviction of any vigilant of felony.

The vigilantes declare their intention to wear no masks or disguise, saying, "We shall pick up our men in broad daylight. The whole country is behind us."

More interesting than anything in the northern part of California, only 50 miles from the Oregon border, is tall, snow-covered Mount Shasta, rising toward the sky more than 14,000 feet.

When you travel be sure to visit that mountain. You will find it worth while. All around its foot the great pines and firs are crowding, as though seeking refuge and protection from the giant sawmill and its 1,200 men that eat trees by the hundreds of thousands every year.

Aircraft and Radio Aid in Battle on Forest

Increasing use is being made of radio and aircraft in protecting our national forests from fire. In the forest service of the United States Department of Agriculture. Both airplane and radio aided in apprehending a firebug from the air in a case recently reported in New York conservation department.

A man was seen starting a forest fire by Albert Leo-Wolf, forest service plane pilot. He reported by radio and later located his man at a log cabin by cabin. This information also was radioed, resulting in the arrest, conviction, and sentence of the culprit.

Approximately 1,000 radio sets for emergency communication in national forests are in use this year. These include several types developed for forest use by forest service technicians. Many of them are of the "featherweight" type that can be carried and quickly set up by "smoke chasers" at the scene of a fire. Two planes are being used in several of the national-forest regions for fire scouting, reconnaissance of "smoke" fires, and for emergency transportation of men and supplies.

Tortured with Itching Pimples

Relieved After Using Cuticura

"My face was a mass of pimples due to some external irritation, and I was in agony for three months. The pimples were hard, red and large and were scattered all over my face. I was tortured with the itching and it kept me awake.

"I used many remedies, but to no avail. A friend asked me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment, so I did. Soon an improvement could be seen, and after using for two and one-half months my complexion was clear." (Signed) Joseph Parasco, 1078 S. Blvd., New York City, May 2, 1935.

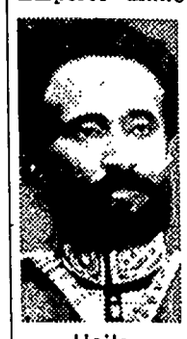
American Company Given Great Ethiopian Grant

FIVE days before the meeting of the League of Nations council to consider the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel Emperor Haile Selassie took a step that may complicate matters tremendously. The "king of kings" signed and sealed a document turning over to American interests sweeping concessions for the development of oil, mineral and other natural resources in more than half his kingdom. The charter was granted to the African Exploration and Development corporation, and runs for 75 years. It was obtained by F. W. Rickett, an English promoter, representing the corporation, and the transaction was witnessed by Everett Andrews Colson, American financial adviser to the emperor.



Haile Selassie

The emperor himself said the concession was given to Standard Oil, but officials of Standard Oil of New Jersey and other Standard Oil units flatly declared they had no knowledge of or interest in the grant. The company was incorporated in Delaware by the United States Corporation company of New York.

The governments of Great Britain, France and Italy were much stirred by this development. The British government formally "advised" the emperor to "withhold" the concession, asserting that it considered this a matter for consultations between the English, French and Italian governments. The emperor in an interview declared he did not see why a concession granted to Americans should create international complications or involve the treaty which the three nations named signed in 1906. That pact creates "spheres of influence" in Ethiopia but never was recognized by the Ethiopian government.

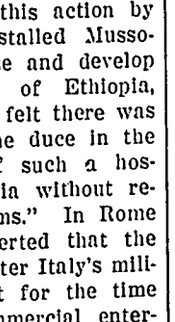
"As a sovereign state we have the right to do anything we please in our own territory," said Haile Selassie. "The United States is not a party to the 1906 treaty in which England, France and Italy merely pledge themselves to do nothing to encroach on the interests of others. This is one of the reasons I gave the concession to Standard Oil. As the agreement is already signed, sealed, and delivered, I do not see how it can be recalled if such a thing is suggested by the British government."

It would seem that this action by the emperor has forestalled Mussolini's intentions to seize and develop the natural resources of Ethiopia, though Rickett said he felt there was "plenty of room for the duce in the general exploitation of such a hospitable land as Ethiopia without resorting to force of arms." In Rome it was unofficially asserted that the concession would not alter Italy's military program and that for the time she may welcome commercial enterprises of a neutral character undertaken in Ethiopia because the job of exploitation there is so vast and complex.

It was announced in Addis Ababa that the emperor also had granted to British and Egyptian interests a charter for the conservation of the water of Lake Tsana, the source of the Blue Nile—which is of vast importance to Great Britain. It is proposed to build a dam and pumping stations.

Premier Laval Ready to Jump Either Way

PIERRE LAVAL, French premier, went to Geneva for the league council session with full power to act as he saw fit in the Italo-Ethiopian affair, the cabinet having authorized him to oppose sanctions against Italy if he believed that wise, or to try to persuade the council to regard Mussolini's contemplated invasion of the African empire as a "colonial expedition" rather than a war. Laval's firm intention was to keep the friendship of both Italy and Great Britain if possible. For a time it was thought that, if he couldn't do this, he would stand with Italy, but later it appeared more likely that if it came to a showdown he would sacrifice Italian friendship for British. Herriot and some other members of the cabinet were reported to be in favor of sanctions.



Premier Laval

Dispatches from London said it was rumored that the British government was ready to announce, on the day Mussolini starts war on Ethiopia, that it is no longer interested in maintaining the balance of power in Europe. This would mean it would not interfere if Hitler decided to grab Austria, which would be a terrific blow to the duce. The British admiralty sent its powerful Mediterranean fleet eastward toward the Suez canal and strengthened its garrison at Malta.

Mussolini went ahead with his war preparations, seemingly unconcerned by all the opposition he has aroused. In the military maneuvers he was conducting near Bolzano live ammunition was used in the artillery firing, and one soldier was killed and two wounded by shell fragments. In a fiery speech to the soldiers, with King Victor Emmanuel standing beside him, the duce shouted:

"The world must know once again that while there is talk so absurd and provocative of penalties (sanctions) we will not give up a single soldier, a single sailor, a single aviator."

All the Italian submarines were assembled off Sicily ready to lay a defensive line across the Mediterranean from that island to Africa, and the Sicilian coast defense batteries were strengthened. The premier already has issued numerous decrees for raising the funds necessary for his adventure and to forestall embargoes.

Neutrality Act Signed by President Roosevelt

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT signed the congressional resolution of neutrality, announcing that he approved it because it is "intended as an expression of the fixed desire of the people of the United States to avoid any action which might involve us in war."

However, he made plain his objection to the inflexible provisions of the act, saying it was conceivable that situations might arise in which these might have "exactly the opposite effect from that which was intended." The resolution calls upon the President to place an embargo on the export of "arms, ammunitions and implements of war" to all belligerents in the event of war, and creates a national munitions control board. The application of the arms embargo lasts only until March 1, 1936.

Huey Long's Dictatorship Due for Investigation

SENATOR HUEY LONG crowed a lot about the success of his one-man filibuster which killed the third deficiency appropriation bill, but he didn't add to his popularity among the people who looked forward for help from the agencies that are now hampered by the failure of the measure. Besides that, it is now admitted that his filibuster rescued the Democratic house leaders from a tight place in the matter of the cotton and wheat loans. Still further, it appears that Huey's domination of Louisiana is going to be investigated by a congressional committee. That committee probably will be headed by Representative William L. Granfield of Massachusetts, for he was the author of the elections investigation bill, which was found to contain a little "joker." This joker gives the committee such wide powers that it can probe into all the facts concerning Long's complete control of election affairs in his state and the methods by which he has attained to the position of a dictator there.

Russia Again Warned About Communist Activities

RUSSIA'S reply in America's protest against the subversive plotting of the Communists in Soviet territory was a rejection and a coldly worded re-assertion of the old and more than dubious position that the Moscow government is not and cannot be held responsible for the doings of the Communist Internationale. This was considered for four days by official Washington and then it was decided to let the matter drop with another and rather milder warning. The new note sent to Moscow said:

"If the Soviet government pursues a policy of permitting activities on its territory involving interference with the internal affairs of the United States, instead of 'preventing' such activities, as its written pledge provides, the friendly and official relations between the two countries cannot but be seriously impaired."

Mrs. Harold Ickes Killed in Automobile Accident

MRS. ANNA WILMARTH ICKES, wife of Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, was killed when an automobile in which she and three friends were riding was overturned in a ditch at Velarde, N. M. Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, well-known newspaper writer; Ibrahim Seyfullah, secretary of the Turkish embassy in Washington, and Frank Allen of Gallup, N. M., the driver, were severely injured. Allen died later.

Mrs. Ickes, who for years was deeply interested in the Indians of the Southwest, had been inspecting an Indian settlement at Taos and was returning to Santa Fe. Before she went to Washington with her husband in 1933 she was a leader in club work in Chicago, and she served three terms in the Illinois legislature. Among the many notable persons who attended the funeral in Winnetka, suburb of Chicago, was Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President.

Norris and Mullen in Row About Power Plants

SENATOR GEORGE NORRIS of Nebraska and Arthur F. Mullen, former Democratic national committeeman for that state, are engaged in a warm dispute that may cause considerable embarrassment for President Roosevelt, friend of both men. Mullen carried to the White House a hot protest against a $20,000,000 power project which is sponsored by Norris. He is attorney for two $7,000,000 power plants which already have been approved by the PWA, and he asserts there is no field for the enormous amount of electrical energy that would be developed by the three projects, and probably not enough water for all of them.

The first project approved by PWA was at Columbus, Neb., 80 miles west of Omaha, and situated on the Loupe river. The second was on the Platte river 150 miles farther west, at Sutherland, Neb. Both were approved in the fall of 1933. In addition to the original grants and loans approximating $15,000,000, there was added an allocation of $2,500,000 later.

In the rivalry between these two projects the same argument about the shortage of water was used, and Mullen was criticized for acting as attorney for both.

Report That Lindbergh Baby Is Still Living

ATTORNEYS for Richard Bruno Hauptmann plan to seek a new trial for the convicted kidnaper and slayer of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's first-born son on the ground that the child still lives and that they can produce him in court.

The boy, five years and six months old and "the image of the Lindbergh baby," is said to be in custody of a Flushing (L. I.) family, which took him from an orphanage and adopted him.

Stock Raisers Urge That Tariffs Be Maintained

BECAUSE of the possibility of a continued increase in the importation of live stock and its products, an appeal in the name of more than 300,000 farmers and ranchmen, members and patrons of the National Live Stock Marketing association, was sent to President Roosevelt urging that present tariffs and sanitary restrictions on animals, meats, lard, and similar products be maintained.

In a telegram, signed by Charles A. Ewing, president of the co-operative association, the chief executive was told that any concessions in the way of lower tariffs and the removal of embargos preventing diseased foreign animals from entering this country would further cripple the live stock industry, and tend to defeat the recovery program.

Queen Astrid of Belgium Killed in Auto Crash

BOWED down by deep grief, the Belgian people laid to rest their beloved queen, Astrid, who was killed near Lucerne, Switzerland, when the automobile driven by King Leopold swerved from the road and dashed against a tree. Astrid's skull was crushed and she died almost immediately in the arms of her husband, who was cut painfully by the smashed windshield.

The queen's body, taken back to Brussels, was taken to the cathedral of St. Gudule for the funeral ceremony and then was interred in the royal crypt at Laeken, where lie the remains of the late King Albert. The services were simple, in accord with the characters of Astrid and Leopold.

Astrid, a princess of Sweden, became the wife of Leopold in 1926 when he was the duke of Brabant, and the marriage was a genuine love match. She immediately endeared herself to the people of Belgium. Three children were born to her and Leopold.

King George's Third Son Engaged to Marry

KING GEORGE of Great Britain announced the engagement of the duke of Gloucester, his third son, to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott. The duke is thirty-five years old and is the soldier of the royal family. Lady Alice, who is thirty-three, traces her descent from a natural son of Charles II. The date for the wedding has not been set.

With his brother's marriage the forty-one-year-old prince of Wales will be the last bachelor among the king's sons.

German Catholic Prelates Boldly Defy Herr Hitler

BOLDLY defying Reichsfuehrer Hitler, the three cardinals, 23 archbishops and other prelates of the Catholic church in Germany, issued a pastoral letter, which was read in every church, strongly criticizing the anti-religious policies of the Nazi government and intimidating that the Vatican may enforce an interdict for other nations to break off relations with Germany.

J. A. Moffett Resigns As Federal Housing Chief

JAMES A. MOFFETT has resigned as federal housing commissioner, carrying out his long-expressed desire to return to private business. It was presumed in Washington that he would be succeeded by Stewart McDonald.

In his letter of resignation Mr. Moffett told the President that, despite necessary delays in getting the housing program under way, the housing administration was insuring construction and repair loans at the rate of $60,000,000 a month.

National Topics Interpreted

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Through more years than most of us can remember, the U. S. senate has been the object of caustic criticism, jibe and jest because of its rule permitting unlimited debates. Time after time long senate speeches have been the object of editorial attack in one segment or another of American metropolitan newspapers. Its slow, tortoise-like methods have been held up to ridicule in spoken and written word innumerable times, and its procedure remains unchanged.

Obsolete Senate Rules

It was no occasion for surprise, therefore, when a new outburst of criticism of senate rules of procedure was launched upon us immediately after the last session of congress adjourned. Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana, the self-styled kingfish, broke loose as he has so many times broken loose and effectively tied senate plans in a knot. He did the very thing that has precipitated criticism of the senate through all of the years mentioned above and succeeded in a one-man filibuster in blocking passage of an appropriation bill. Indeed, he was so effective in his job that he brought down on his head the wrath of President Roosevelt and all of the New Dealers who were about to realize culmination of some of their most cherished dreams.

While the Long filibuster probably should be criticized because undoubtedly there was some unfairness about it, the reason it takes on more importance at this time is because it placed so many of the New Dealers in a state of high dudgeon mentally and because it again centered attention upon these same senate rules.

By way of preliminary explanation, I believe it ought to be said that no organized body can operate effectively or orderly without first binding itself to adhere to rules of procedure that will give each an opportunity. These rules, in the case of the senate, are very old. It may be said they are antiquated and obsolete; surely some will take that view of them. But nevertheless those are the rules and the senate has been able for a good many years to produce satisfactory legislative results under them.

I do not propose here to say that they should be revised or that the present rules should be retained. But I do believe that before changes are made and before those who propose changes spread too much ballyhoo, the country should understand some of the reasons which actuate the present urge.

Long's Filibuster

The kingfish spoke for nearly six hours on the closing night of the session. He could not be prevented from speaking after he was once recognized by the presiding officer. He told the senate he was battling for a government loan rate on cotton of 12 cents per pound whereas the administration was proposing to make the rate either nine or ten cents per pound. The senate had placed an amendment on an appropriation bill to carry out the idea of twelve cents a pound and had put up the proposition to the house of representatives which showed no signs of agreeing at all until Mr. Roosevelt took a hand and suggested the compromise of ten cents a pound. All that remained was a formal vote of the senate to put the administration plan into effect. Senator Long decided it should not be and he proceeded to lick the administration single-handedly by continuing his filibuster until the midnight hour when the congress was to adjourn finally.

In blocking the administration compromise, Senator Long also defeated appropriation of something like $100,000,000 which the administration was going to use in setting up machinery under its so-called security laws, the Guffey bill for regulation of the soft coal industry and the bond created theoretically to settle labor disputes. All of these bills were pressed hard by the administration, if one had not had its antagonists in congress. They were and are strictly New Deal measures. As a result of the Long filibuster none of them can be made fully operative until congress convenes again next January and appropriates the money. So, it can be seen how the pride of the New Deal professors was wounded. It can be seen likewise why they, along with the President, did so much squawking about the Long filibuster. Senator Long was an ideal goat for the situation.

Unnecessary Barking

It is not my privilege nor is it within my power to say whether the legislation which Senator Long virtually nullified is so important that five months of delay is the difference between life and death in this country. Indeed, I cannot see any reason for all of the haste that is exemplified by the shouts and the criticisms suddenly brought forth because of that filibuster. The bills which were brought to final passage only a few days before adjournment had been languishing in congress since last January. The President had repeatedly urged their enactment but the congress saw fit to delay. Consequently in various quarters in Washington I heard the inquiry as to why so much damage can be done by delays of five months when there had been delays of seven months preceding enactment of the measures. Some of the more vitriolic among the New Deal critics even went so far as to inquire why all of the hullabaloo over a delay of five months when Mr. Roosevelt made no effort to obtain enactment of the social security bill—the keystone of the New Deal—in the first session of congress under his control. Without knowing all of the answers, it does appear to me that there is quite a bit of unnecessary barking going on about this one incident.

So, without defending a filibuster in any wise, it occurs to me that we ought to look back into history and see the benefits accruing from unlimited debate in the senate, a procedure which the New Dealers now want to change. Through all of the years that congress has existed the senate has moved in a deliberative way. It has been slow, to be sure; yet, records of the past make it appear that this slow procedure has resulted inevitably in better legislation. Many are the schemes that surged forward on the ballyhoo of a minority to passage in the house of representatives only to be blocked and properly examined in the senate. Many are the times as well when the deliberative character of senate debate gave time for expression of a majority sentiment in the country and saved it from being precipitated into policies of national legislation that would have worked untold harm. I cannot but believe that the privilege of unlimited debate in the senate has more good features than bad.

Time after time in years past, demands have been made for liberalization of rules in the house of representatives so that individual members might voice their views at length. The house never has yielded from the position it has taken that its numbers were too great to permit free-for-all discussion such as takes place in the senate. The house does its work in committees and those committees are generally under the guidance of the political party in control of the government. The house, therefore, invariably votes the will of the administration. In consequence of this, it is hard to believe that the senate ought to bind and gag its members and prevent their free expression. If there is a minority, that minority ought to be heard. The senate is the forum. As a personal expression, I do not see where any good at all can come from the proposed restrictions for senate debate and I do not believe it will eventually.

Bond Issue Failure

For the first time since the Civil war, a federal government bond issue failed the other day to attract enough subscribers to absorb the offering. It was a small offering at that. The amount was only $100,000,000. The bonds were not, strictly speaking, United States government bonds. They were being issued by the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation but they bore the guarantee of the United States treasury that they would be paid both as to interest and principal and to all intents and purposes may not be distinguished from government bonds.

When the treasury received offers of only $85,500,000, Secretary Morgenthau was both surprised and chagrined. He laid the failure of the issue to the fact that the bonds were to carry only 1¾ per cent interest, a very low rate. It was a part of the treasury policy to sell government securities at interest rates as low as possible to reduce the burden of the interest charge which the government must carry on its gigantic public debt. Nevertheless, "it ain't so good."

The national debt now outstanding is something like $30,000,000,000. It is approximately $9,000,000,000 higher than when Mr. Roosevelt took office. It is due to go still higher because additional money must be borrowed to carry out the works-relief plans of the New Deal. Some authorities predict that before Mr. Roosevelt's present term expires as President, the public debt will aggregate something like $35,000,000,000, the highest in all history for our nation.

Long experience as a student of financial affairs prompts my conclusion that failure of the $100,000,000 issue to be fully subscribed does not mean that government bonds are a bad investment. I am inclined to the opinion that the treasury tried to drive down the interest rate too low and that most investors figured they could obtain a better return than that which Mr. Morgenthau offered them. But, after all, there is something of a warning in this circumstance. I believe the warning is that if the Roosevelt administration continues to spend and spend and borrow and borrow, it must pay higher and higher interest rates for the money it borrows. Again, that "ain't so good."

Church Bells Tell Trend in Prices of Fresh Fish

Church bells act as town crier in the village of Palafrugell, writes a Madrid correspondent in the Detroit News.

Apart from directing the fire brigade to the scene of a fire, they announce fish sales and keep buyers informed on price trends in the market.

And all this is done in a sort of Morse code so that if you aren't one of the Palafrugell folk then you can't understand what it's all about, nor can you buy any fish.

When a fresh catch is landed at Palafrugell, a special runner takes the news from the coast posthaste to the church sexton. This worthy at once rings the call to attention, since his reward will be a quantity of fish. And every resident in Palafrugell knows the call.

Immediately afterward a second bell is slowly tolled, and if you understand the code you will receive a running bell commentary on current market conditions, the quantity of fish available and its purchase price while you are hurrying to the market to buy.

When there is a reduction in price a different bell rings the change and the varying length of the toll gives the new price until all the stock is disposed of.

Lenin's Body Rests in Red, Black Granite Tomb

The mausoleum in which Lenin's body is placed is about 50 feet high, rising to a small colonnade at the top in six stages or steps, like ancient Mayan pyramids. The tomb is composed of huge blocks of red and black granite from all parts of Russia. The largest, a 50-ton monolith of black granite, is placed over the bronze entrance doors with the word "Lenin" in large letters inlaid in red porphyry. The short columns which support the flat top are of various shades of black porphyry—each one a gift of a different republic in Soviet Russia.

Just inside the entrance is the giant symbol of Communism, a hammer and sickle carved in stone. Gray marble steps descend to the underground room where Lenin's body lies. The body is in the center of the room under a convex glass case, which rests on a monolith of black granite.

The color scheme is symbolic, black, red and gray. Black and red are the Soviet mourning colors. Gray is the worker's color. Lenin is dressed in a plain worker's suit of cloth.—Washington Star.

Diamonds as Grinders

Genuine diamonds are used for coating grinding wheels. Stones that are off color or too small for the market are crushed and graded, mixed with a special bond and coated on a composition form to a thickness of one-eighth of an inch. The diamond layer is applied to the side of the wheel form for side grinding. The wheels are used for conditioning the hardest machine tools.—Pearson's Weekly.

Lima Old Place

The existence of Lima dates back almost 100 years before the Pilgrims land at Plymouth Rock. England's historic fight with the Spanish armada was still half a century in the future. Martin Luther was still alive. Shakespeare had not been born yet. Latin America had a well-established civilization before the first white man made a home in what is now the United States and Canada.

Sealyham Terrier Breed Fighter, Authority Says

Just where the first Sealyham terrier was produced is shrouded in mystery. It is generally agreed that the breed came by its name in Wales and that it was a product of Welsh crossing. Those who developed the Sealyham were looking for a dog that would go into the ground after the badger, and in the Sealyham they got one which would fight his weight in wildcats at a word from his master asserts an authority in the New York Herald Tribune. For this work, the originators sought a dog with short legs for ground work and thick, heavy coat both as protection from the weather and the teeth of his opponents.

The Sealyham terrier is essentially a game dog. He was produced to go to ground after animals more than twice his weight and he is not afraid of any other four-footed thing. Naturally, he is a good digger. His short muscular legs fairly make the dirt fly when he is sent into a burrow after game. It is these legs of which he is most careful when he comes up to his prey. He realizes that they are not only an extremely valuable asset but that they are his most vulnerable point when facing an enemy. Accordingly, he doubles them back under him, gradually edging forward until his strong teeth clamp on the enemy.

In Early California

Bancroft says that dancing was a passion of the early Californians; fiestas, picnics and balls were frequent; the fadangos were especially popular at San Diego. Dramatic performances were given to some extent, but serenading was common. Most Californians could play the vihuela or guitar. There was much interest in racing and it was common practice to race to church with oxen-drawn wagons containing the family. The stakes were money, stock, or bulls. Carrera del Gallo, or cock fighting was a popular sport, as was also corrida de toros, or coursing of bulls. Bull fights were held on frequent occasions by skilled and practiced toreadors. The tekersie was a favorite game of the Indians. Billiards were introduced at Monterey in 1828.

Fear May Cause Disease

In certain types of persons emotional disturbances such as intense fear sometimes cause gastric ulcers and toxic goiter, writes Elizabeth Switzer Oxford, Ohio, in Collier's Weekly. And in dogs, sound alone, such as that of a trumpet, is known to produce changes in the blood count, particularly an increase in the bacteria-killing leucocytes, when previous sounds of the trumpet have been accompanied by injections of antitoxin.

World's Largest Carillon

At Bournville, England, the carillon installed in the tower of the village school is the largest in the world. The bells originally numbered 22, but a local family of distinction made gifts of bells from time to time until the total has reached 48. The largest bell weighs over three tons, the smallest 12 pounds.

Old Cashmere Shawls

The wool which went into the fine old cashmere or India shawls was particularly fine and soft and taken from the changra or shawl goat, only about eight ounces being secured from a goat at a clip and from six to eight pounds required for the average shawl.

Garden of Eden Located on the Praslin Island?

The Garden of Eden, according to tradition, was located on one of the Seychelles islands—Praslin. Everything helps to bear out this legend, says a correspondent in the Detroit News. It is one of the loveliest places in all the world, exceeding even the beauty of Bali. There are many foods here to appeal to the appetite and they are nearly all ready-to-eat foods. Clothing is not a necessity, the islands being close to the Equator.

A fact which helps substantiate the claim that this was the original home of Adam and Eve, the paradise from which they were driven, is found in the coco de mer, a large nut which grows here and which, according to local tradition, was the Forbidden Fruit of the Bible. The coco de mer tree grows plentifully, reaching an average height of 150 feet and bearing nuts weighing up to 20 pounds.

All knowledge of these islands was lost for many centuries. They lie almost in the center of the Indian ocean, 1,000 miles due east of Mombasa, Africa, and were discovered in 1505. Pirates found them a safe haven to retire to. The outlaws of the sea grew so numerous here that female slaves were imported from Africa to minister to their wants, the pirates marrying them. Their descendants are the natives of today and they are a good-looking well-behaved race of people. Practically all are Christians.

Lightest of All

Hydrogen is the lightest substance known. Air is 14 times, water 11,000 times, and gold 212,000 times heavier. Water boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, but hydrogen, in a liquid state, will boil at 421 degrees below zero. Touch a match to two parts hydrogen mixed with one part of oxygen properly enclosed, and you promptly get an explosion forming water. Liquefy hydrogen under a pressure of 2,793 pounds per square inch and it immediately becomes the heaviest liquid in the world, being then more than six times as heavy as water. Certain hot metals will absorb hydrogen in enormous quantities. Thus a palladium wire has been known to absorb 935 times its own volume of hydrogen and to remain apparently unaltered, there being evidently no chemical union between the two.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Rs and Oysters

Why are oysters "in season" only when there is an "R" in the month? For successful spawning the oyster requires water at a temperature approximating to 60 degrees. Consequently the spawning season is practically limited to the summer months, and the oyster is at its best between September and April. But even thus an oyster may not be at its very best unless it is in its fourth or fifth year. Younger than this they are inclined to be thin, and older than this to be tough, and fit only for soup.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Choosing Jewish Names

Religious tolerance filled Eighteenth century Austria with Jews, the majority having only one name such as Isaac or Israel. This resulted in confusion, especially in law courts, so Maria Theresa ordered every Jew to take a new name, and one not used by Christians. So names were derived from minerals, flowers and other things and that was the origin of such present-day surnames as Goldberg (gold mountain) Rosenbaum (rose tree) and Rothschild (red sign).—Collier's Weekly.

"I Saw It in the News Review" is a common expression among those who keep well informed on current events. They know that in the "Weekly News Review," which appears regularly in this paper, they obtain a comprehensive interpretation of world events written by Edward W. Pickard, one of the nation's most widely-known news commentators.
Weekly News Review
deals with the important happenings and their effect upon our country. It is more than news—it is an interpretation of the news, and therefore much more valuable to the person who wants to understand what is going on in the world today.
● Read it carefully from week to week. You will find it interesting and helpful in your discussion of world events with your neighbors and friends.

AMERICAN BOY MAGAZINE IS LOADED WITH ADVENTURE

"We try to make a subscription to THE AMERICAN BOY," states Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor, "a round-trip ticket to a world-wide adventure cruise.

"Most boys cannot afford the luxury of travel but they can afford to settle down under a reading lamp and take an imaginative trip to foreign lands in American Boy stories."

American Boy stories, during the coming year will take readers to the atolls of the South Seas in a trading schooner, to the polar wastes behind a dog team, into the Canadian wilderness with the Mounted Police, though the Caribbean with the U S. Navy, even to the far-away planet of Mars in a space ship.

There'll be true adventures among the lions and chimpanzees of Africa with Captain Carl von Hoffman, famous explorer and ethnologist. In addition thre'll be stories about the favorite characters of a million boys—Bonehead Jim Tierney, detective; Square Jaw Davis, engineer; Hide-rack, the red and-gold collie; Connie Morgan and Douglas, Renfrew.

There'll be vocational stories that will help the reader select his life work, advice on hobbies, sports tips from famous coaches and players, money-earning suggestions, vacation hints, and worthwhile contests

THE AMERICAN BOY costs only $1 a year, or $2 for three years, foreign subscriptions 50 cents a year extra. Send your name, address, and remittance to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich. Service will start with the issue you specify. On news-stands, 10c a copy.

Girl Excels the Head of Boy Scouts in Tracking

The fame of Lord Baden-Powell as a military scout is world-wide, but there was one occasion when, as he confesses, "I was taken down a peg in my boasted tracking by a young lady." She was the daughter of the late Lord Meath. Here is the story—told by the founder of the Boy Scout movement (in "Lessons of a Lifetime"):

"As we were walking in the garden she suddenly pointed to footprints on the path and asked what they meant.

"I said indulgently: 'A common or garden cat has recently passed this way.'

"'Yes, even I could tell that,' she replied, 'but I can further tell what was the color of the cat—can you?'

"This put me on my mettle and I set to work to examine any twig or spray that might have caught a hair from the animal. But search as I would I could find no clue that would indicate the color of that cat. My companion looked at the track again closely and said: 'Yes, I am not mistaken. It was a light tortoise-shell cat.'

"I also looked more searchingly on the ground but it gave back no helpful sign. At long last I confessed myself beaten.

"'How did you arrive at the color?' I asked.

"'I saw the cat,' she replied."

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; backache, headache, dizziness, swollen feet and ankles? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

WE HAD driven the width of Texas, through New Mexico and into Arizona without seeing anything more than scenery to indicate we had reached the great open spaces, the wild and woolly West. Six days ago, before starting from New York on our journey to the Pacific coast, our friend Norman, who had made the trip four times, said to us: "You'll see plenty of cowboys, and Indians, too. And on the desert there'll be prospectors, regular old desert rats. They're interesting to talk to."

But here we were nearing Phoenix and hadn't even seen a horse, let alone a real cowboy astride one. It was discouraging.

And then suddenly Janet cried, "There's one!"

"One what?" I asked, sitting bolt upright, and nearly running the car off the road.

"A prospector! See! There! Coming across the desert with his pack burro!"

"By jove, she's right!" Jerry and his wife, Hazel, had sighted the man at the same instant. And a moment later I saw him, too, not 50 yards away. He was heading in a diagonal course for the automobile road.

"Stop, you idiot!" Jerry yelled. "We can't talk to him going 50 miles an hour."

I didn't like the way Jerry yelled and I don't like Jerry especially well, anyhow, but I stopped. I was as anxious to get a closeup of the prospector as were the others. There was a possibility he might have something that I could buy to add to my collection of frontier relics.

We stopped at a point that I judged would intersect the desert man's path, and waited. He was an old man, we saw, wearing a 6-inch beard, battered felt and a collarless, ragged shirt. His trousers were held up by one suspender strap, and the legs of them were tucked into 8-inch boots with run-down heels. He looked for all the world like one of the gold prospectors you're always reading about in western magazines and novels.

The burro was mouse-colored and shaggy. Atop his back was piled camping gear and cooking utensils and other implements that we judged were used in the search for gold.

When within a dozen yards of us he looked up and grinned toothlessly. It was then that my heart leaped. For strapped about his thin waist was a holster, from which protruded the walnut handle of an ancient six-shooter.

"Look Here!" I Exclaimed. "We're Offering You Real Money for the Worthless Old Thing. Cash!"

Even without seeing the revolving barrel and muzzle I knew that it was of that variety I wanted and had been searching for, for years, to complete my collection of old American guns. And I knew that Jerry, who wanted a similar weapon, had seen it, too.

I climbed out of the car in the hope of getting the jump on old Jerry, but he was right beside me, and the girls came laughing behind.

"Listen," I said breathlessly to the old man, "how much do you want for that gun? Give you five bucks!"

"Double it," said Jerry annoyingly, and grinned.

The old man stared at us in amazement, looked from one to the other and then at the girls. Thinking about it later I don't wonder that he acted a little frightened.

"Listen," I said again, "I'll give you twenty-five for that six-shooter, Mr. Prospector, and right on the line, too."

"Thirty!" said Jerry.

As yet the old man hadn't said a word, but he grasped the opportunity while Jerry and I were glowering at each other.

"Don't want to sell it," he said. Jerry and I stared in amazement.

"Look here!" I exclaimed, "we're offering you real money for the worthless old thing. Cash! Do you understand?"

"Will you take fifty dollars?" I asked.

"Yes," he said.

"Fifty-five!" said Jerry.

"Now wait a minute." I turned to Jerry. "He said he'd sell for fifty. What's the use in you and I throwing away our money? We could go on bidding forever. Suppose we flip a coin?"

"O. K.," said Jerry. "Fair enough." He produced a coin. "Heads I get it, tails you do?" I nodded. He flipped the coin and it came down tails. I grinned joyously. Jerry looked sour and went back to the car.

I turned to our friend. "Here's your fifty," I said. "Let's have the gat."

"Fifty-five," said the old man.

I looked at him sharply. "O. K. Fifty-five." I produced another five-dollar bill and handed it over. He gave me the gun. It was a beauty! Exactly what I wanted. And, miracle of miracles, there were two notches cut in the handle!

Triumphantly I returned to the car and showed my prize to Jerry. But the sour look was still on his face, and there wasn't much satisfaction in gloating. That would come later.

We drove off, leaving the old prospector standing there on the edge of the automobile road, looking after us. The money was still in his hand, and the last glimpse I had of him in the rear-view mirror he had taken off his battered hat and was scratching his head. His face wore the same expression of bewilderment. I chuckled. Crazy old coot!

An hour later we drove into Phoenix and put up at a good hotel. I was happy. I examined my gun, found that it contained one cartridge, which I extracted, then carefully wrapped both gun and ammunition reverently in an old silk handkerchief.

After dinner I went into the lobby and sat down, picturing just how I would rearrange my den at home so that the relic would be prominently displayed. Presently I noticed that some one had come in nd joined a companion on the divan just behind where I sat. I couldn't help overhearing their conversation.

"Hello, Joe," said the newcomer. "How they going?"

"Good," said the other man. "Sold three. How about you?"

"Five," said Joe. "Got fifty-five for the last one." He chuckled. "I was working about 40 miles north of town. Four suckers came along and the men in the party began scrapping over who was to have the gun. They finally decided to flip a coin and the loudest talker won. Came across with fifty-five smacks without a squawk. By the way, I got to stroll down to Charlie's and order me a new set of prospector's clothes. Those old ones make me look too young. What do you think?"

"Wouldn't hurt any. And while you're at it, you'd better sink another ten bucks and get yourself a new burro. Lop-ears deserves going to pasture." The first speaker stood up. "Well, I'll be seeing you. There's a case of those frontier guns waiting for me at the freight house, fresh from the factory. I've got to go down and cut notches in the handles. So long."

"So long," said Joe.

Immense Timber Wolves in the Michigan Forests

Big timber wolves continue to roam the wilderness areas of northern Michigan. Just recently, writes Albert Stoll, Jr., the bounty division of the state department of conservation reported that it had bountied the pelt of timber wolf taken by a bounty trapper in Ontonagon county, which was captured near Matchwood and measured 6 feet 8½ inches. "Although subject to stretching in the removal of the pelt from the carcass, the hide is believed to be the largest of its kind taken in the upper peninsula within recent years." Undoubtedly this is true for a 6-foot 8½-inch timber wolf is a big animal and seldom do they run this large.

It is not the largest timber wolf ever taken in Michigan, however. Back in 1922 a state trapper, operating in the woods near Sidnaw, in the upper peninsula, sent in the hide of a mature timber wolf that measured 84 inches. It was in prime condition and beautifully marked. This pelt was sold to a resident of Grand Rapids, who desired to have a rug made of the hide. According to J. Stokley Ligon, who was then in charge of predatory animal control work in Michigan, this was the largest timber wolf reported as coming from Michigan.

As a rule the Michigan timber wolf seldom runs larger than 60 to 70 inches in length and even that is considered a large animal. The species is not at all numerous in the state, having disappeared from most of the upper peninsula following the cutting of the heavy timber. Unlike the coyote, which has largely supplanted it in the upper country, the timber wolf must have dense swamp and ridge timber to prosper. It shuns the open or cut-over country and moves on when forests disappear.

Bird Sells Newspapers

Travelers at the West station in Budapest may buy newspapers of the most unusual paper seller in Hungary. He is a tame sparrow, which assists Margit Szep, who runs the stand. The bird gives change by picking up small coins and placing them in the customer's hand. Margit rescued the sparrow when it fell from its nest and trained it. The bird "goes to bed" in a pocket of Margit's apron, especially lined with wool for him.

Ghost, Girl Ventriloquist

Tarves, Scotland, is breathing freely gain after its greatest ghost scare, which was started by a nine-year-old girl. The district had been mystified and alarmed for some time by strange voices which came from the walls of a house, reciting the Lord's prayer one minute and singing popular songs the next. A trap was set and the "ghost" was found to be the girl, who confessed to being a natural ventriloquist.

City Celebrates for Month

Selkirk, Scotland, ancient capital of the Scottish borders, recently completed a month of celebrations commemorating its foundation 400 years ago. Among the outstanding events were the traditional ceremony of riding the borders, in which 200 huntsmen participated, and the march, arm in arm, of 3,000 lads, who sang old border songs as they went through the town.

How Will Mussolini Fight?
Airfields and Live Wires
A Teapot Tempest
Will Eugenists Explain?

Mussolini fought in the big war as a simple soldier in the trenches, was badly wounded, saw the horrors of war from the bottom.

Arthur Brisbane

Now, in command, he will see war from the top. How will he manage it? Dispatches say he must do something in a "quick drive and make big gains" before the rainy season returns, seven months hence.

Mussolini's driving power and efficiency, that have transformed the fever-breeding Pontine marshes into homes for Italian families, should need no "seven months" to produce results in Abyssinia. The thing to do is to concentrate on the "Conquering Lion of Judah," otherwise the Negus, or "Power of Trinity."

Make it clear that modern war means "the ruler of the country first, the little people afterward," and war will not last long. The "Conquering Lion" has expressed willingness, almost eagerness, to die for his country, but that must not be taken too literally.

Near Burbank, Calif., a plane crashes. Three occupants, two pilots and a stewardess burn to death, after striking a live wire.

It has been said, "Alcohol and gasoline do not mix well," meaning that men should not drive when drunk.

Air fields and live wires do not mix well either. The Department of Commerce, ruling aviation and exercising admirable rules, might include among the latter a rule against exposed live wires near air fields.

There is an unnecessary fuss about American business men having secured in Abyssinia rights to develop oil and mineral wealth. An American should be able to go shopping at his own risk and on his own responsibility, wherever he chooses, as Englishmen do, without having the State department indulge in "fits."

If one of the great American organizations, Standard Oil, Du Pont or another, undertakes to do business in Ethiopia, it will not ask Uncle Sam to send over any of "our boys" to shed their blood.

Strange sight in a New York court—one boy, nine years old, accused of killing a girl by hitting her on the head with a stone because she denied his assertion that he could eat more peaches than she could. Another little boy of twelve, also killer of a playmate, appeared in the same court.

The nine-year-old boy seemed quite unconcerned, except that he thought his dog, "Lucky," would be lonesome without him.

Prosecuting authorities accuse the nine-year-old boy of murder, but hanging or drawing and quartering for children are part of the past.

Will stirpiculturists and eugenists explain these youthful crime phenomena?

The sad death of the queen of Belgium proves that the open car is the dangerous car. The queen was thrown from the car, struck her head against a tree, and was instantly killed. Had she been in a closed car, she could not have been thrown violently, and probably would have escaped death as did her husband, who was holding the wheel.

The open car is the ideal car to see the country and the sky, but a dangerous car for those who drive too fast.

San Francisco, as old in the minds of Americans as the word "California" itself, is cheerful. The great bridge that will unite San Francisco to Oakland across the bay is progressing rapidly. And the suspension bridge is already stretching its spiderweb cables across the Golden Gate, where the Pacific ocean comes rushing in to the bay.

Thanks to good management and an excellent engineer, Mr. Strauss, this Golden Gate bridge, with its magnificent span of more than 4,000 feet, will be finished on time and for less than the $35,000,000 guaranteed as maximum price.

England wants no war, with prosperity returning and spoils of the big war not yet digested. But the wing feathers of the peace angel must tremble at sight of British and Italian fleets in the Mediterranean, near the mouth of the Suez canal.

If Britain tries to close that canal to Italy, leaving thousands of Italian soldiers cut off from their base and from food supplies, there will probably be some heavy gunfire.

It seems unlikely that devotion to Ethiopia, even though her government be a member of the League of Nations, could persuade the British to force war at this moment.

White Snakeroot Poisons Animals

Dairy Products or Meat of Stock Affected Causes Serious Illness.

Supplied by the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Heavy rains which have made Illinois pasture luxuriant this year have not ended the danger of white snakeroot poisoning to man and to live stock during the coming few months.

Even though pasture grass is abundant, animals may eat the leaves of the poisonous white snakeroot weed from time to time. Overstocking pastures, even if they are good ones, increases the risks from the poisoning, which occurs every year.

Persons using dairy products or meat of animals affected by "trembles," as white snakeroot poisoning is known, may contract milk sickness, an ailment which runs a rapid course and has a high mortality rate.

Keeping live stock away from white snakeroot and eradicating the weed from pastures and woodlots are the only sure ways of preventing the poisoning. Treatments thus far developed are far from satisfactory. Tremetol is the toxic agent in the plant and is absorbed into the animal's system when the plant is eaten, according to Dr. Robert Graham, chief in animal pathology and hygiene at the college.

The plant is a tall, slender perennial herb which usually grows in partially cleared woodlots, swampy areas, shady ravines and in groves along streams. The greatest danger is through summer, until late in the fall. This is especially true during dry years when pastures are short and dry. White snakeroot can generally be recognized by its broadly oval leaves, set opposite each other and having sharply toothed, or serrated, edges. The non-poisonous varieties usually have narrower leaves.

In small patches the weed is best eradicated by pulling each plant by the roots. In large patches proper cropping is the most satisfactory means of eradication. Live stock should be kept out of pastures containing any of the weed.

Weakness, loss of appetite, constipation and a trembling of the voluntary muscles when the animal is forced to move are among the early symptoms of poisoning. When these symptoms are observed the stock should be taken from pasture and a reliable veterinarian called. The immediate attention of a physician should be given to cases of milk sickness among humans.

Spring Tooth Implement Kills Out Quack Grass

A new way to rout that old pest quack-grass is by the use of the field tiller, an implement equipped with spring teeth. The method is 99 per cent effective. With this implement, tillage is started in mid-summer, just as soon as quack-grass hay or small grain is removed from the field. The quack roots are none too vigorous then.

Without previous cultivation, the tiller is taken over the field, teeth set to dig about an inch or two deep. In a few days, when the field starts to get green, the tiller goes over it again, this time crosswise and with teeth set an inch or so deeper. This procedure is continued until freezing weather arrives, by which time the ground will have been stirred six inches deep or more. Freezing will destroy most of the roots that haven't been killed by that time.

Then in spring, go over the ground once or twice more and it is ready for planting. Remember, though: Each time over, go a different direction, and go a little deeper.—Farm Journal.

Breeding Dairy Heifers

No arbitrary age can be set for breeding dairy heifers, according to an authority, as this is determined by the maturity of the individual animal. The feeding schedule also enters into this question as those animals that are fed a liberal grain ration will mature more rapidly than those receiving a limited ration of grain. As a general rule, however, Jersey and Guernsey heifers should be bred to freshen at from twenty-four to thirty months of age. Ayrshire and Holstein animals should be bred to freshen from twenty-seven to thirty-two months of age.

The Bee Culture laboratory says that there are about 5,000 bees in a pound and that a hive of 20,000 would therefore weigh four pounds.

Sweet potato vines should be cut off at the surface of the soil immediately after a frost. Toxic materials in the frost-killed foliage are frequently translocated to the roots, causing them to rot.

Senator Long Assassinated by Political Opponent

HUEY P. LONG, United States senator and political dictator of Louisiana, is dead, the victim of an assassin's bullet. As he passed through a corridor of the state-house in Baton Rouge, where the legislature was passing more laws to solidify his control over the state, he was shot once through the body by Dr. Carl A. Weiss, Jr., of Baton Rouge, one of the "Kingfish's" political opponents. The assassin was immediately shot to death by the senator's ever present bodyguards.

Huey P. Long

Long was hurriedly taken to a hospital and eminent surgeons were summoned. They found the bullet had gone through the base of the right lung and passed out of the back, puncturing the colon and causing internal hemorrhage. After the wound had been cleansed, two blood transfusions were given, the blood being supplied by Lieut. Gov. James A. Noe. Mrs. Long and her daughter Rose were brought from New Orleans and sat at the senator's bedside.

The surgeons and physicians worked unceasingly to save Long, but his strength steadily waned and shortly after 4 o'clock Tuesday morning, about thirty hours after the shooting, he passed away.

The motive of Doctor Weiss, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, apparently grew out of the high-handed political methods of Senator Long in Louisiana. The position of his father-in-law, District Judge B. H. Pavy of Opelonsas parish, an anti-Long leader, is jeopardized by a law introduced in the present special session to gerrymander his district. The law would put the home of Judge Pavy in Landry parish.

In August, Senator Long told the senate that at a conference in the Hotel De Soto in New Orleans last July 21 his foes had discussed a plot to kill him. He presented excerpts from what claimed was a record of a sound recording device revealing the plot.

Long's opponents laughed at this story, just as they always have ridiculed his practice of having an armed guard accompany him everywhere.

Political leaders of all parties expressed their deep regret for the assassination of Senator Long. His devoted followers in Louisiana and elsewhere mourned his death. He had been one of the picturesque figures in America's political life, creating innumerable enemies but persistent in advocating his ideas which appeared fantastic to most citizens. A Democrat, he had broken with the administration and often bitterly attacked President Roosevelt and the New Dealers. It was the belief of many that he intended to become the Presidential nominee of a third party comprising his own "share the wealth" crowd and various other groups dissatisfied with the policies of the old parties.

Efforts of Statesmen to Prevent War in Africa

MUSSOLINI tacitly consented to the appointment of a committee of five nations by the League of Nations council to handle the Italo-Ethiopian embroglio, and after protest agreed that Great Britain and France should be among the members of that body. The other members are Spain, Turkey and Poland. Senor Salvador de Madariaga of Spain is the chairman, and he and his associates at once began the task assigned them. Each country is represented by its chief delegate, being besides Madariaga, Eden of England, Laval of France, Rustu Arras of Turkey and Josef Beck of Poland.

Salvador de Madariaga

The assembly of the league began its sessions in Geneva, bringing to that city many of Europe's foremost statesmen, and it was a certainty that the assembly would be definitely hostile to Italy and ready to consider the imposing of penalties on Italy the moment any overt act occurs. The Italians hoped to prolong the inquiry by the committee of five until after the adjournment of the assembly, and their opponents were building up a solid front, preparing for the application of sanctions against an aggressor as provided for in article 16 of the league covenant. Baron Aloisi told Captain Eden that the African campaign would not begin while the assembly was in session.

In two speeches in Rome Mussolini gave indication that he would not be diverted from his purpose to conquer Ethiopia. Though in one he said "the Italian people want peace provided it is accompanied by justice," in the other he declared "we shall march straight on." The Ethiopian government announced that "telegrams from the northern frontier show that the Italians are making important troop movements on the Ethiopian and Eritrean frontier, indicating an early offensive agninst Ethiopia."

Accepting the advice of his "brain trust," which includes Everett A. Colson of the United States, Emperor Haile Selassie instructed his representatives in Geneva to reject all solutions thus far offered by the powers for settling the quarrel with Italy. These are a tripartite mandate over Ethiopia, as suggested by France, with the League of Nations guaranteeing Ethiopia's independence and territorial integrity; France's proposal for an Italian protectorate similar to that of the British in Iraq, and an international police force similar to the one that occupied the Saar before its restorhtion to Germany.

Aloisi Presents Italy's Case Against Ethiopia

BARON POMPEI ALOISI, cold and sardonic, stood up before the League of Nations council in Geneva and presented Italy's case against Ethiopia, denouncing that empire as utterly unworthy to be classed with civilized countries. In addition to his speech, he laid before the council a long memorandum detailing the alleged conditions of slavery that still prevail in Ethiopia and the participation of its government in the slave trade. This memorandum was elaborately documented.

Baron Aloisi

Addressing the council, Aloisi said in part:

"The Ethiopian government does nothing to make itself worthy of belonging to the community of civilized nations. Even today that country has to be represented by European advisers in order to make its voice heard in the League of Nations.

"The Italian government considers, in these circumstances, that a state such as Ethiopia cannot have either equality of right or equality of duties as compared with civilized states. To claim that members of the league are required to observe rules of the covenant in their relations with members who have always and constantly been outside those rules is contrary to all the principles of right and justice."

To the press correspondents the baron was even more explicit. "You have heard the Italian thesis," he said. "That is final. Italy has asked nothing, not even the withdrawal of Ethiopia from the league. From now on Italy will play a passive role here. We are not going to discuss anything with Ethiopia, but we will discuss Ethiopia with the league.

"It is up to the members of the league council to decide whether they want to expel Ethiopia or expel Italy."

Reactions to President's Letter Are Various

REACTION of American business and financial men to President Roosevelt's latest public statement that his basic program has reached substantial completion and industry will have a breathing spell ran the gamut between mild hope and downright unbelief. Those who permitted themselves to be quoted were generally extremely cautious in their expressions, but there was usually a vein of skepticism in their remarks. Wall Street brokers were gladdened by a spurt of trading at higher prices, but bankers were more than doubtful, and economists insisted that a balanced budget, which wasn't mentioned in the President's letter to Roy Howard, publisher, was a prime requisite.

Silas Strawn, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said: "Business men generally will say that the improvement in some lines of business has been in spite of, rather than because of, the activities of the administration."

Politicians regarded the letter as Mr. Roosevelt's opening of his campaign for re-election, and praised or decried it according to their party affiliations. Frank Knox of the Chicago Daily News, a potential candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, called it "just another promise" and set forth the many campaign promises which Mr. Roosevelt has failed to keep. Senator Black of Alabama said the statement was "a wonderfully clear explanation of his program, its original aims and its execution. It should be a call to those engaged in business to co-operate in further national progress."

Howard had written the President that many business men had become convinced that there could be no real recovery "until the fears of business have been allayed through the granting of a breathing spell to industry and a recess from further experimentation until the country can recover its losses."

In a long letter the President replied that the legislative program of his administration had reached substantial completion and "the breathing spell of which you speak is here—decidedly so."

Germany Protests Language of a New York Judge

GERMAN Ambassador Hans Luther called on Secretary of State Hull and entered formal protest against the language used by Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky of New York in dismissing charges against five persons arrested for tearing the Nazi flag from the liner Bremen in July. The magistrate justified the action of the rioters on the ground that the display of the flag carried, in their minds, "the same sinister implications of a pirate ship, sailing defiantly into the harbor of a nation, one of whose ships it had just scuttled, with the black flag of piracy proudly flying aloft."

Judge Brodsky also characterized the Nazi state as "an atavistic throwback to pre-medieval, if not barbaric, social and political conditions."

Ambassador Luther, who was acting on instructions from Berlin, must have known that Secretary Hull couldn't do much about it, having no control over a city magistrate. However, Mr. Hull tried to mollify an angered Germany by intimating to Governor Lehman of New York that an apology from Brodsky was in order.

Hundreds Die in Hurricane That Sweeps Florida

FLORIDA was the victim of another terrific hurricane that swept up from the Caribbean across the keys and the southern end of the state, then along the west coast and into Georgia. The total of fatalities was uncertain but at this writing the number of dead is estimated at more than 500. Of these perhaps 300 were war veterans in labor camps on the keys where they were employed in construction work. All buildings on many of the keys were demolished and a relief train that had been sent to take the veterans away from the danger zone was smashed to pieces. The survivors on the islands were without shelter, food and medical supplies, but relief expeditions were quickly sent by the Red Cross and other agencies.

Responding to assertions that the great loss of life in the veterans' labor camps was due to lack of preparation against such a disaster, President Roosevelt ordered a thorough investigation by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs. Harry Hopkins, head of the FERA which set up the camps, also started an inquiry, and so did the American Legion. The affair promised to attain the bad eminence of a national scandal.

Caught in the fury of the storm, the Morgan liner Dixie, from New Orleans for New York, was driven aground on French reef, about 60 miles south of Miami. Her passengers and crew, numbering 372, were in great peril for three days, but various steamers and coast guard cutters rushed to the rescue in response to her SOS call and as soon as wind and seas abated enough all were taken off the stranded vessel and conveyed to land, most of them to Miami. Passengers on the Dixie warmly praised the gallant work of the ship's officers and crew.

Americans Cancel Big Ethiopian Concession

WHILE the European statesmen were struggling with the Italo-Ethiopian question, Secretary of State Cordell Hull quietly took a hand in the game. He did not in any way involve the United States in the wrangle, but he put an end to the deal whereby Hallie Selassie was giving a great development concession to Americans. Officials of the Standard-Vacuum Oil company went to Mr. Hull's office and admitted ownership of the grant. The secretary admonished them that the concession had been "the cause of great embarrassment not only to this government but to other governments who are making strenuous and sincere efforts for the preservation of peace."

Sec'y Hull

The oil men thereupon announced their intention of withdrawing from the deal with Ethiopia, and the big concession sensation was entirely deflated.

Bar Associations to Have Aid in Ousting Shysters

STATE and city bar associations are to be aided vigorously in their efforts to rid the profession of shysters by the American Bar association, and President William L. Ransom has appointed Robert T. McCracken of Philadelphia chairman of a new committee to direct the work. Mr. McCracken performed a similar task for the Philadelphia bar. He is a member of the law firm of Montgomery & McCracken, of which Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts was a member before his elevation to the United States Supreme court.

Death of Edward L. Doheny, Rich Oil Magnate

EDWARD L. DOHENY, one of the wealthiest of America's oil magnates, died in Los Angeles at the age of seventy-nine years, after a long illness. His oil interests were mainly in California and Mexico. In 1924 Doheny and his old friend, Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior under Harding, were involved in the investigation of the government's leasing of the Elk Hills naval oil reserve in California to Doheny for exploitation.

Doheny was twice tried and twice acquitted, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government and of giving a bribe of $100,000 to Fall. The latter, however, was found guilty of taking a bribe and went to prison.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

National Press Building — Washington, D. C.

Washington.—For fifty years, American diplomatic methods have been the subject of tittering among the trained agents of foreign nations. True, they never laughed openly or in a loud guffaw at the international practices of the United States but it is a well-known fact that American methods were always mentioned somewhat in a spirit of mirth. And well they might be. The American government with its system of constantly changing its foreign emissaries has had few outstanding diplomats and never has kept those few outstanding individuals on the job very long under any circumstances. The condition of American diplomatic capacity is shown no better than by the latest debacle—the Russian recognition case. As usual, the American government got licked on the diplomatic field. It may reassert itself yet by breaking off relations with the Russian Soviet government but it is uncertain at this writing whether that can be done with safety.

American Diplomacy

What I am trying to say is that in according recognition to the Soviets, American statesmen were not clever enough to guard against the more shrewd and better trained negotiators sent here by Dictator Stalin. The result is that our protests about Soviet communistic propaganda in the United States were rejected, tossed bodily out of the window with an ejaculation that the objection had no basis.

Let us go back over the original negotiations, "the events leading up to the tragedy" as it were. It will be remembered that in 1933, President Roosevelt invited the Russian government to send a commission here for a discussion of relations, or lack of them, between Moscow and Washington. He told the Russians that he wanted to be a good neighbor to them and wanted them to be a good neighbor to us. He saw no insurmountable problem or obstacle to recognition of the existing government of all the Russias; the government was functioning and it was entitled to be regarded as a sovereign power. He proposed, therefore, that consideration be given to establishment of formal relations between the two powers.

Maxim Litvinoff, a Soviet official corresponding to our secretary of state, appeared in Washington and negotiations for recognition were open.

It was decided early in those conversations that the war debt of the Czarist government to the United States should be set aside and a settlement worked out after the two nations had reached an agreement on other phases of international relationships. The Soviet always has disclaimed any obligation in connection with the debt contracted by Czar Nicholas during the World war and the United States has had nothing to show for the several hundred millions advanced to the Czar except some I. O. U's.

The proceedings developed numerous hitches but each was ironed out in turn and in a series of communications exchanged between Mr. Roosevelt and M. Litvinoff, the various pledges and promises usual between nations were made. Included in these pledges was one which since has become the bugbear of a controversy and which, if American recognition is withdrawn, will be the crux of the incident.

Numerous Hitches

Almost constantly since the Soviet system overthrew the Czar and destroyed all vestiges of the monarchial government in Russia, the communist party of Russia has been engaged in world propaganda. World revolution is its aim. It proposes and constantly fights for overthrow of the system which enables individuals to make a profit; which enables individuals to earn money of their own and to save and invest or spend that money as they choose. Common ownership of everything is the objective and government by the proletariat—everyone—is demanded.

M. Litvinoff pledged his government to curb such activities in the United States. But that pledge was a year ago. It seems to have been forgotten. Communistic propaganda has gone on and continues to go on in this country on a broad scale. The efforts were so bold that eventually our Department of State could not overlook it. After mulling over the records for weeks, Secretary Hull recommended to the President that Washington call the attention of the Soviet to its pledge. Mr. Hull's recommendation lay in a White House pigeon-hole for some weeks and it was not until the Communist Internationale met in Russia and fiery speeches criticizing the United States and advising revolution were made. This was the straw that broke the camel's back. Mr. Roosevelt gave his approval to Mr. Hull's proposal for a protest. It was made and promptly rejected, as I have mentioned above.

The Soviet foreign office rejected the protest on the ground that the Communist Internationale was not a part of the Red government; that it was a political party over which the Russian Soviet government had no control and that consequently the American government could not properly accuse the Moscow authority with having broken their pledge to avoid interferences in American affairs.

Trick Not Foreseen

That trick was one among many which the American government failed to foresee in negotiating Russian recognition. It is a splendid example of how our diplomatic representatives fail in their work.

The Soviet took advantage of an opportunity. It is true that the Communist Internationale is a political party but the Communist Internationale in Russia is not comparable to the Democratic or Republican political party in the United States. It is the only political party and it decides what the government shall do and is responsible to no higher authority. Thus, when the Communist Internationale took the firebrands of revolution into the United States, it is hard to understand why the Russian government did not have some finger in the pudding.

The American government has warned Russia of "serious consequence" if the communistic propaganda does not cease. Such an expression between nations can mean only the breaking up of diplomatic relations. Whether Mr. Roosevelt will go that far is still undetermined.

As we look back over the Russian affair, one can hardly fail to characterize it as a misadventure. Mr. Roosevelt said he wanted to recognize Russia because great economic advantages would flow from that act. There would be much more trade, much new business developed. Department of Commerce figures reveal, however, that sales to Russia were about $114,000,000 in 1930 but that they have dropped down in the last year to about $30,000,000.

So, apparently we have gained nothing but some trouble by recognizing Russia.

What did the Russians gain? First, they undoubtedly have broadened the field of their communistic and revolutionary propaganda. Doors were opened to them in this country that were closed before recognition was granted.

But undoubtedly the outstanding victory recorded by the Russians in persuading America to recognize the Moscow government lies not in the American field at all. Their greatest gain was in their relations with Japan. The last several years have witnessed continued friction along the frontier between Japan and Russia. There was a constant threat of war. Strange as it may seem, as soon as negotiations were opened between the United States and Russia, the international relations between Russia and Japan began to improve. There has been almost no trouble on that border since. The reason is that before recognition the Japanese appeared to feel they would have the moral support, at least, of the United States in any controversy developing between them and Moscow. So the books will record another victory for foreign diplomats, another defeat for the hit and miss diplomatic system of the United States.

(And the debt contracted by the Czar's government and disregarded by the Soviet is as much unsettled as the day that the Czar was murdered.)

* * *

The passing of Labor day in Washington seems to be the signal for the bulk of government officials to return to their desks and always with that return there comes swift and burning activity in politics. Usually, also, the passing of Labor day sees the return to Washington of other types of vacationists—Washington being what it is in August—and they, too, bring back new political ideas. Hence, just at this writing Washington is deluged with all kinds of political fireworks.

Activity in Politics

As far as I have been able to analyze the situation, there are three distinct classes. The first embraces those who go out on vacations to see whether they can find as much or more support for the administration in power at the time, than in the previous vacations; a second group includes those who go out with a determination to find that the administration is in a tailspin and losing ground rapidly, and the third is made up of vacationists who do not concern themselves directly about politics but who cannot avoid political discussions because of their residence in Washington. So, just now, we are surfeited with political declarations that Mr. Roosevelt is stronger than ever before; that he has lost so much ground that his election is improbable and the unbiased assertions that he has gained in some communities and has lost immeasurably in others.

Coupled with this boiling stage of the political pot insofar as individual action is concerned are two developments of importance: the Republican National committee has been called to meet here and rather well authenticated rumors are extant that "Big Jim" Farley is ready to resign as Postmaster General and devote his time to his other job—the chairmanship of the Democratic National committee. These two incidents can be construed only as meaning that the Republicans are getting ready to fight after a long sleep and that "Big Jim," after a transcontinental tour, sees some reason for an early start in the campaign to re-elect Mr. Roosevelt in 1936.

Former Klemme Girl Married At Little Brown Church Thursday

Miss Marie Gauger Became Bride Of Young Rudd Farmer

Miss Marie Gauger, Buffalo Center, and Mr. Warren F. Frevest, of Rudd, were united in marriage at the Little Brown Church near Nashua, Iowa, on Thursday, September 12th, by Rev. A. W. Gauger, father of the bride. Only the immediate families of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony which was followed by a dinner at a Charles City hotel.

The Bride is well known in Klemme as she is a daughter of Rev. A. W. Gauger, former Methodist pastor of the Klemme and Liberty churches and who for several years was pastor at Garner. She taught for several years in the Klemme school and has followed this profession until this year.

Mr. Frevest is a young farmer at Rudd and Mr. and Mrs. Frevest will make their home on his farm near there.

The Tmes joins with the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frevest in extending best wishes.

William Gauger, of Buffalo Center, was visiting with old Klemme friends Friday. William, who is a son of Rev. Gauger, graduated from Morningside College two years ago. Last year he went to the Iowa University where he is studying medicine He has completed one year of this course and this year starts on his second year of medicine. William has spent the past summer working in the State hospital at Independence. He also has an office position in the University hospital. Klemme friends of this splendid young man are glad to learn that he is getting along so well.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kingery, Mrs. Dulmes and Mrs. C. G. Waterman and Marian, were Mason City visitors Saturday afternoon.

I.S.C. Poultryman Lists Chicke Culling Helps

To cull chicken flocks accurately and successfully, several factors should be considered, says H. L. Wilcke, of the Poultry Husbandry Department at Iowa State College.

Only those pullets showing greater vitality, as indicated by a strong head (not too beefy), bright, prominent eyes and generl alertness should be kept. They should be large and well developed. Early maturing pullets are better egg producers generally.

In addition to the considerations for pullets, other factors should be noted when culling older hens. If the comb is shrunken and dry the bird is probably out of production. The hen should have a long, level rump, and the pubic bones should show quality

Primary feathers of the wings should be examined to note whether the bird carries old plumage and how many feathers are dropped at a time. The speed of molting is indicated by the number of feathers dropped at a time and rapid molting as a whole is more desirable from an egg production standpoint.

The abdomen of the bird should be soft and pliable, the shank smooth and flat. Birds which are depigmented in the regions of the shank, beak and eye ring will have been in production for some time. If they are yellow in these sections it indicates that the birds have been out of production.

Select Breeding Cockerels Now

September and October are the best months to select breeding cockerels. The more vigorous and better developed birds should be saved and the slower developing cockerels should be marketed immediately to avoid overcrowding during the cooler weather.

Before the cockerels are selected the weaknesses in the pullet flock should be considered and males especially strong in those characteristics should be saved. Males approaching the true type of the breed are most desirable. The head should be clean cut, with bright, upstanding combs.

Miss Evelyn Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Miller of Goodell submitted to an operation Monday at the Hampton hospital. Reports are that she is getting along nicely.

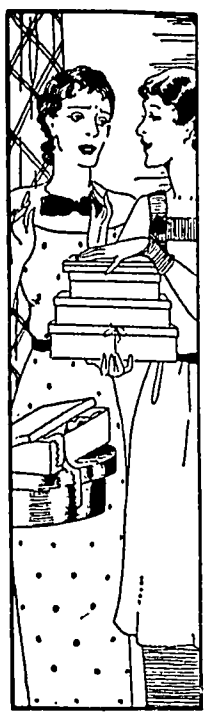
The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

A FORTUNATE element in house- work is its adaptability. The woman who lays stress on its monotony should not close her eyes to the other side of the matter. There is a pleas- ant balance between routine tasks and those which can be done at the con- venience of the homemaker. It is these latter tasks that should be tackled when the person feels in the mood for them. Sometimes they appeal, and then it is that the labor sinks into its minimum. These times come unex- pectedly as a gen- eral rule. Sudden- ly one is seized with the desire to get some special piece of work done. Enthusiasm lends aid, and, what at other times looks like a tiresome and taxing piece of work, is accom- plished with sur- prisingly little ef- fort. It actually is easy. The energy expended does not drain the strength, nor wear the nerves.



This state of af- fairs exists what- ever the age of the person. But it is increasingly true as one grows older, or when one is not very strong, or has passed the convalescent stage of an illness—the time when vitality is just enough to carry one through im- perative jobs plus the adaptable ones, provided they are done when the de- sire seizes the workers.

Work With Willing Mind.

These times strike an onlooker as ridiculous or amusing if they seem in- opportune. Sometimes they are. Never- theless when the spirit is strong for accomplishment, the body rises to meet its demands. The strain is eased, and as it is this strain, in large meas- ure that saps energy, the proper ad- justment releases it, and work slips away on light wings.

To combat the worker, to reason with her, to prove it is not time to do the task she sets out to perform, is often as draining to mind and physique as the actual labor of performance—and nothing is accomplished. Should she insist on doing what she started out to do, the joy of getting the thing done has oozed away, and with it has gone the atmosphere of ease. The reaction is apt to be what the critic prophesied, because the task is done under fire of rebuke. This may not be verbal, after the first protest, but the spirit of reproof is felt. This does not loose its grip.

Pleasant Help.

It behooves the members of a fam- ily, to refrain from raising objections when one of them has the energy to do a needed bit of work although it would be a difficult time for them to prod themselves to do it. Instead, if they feel the task is too much for her, let them take from the worker's shoulders some of the routine jobs, unostentatiously. This will prove a delight to her, and continue to keep the spirits high, and relieve the per- son from undesirable reactions.

When strength is sufficient, and the worker is in good health, bothersome reactions would scarcely occur, yet none the less, the performance of the adaptable jobs remain for her to do at such times as the work seems easiest. It is not that these pieces of work are unimportant to good housekeeping, but that they are apart from the rou- tine, and hence can be done at the con- venience of the worker.

The Thankful Attitude.

When once we start to give thanks, in place of making complaints, the re- versal, if we have been of a complain- ing nature, will prove a revelation of happiness. We shall be surprised at the good we have, even though we may have it interspersed with misfor- tunes. Today we are looking too much on the disturbing affairs in our lives and not enough on the fortunate ones. The reason for this is that most persons have had reverses of some kind in financial matters. Our eyes are blinded to the truth that money is not everything. Good health is more, yet we worry and complain over our adversities when in good health, until we wear ourselves out and become physically ill. So we add misery to misfortune.

It is true that some things for which to give thanks are what are termed negative rather than positive blessings. We are not in pain. That may be negative, but it certainly is something to be thankful for. We do not go hungry. That is negative, yet it is surely cause for thanks. We have pure air to breathe. Imagine what it must have been on the battlefields, with fumes of gas and fetid odors sur- rounding us. Sweet pure air is a blessing.

Urushi-No-Ki

The original "Lacquer" was an Ori- ental product of Chinese and Jap- anese artists from the sap of the rhus vernicifera, known to the Japanese as Urushi-No-Ki and to the Chinese as Tsichon (varnish tree). The term is at present usually restricted in Amer- lea and Europe to coatings of which the predominant ingredient is a solu- tion of nitrocellulose.

By VIRGINIA VALE

HOLLYWOOD'S champion farmerette is Louise Fazen- da. She has joined the back-to- earth movement with a vengeance. She and her husband purchased a 25-acre apricot grove in the San Fernando valley and cleared away some of the trees to build.

Miss Fazenda didn't want the fruit to go to waste, so she attended lec- tures on agriculture. Then she visited neighboring ranchers and contracted with them to purchase their fruit. Miss Fazenda dried the apricots and real- ized a profit of $1,100. As a result of her farming course she cleared away another two acres, one of which she planted to a variety of fruit trees so the family table will have an assort- ment of fruits in season.

Walter C. Kelly, internationally known stage star, has completed a 23,000 word autobiography which will be published in New York next spring. He has written his experiences behind the footlights. Kelly became famous for his skits dealing with small-town folklore in the tidewater country of Virginia. Currently he is working in Paramount's "The Virginia Judge."

Disappearance of Johnny Weismueller's hair almost proved a serious prob- lem to makeup artists at M. G. M. He let it grow long for his new Tarzan role. Suddenly it was noticed the hair on the back of his head commenced to get shorter. The other day some mem- bers of the company were sitting in a projection room watching the daily rushes. It was noticed on the screen that a small monkey Weismueller car- ried on his back kept nibbling at his hair.

Mugging, in the Hollywood idiom, re- fers to making faces. A "mugger" is one who contorts his features in vari- ous ways largely for getting laughs. Jack Oakie is a "mugger." So are Joe Penner, Lynne Overman, and Ned Sparks, although the latter confines his to one expression. All four happen to be working in Paramount's "Collegiate," which makes the picture a world's champion in a mugging way. Oakie is a 2 to 1 favorite to cop the mugging championship.

Eddie Everett Horton is back from London town and is brightening the prospects of Hollywood comedies once again. Horton, who made a picture at Twickenham studios, tells me it was like a delightful vacation instead of hard work.

He stayed at the Mitre inn in Twick- enham—a hostelry so intimate that it only boasts five guest rooms. As the Horton menage—E. E. was accompa- nied by his mother and a brother—occupied four, there was only one other permanent resident of the Mitre.

"The barmaid was long on history," says E. E. "Each day she would have some little historical anecdote to brighten my life. All her stories cen- tered around Henry VIII, who was supposed to have traveled that way in a playful moment and used the Mitre for a hide-out. But the atmosphere of the inn was so Dickensian that I sug- gested to the barmaid that the worthy author must have had something to do with the inn's history . . . been one of the famous guests.

"Oh, no sir." she lisped, "not at all. We're famous by reason of Henry VIII, sir!"

Sauces, What They Are and How to Make Them, Told by Expert

The word sauce has, in culinary matters, divers meanings. It may be fruit cooked with sugar, until it is of the consistency of a white sauce, or it may have the pieces of the fruit, or whole berries, unbroken in a rich liquid of delectable flavor. It may be a mellow, smooth, thin paste highly seasoned and variously col- ored, a rich sauce for meat or fish or fowl. Or it may be a sweet creamy liquid for puddings and des- serts.

The time for discrimination in the significance of the word has come, however. Some sauces are in real- ity, compotes. This is when the ber- ries or cut fruits remain unbroken, or as nearly so as the kind permits. For example applesauce is not a sauce but a compote when pieces are unbroken. It is a much more epi- curean dish among cooked fruits, than the sauce, which is of strained fruit, and is used much as is a relish. Applesauce is a side dish for pork, and other meats. A compote of ap- ples may be so served, but it may be served for a dessert with cake or rich cookies. Each has its place and is a favorite dish.

Many of the dishes once termed sauces have evolved into relishes, for example, spiced fruits are ac- counted relishes today, while mashed ripe fruits, or slightly cooked and lavishly sweetened fruits become sauces well liked for ice creams and other desserts. It is the sweet sauce that is featured for desserts. The sauce with zest is for meat or fish, entrees of like kind, and for poultry and birds, etc.

For the group of sauces with zest there is one foundation, a roux which may be white or brown according to whether the flour has been browned in the butter or not. A rich roux has equal parts butter and flour, which is thinned with stock, or with milk. The French chefs use stock, and scorn a sauce of this kind that is otherwise made creamy. Water can be used for thinning a founda- tion of one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour—or two of flour, but such a sauce is scarcely worthy the name, it is so inferior. Roux of either kind is a basic sauce, from which many others can be made.

Another group of sauces with zest have nothing in common with the roux group. Mint, sauce for mutton and lamb is one. This has vinegar and mint as principal ingredients with sugar to mellow it. Then there are various kinds with mayonnaise, as a base, or the mayonnaise itself, a very rich sauce for salads, meats and fish. Tartar sauce chiefly for fish has mayonnaise for a foundation, with other ingredients added, such as a little onion, parsley, olives, capers, and pickles all minced. There are endless kinds of salad sauces with mayonnaise as the base such as Russian dressing, Creole sauce, Thousand Island dressing. Or a boiled dressing may be substituted for the olive oil mayonnaise.

SPORTS FANS FOLLOW THE AMERICAN BOY

Boys and yocng men of this city who wish to improve their tennis service, their basket-shooting eyes, their forward passing talent, or their crawl stroke, can enlist the aid of the nation's foremost coaches and players by subscribing to THE AMERICAN BOY magazine and following the sports interviews and fiction stories that appear each month.

"When I was in high school," says a famous decathlon champion, "I read a track article in THE AMERICAN BOY that gave me my first clear-cut idea of the western style of high jumping. At practice I laid the open magazine on the grass and studied as I worked out. That afternoon I increased the height of my jump three inches."

That was a long time ago, but today thousands of future champions just as eagerly follow THE AMERICAN BOY.

"This year," states Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor, "our staff writers have gone to the two greatest football teams of the country—Minnesota and Pittsburgh — for first-hand tips on strategy, blocking, tackling, passing, and the fine points of play. They have interviewed Jack Medica, the world's fastest swimmer, and his coach, Ray Daughters. Gone to East High school of Washington, D. C., Eastern Interscholastic basketball champions. In the past they have followed the Grapefruit Cicuit of the major leagues in Florida, sat on the bench at the Rose Bowl, sought out the famous runners, divers, All-American ends, tackles and backfield men, to bring their story of how to play the game to the younk men of America.

"In addition to our fiction, adventure, exploration, hobby counsel and vocational help, we shall continue to encurage young men to improve their game in every line of sport."

TIMBER STANDS CAN PAY OWN EXPENSES, SAYS RAMSAY

"How may I make my farm wood land a deinite financial asset?" Iowa farmers frequently ask of Guy R. Ramsey, extension forester at Iowa State College.

The problem of paying taxes on woodland when the owner cannot harvest timber for many years is solved easily. In Iowa a land owner may declare the woodland areas on his farm as "forest reservations," thus reducing the taxable valuation of such land to $1 per acre. Such land can be held at this valuation as long as at least 200 trees per acre are maintained and the area is not used for culutivation or pasture.

In an orderly plan of woodland management material derived from cuttings made to improve or thin the stand of timber may be profitable. Such thinnings include posts poles, rails or fuel wood which may be sold or used on the farm. Timber crops furnish winter work, Ramsey explains, at a time when men and teams frequently are unemployed. Good stands of merchantable timber are also an advantage in obtaining credit, for many loans have been made possible because the woodlands were valuable enough to form substantial security for the loan.

Established timber is a permanent producting asset if it is protected from livestock or fire, cut or thinned to insure the quality of the remaining trees and practice of a cutting policy that will enable the owner to have a continuous crop from the woodland.

Timber grown on rough or waste and prevents erosion and provides income from land otherwise of little value.

The 1936 Conference will be held at Cedar Rapids, opening Sept 18. The Rev. Ira Hawley of Des Moines is the Conference superintendent.

The assignments made and which wil be of interest to readers of the Times include:

Goodell, Rev Harry Herlein; Ventura, Rev Harry Dirks; Stilson Rev. C. O. Winters; Letts, Rev. Harry Buss; Newberg, Rev. Wm. M. Suckow; Moravia, Rev. F. Scott.

WERE MARRIED AT REFORMED PARSONAGE TUESDAY P. M.

Miss Marie Nonweiler and Mr. Leon Goll were united in marriage Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Klemme Reformed Parsonage. Rev. Calvin Grosshuesch performer the ceremony.

The Bride, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Nonweiler of near Garner, wore a black silk dress, while the Groom, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Goll, of near Garner, wore a suit of Oxford gray.

Both of these fine young people come from the best of families in this community and have a large host of friends who extend to them nothing but best wishes for a happy future.

At the present the young couple will make ther home with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Goll.

JOHN LASS ISSUED PATENT ON FLY TRAP

John Lass of Klemme was granted a patent, according to a report from Robert M. Dunning, St. Paul Patent Attorney The patent was issued on September 17th.

Mr Lass' patent is entitled "Fly-trap". This device includes a mason jar, which is inverted. A collar screws to the end of the jar, and supports four spring legs of flat strip metal. A cylinder of screen encloses the top portion of these legs Slightly below the bottom of the screen notches are formed in each leg, and a pan is inserted between the legs and held under spring tension in the notches. A substantially conical screen is supported above the pan by the collar and extends into the jar. An opening at the top end of the cone permits flies to enter the jar.

Application for the patent was made on October 9, 1934, and the patent issued with one claim as No. 2,014,500.

A man died the other day in a metropolitan city from starvation while he had hundreds of dollars in his pockets; figure that out, if you can.

OKLAHOMA YOUNG MAN'S ARM BROKEN IN AUTO MISHAP

M. C. Rudd, a young man from Oklahoma, who had been working at he Paul Stromer farm for about a week, received a fractured left arm and his companions. George, Jim and Billie Wilson, were also injured Saturday night when the Wilson Chevrolet car went into the ditch near the Wm. Smith farm a mile south and a half mile east of Klemme. Billie Wilson suffered a brain concussion and was unconcious for a time but is recovering. The Wilson boys are sons of Fred Wilson, farmer northwest of Klemme.

Dorothy Greiman, daughter of Ben F Greiman, and Lucille Greiman, daughter of Henry Greiman, who were passengers in the car were not injured. The accident happened when the party were coming into Klemme from the southeast and one of the Wilson boys driving the car failed to see the sharp corner ahead. The injuries were caused by the car hitting the ditch and bouncing. The front end of the car was damaged by the impact against the ditch bank.

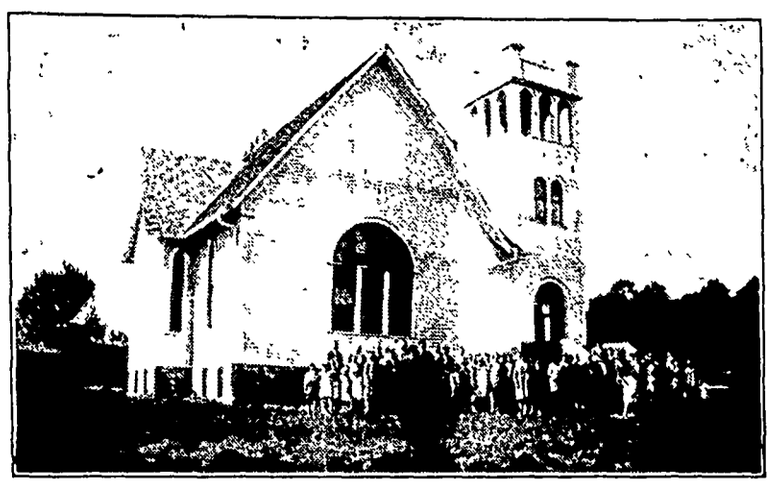
HISTORY OF LIBERTY CHURCH

By Herman J. Stille



In the early seventies there were not many families living in this part of the country. The prairies were as God made them. No stock had grazed on them. They were covered with the most beautiful wild flowers.

There were no roads nor bridges The early setlers had to make their own trails and had to ford the river and creeks. There was no church and no school houses Garner was the nearest town. The people went to Garner to meeting. The people road in lumber wagons as that was the only vehicle they had and most of them did not even have a spring seat.

Then a school house was built a mile and a half northwest of here. It was called the center school. As more families moved in the German Methodist pastor of Garner came and held meetings in this school house. The people came far and wide and took great interest in these meetings.

The first pastor who came from Garner to hold meetings in this school house was Rev W. Henke, who served this charge in 1876 and 1877. He was followed by Rev. C. F. Tramm in 1878. In 1879 Rev. G. Haefner was sent to this charge as pastor. In 1883 Rev. Wm. Koerner became pastor and stayed two years During his second year a church was built upon this spot.

For nine years meetings were held in Center school house. Many persons received peace in their souls and several young men went out to preach the Gospel.

The new church was a rectangular building with a high steeple that could be seen from far around. The new church was dedicated September 20th, just fifty years ago. It is in honor of this event that we are celebrating its fiftieth anniversary today. The people rejoiced over their new house of worship and went on with their religious work with re-newed interest.

It may be well to say here that in the younger generation there are many who do not show the respect for the house of God that their fore-fathers felt. Perhaps it is because they do not understand that although we helped to build and pay for the church, it does not belong to us, but to God, because it was dedicated to God. And He is there in it and will meet usu when we come to worship Him. If this idea were impressed more earnestly upon the children by their parents pehaps they would feel more reverence for the House of God when they enter it.

The first pastor to preach in the new church was Rev A. Dulitz in 1885 and 1886. Rev. J J. Spicker followed for two years. Then Rev. H Kaste followed for one year. As the demands upon the pastor increased from year to year, a pastor F. Wellemeyer, and an assistant, H. Schwietert, were sent here in 1890. In 1893 the charge received two ministers, H Schuldt and Rev. W. W Mentz. In the meantime the town of Klemme had come into existence and the latter minister lived there At this time Germantown and Klemme were separated from Garner and they became a new charge.

Rev. G. Haefner became the first regular pastor. It was by no means a weak field having 196 full members and 26 probation members. The next pastor was H. Hilmer who came in 1897 A. M. Brenner then had charge of the field for three years.

During this time the congregation grew smaller as many families moved away. Rev. A Dulitz came here in 1901 and stayed three years From 1904 till 1910 Rev. G. Wessel was pastor here and worked with success. The church at this time was remodeled and enlarged by an addition on the north side.

In 1910 Rev. H. W. Schneider came as pastor to this charge. During these later years many of the pioneer members passed to their home above, and their children filled their places. From 1913 to 1916 Rev Wm. Witter was stationed here Then came Rev. A. Meyer who again remodeled the church as it is now. Rev. Wm. Bergman served as pastor from 1921 to 1923.

Then Rev. A. Gauger served from 1923 to 1928. After this came Rev. Whyte who stayed four years. Rev. J. L. Ralston served two years with success.

Rev. W. Zabilka , our present pastor, is earnestly endeavoring to revive and strengthen the spiritual life of these congregations, and if we, the members of today, attend the services faithfully and take an active interest in the church work and support the pastor as did our pioneer fathers, we will see the spiritual congregations grow as it did in pioneer days.

Jim Reed's Entertained At A "Treasure Hunt" Party

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Reed entertained a number of friends and neighbors at a "Treasure Hunt" party last Thursday evening.

Just a few minutes before eight o'clock Mrs. Reed gave her guests a list of articles that she informed them they could find, buy or steal and that 11:00 o'clock was the dead-line for all to return with as many articles as each could get. The group was divided and two couples went in each car in search of the "treasure" such as a button shoe, hat-pin, 1910 nickel, Indian head penny, 1933 auto licenso plate, red ear of corn, a Garner cafe menu of that day, theatre program, Ben Hur perfume, hair from a horse's mane, an acorn, peice of pink gingham, a picture of President Roosevelt, and several other articles. Many of the articles were not so easy to find and but two car loads completed the entire list. Art Kudjc and his load were the first to report in and had found the entire list and so were awarded a prize.

After all had returned Mrs. Reed served a delicious lunch.

HIGHWAY BOARD CALLS FOR PAVING BIDS

Eight Railroad Crossings Will Be Eliminated This Fall

The state highway commission called for bids Friday, to be opened October 1, on eight railroad crossing elimination projects, 10 miles of paving, and more than score of bridge and grading projects. Most of the projects are included in the $10,000,000 crossing elimination and farm-to-market federal program for Iowa.

Among the projects listed was 0.7 miles on highway 179 from U. S. 69 east into Klemme.

The copper water pipes and sewer connections have all been finished and the streets are in readiness for the paving, which is to be laid this fall.

FATHER OF MRS. E. J. NELSON DIED AT ROLLAND, IOWA

Funeral services for Mr. H. J. Prescott, aged 90 years ,was held at Rolland, Iowa, on Sunday, September 22nd. Mr. Prescott passed away on Thursday.

The E. J. Nelson family attended the funeral and Mrs. Nelson remained at Rolland for a few days.

"Boys, I've quit the hold-up game,
I'll hang around joints no more."
So with a sigh
And a faint little cry
The garter fell down on the floor.

Prohibit Civil Flying Over Aleutian Islands

Government Closes Isles to Private Airplanes.

Washington.—The Aleutian islands, a festoon of land fragments strung from the Alaska peninsula for 1,500 miles across the north Pacific ocean, constitute the latest area of the United States over which flying by civil airplanes is prohibited. The islets are the subject of a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"The Aleutians served as a base for naval seaplanes in recent naval maneuvers in the Pacific ocean, and in 1924 the island chain was followed by United States army flyers on their way around the world," says the bulletin.

"Alighting on the Aleutian islands with planes fitted with wheels would be difficult, but nearly all the islands are deeply indented and provide every few miles little sheltered coves, land-locked harbors, or lakes on which pontoon-fitted planes can come to rest in an emergency.

"Kodiak village on Kodiak island furnishes the last possible base for airplanes near the Alaskan mainland before the beginning of the long crescent sweep of the Aleutians, which extend for 1,500 miles almost to the peninsula of Kamchatka, eastern outpost of the Soviet union.

Not Severely Cold.

"Although the Aleutians are as far north as central Canada their climate is not severely cold. Rather they may be said to be always chilly, damp, and foggy. Fog is anything but an asset to the flyer; but the Aleutian fog has the good point, at least, of being less dense than the fog of more southern lands.

"Dutch harbor, Unalaska, is the first harbor of importance in the islands. This deep, land-locked harbor is one of the finest in the North and played an important part as a way station for ships during the gold rushes to the Yukon and Nome. It is connected with the rest of the world by a radio station.

"Atka, several hundred miles farther west, is approximately the half way house of the Aleutian chain, and on it is one of the last settlements west of the mainland. Nazan bay, which gives an excellent harbor to Atka, is often clear of fog when it hangs heavily outside.

"After Atka is passed the islands for 500 miles westward are practically uninhabited. Then comes Attu, the last of the Aleutians, the westernmost bit of land at all connected with the American continent over which the Stars and Stripes wave.

"This little outpost of America is beyond the 180th degree of longitude and so is technically in the eastern hemisphere. However, the International Date Line has been bulged out around it, so that all the Aleutians are included in the same time system. When it is Monday on the eastern side of the Date Line, it is Tuesday on the western side.

Built by Volcanic Action.

"Volcanic in origin, the Aleutian islands today are studded with conical peaks hiding active and inactive volcanoes. Most interesting, geologically, is Bogoslof, famous for its jack-in-the-box antics.

"The Aleutians are neither very warm nor very cold. Dutch harbor's mean temperature is 39 degrees, with a low of 30 above zero in January and a high of 52 in July. The annual rain fall of 63 inches is high. There are some 250 rainy days in a year, making the Aleutians one of the rainiest regions in the territory of the United States. Nevertheless water supplies are limited because there are no great watersheds or rivers. Vegetables can be grown only under glass. There is no wood on the islands; natives use driftwood and animal oils for heat. Fogs hang over the islands the year round. Gales lash the coasts, making anchorage most treacherous.

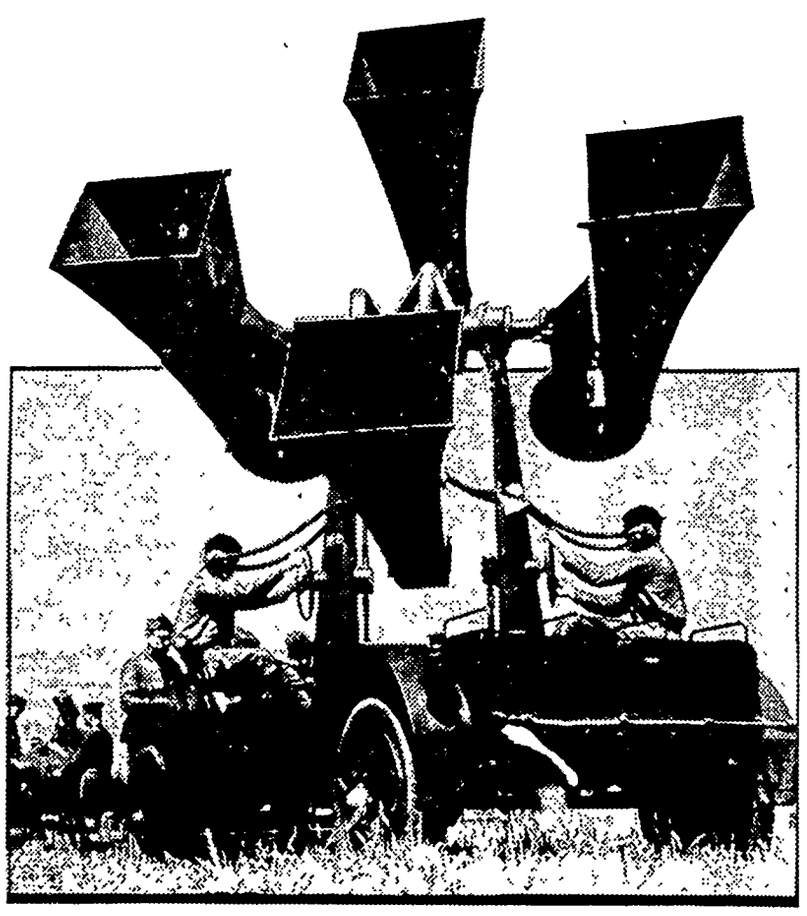
"Discovered by Russian explorers in the middle of the Eighteenth century, the Aleutian islands were inhabited by some 25,000 natives—Aleuts, who lived like Eskimos but looked like Asiatics. Fur-bearing animals ran wild on the islands. Hordes of hunters from the mainland of Asia followed the explorers, swooping down on the Aleuts, exploiting, enslaving, killing—in a mad grab for skins. When, in 1867, Russia transferred all its American possessions to the United States, only a thousand-odd Aleuts had survived.

"Today some of the natives engage in breeding the blue fox, a valuable fur-bearing animal."

Finds Fingerprints of Ape Like Man's

Melbourne.—When monkeys and an ape in the Melbourne zoo had their fingerprints taken by Detective L. H. Thomas, fingerprint expert, he found at first glance not even an expert could tell the difference between prints made by an ape or a large monkey and the fingerprints of a man. All the human loops, whorls and bifurcations were there and each print could be classified in exactly the same way as a set of human fingerprints.

"Ears of the Army" at Work



The United States army's huge "ears," sound locators tuned to pick up noises which might come from "enemy" aircraft or infantry, as seen in the war maneuvers at Camp Pine, N. Y. These locators are synchronized with the huge searchlights and once a sound is picked up, the lights reveal the cause of the disturbance.

Ancient Skull Is Unearthed in Nebraska

Said to Prove Antiquity of Man in America.

Washington.—The "second cousins" of the famous Neanderthal men—those half-ape, half-human beings that preceded mankind in Europe—once may have roamed the Nebraska plains.

After an exhaustive study of an Indian skull fragment found in the midwest state, Dr. Alex Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology of the Smithsonian institution, said it had decided Neanderthal characteristics, although obviously of fairly recent origin.

The fragment was discovered by Earl H. Bell of the University of Nebraska while excavating in a large mound of undetermined age near the site of a prehistoric Indian village.

The skull fragment coupled with the recently found Folsom arrowhead points proves conclusively that the America before Columbus extended back for thousands if not tens of thousands of years. The Folsom points are distinctly American in character and date from the early glacier periods approximately the same time as that of the skull fragment.

Doctor Hrdlicka found that the skull fragment had belonged to a middle-aged male Indian and was normal except in one abnormality. It had large bony ridges over the eyes, one of the prominent characteristics of the true Neanderthal skull and those of great apes. These ridges have virtually degenerated in modern mankind.

In the Nebraska Indian skull the ridges were pronounced and about half as prominent as those of the Neanderthaler as compared with modern man, the anthropologist said.

Doctor Hrdlicka stressed that the skull did not indicate that Neanderthal men actually lived in America, but rather that there was some sort of ancestral connection between prehistoric Americans and Neanderthalers somewhere outside America.

"We are justified in regarding such occurrences as reminiscences, more or less, of early stages in the evolution of the human skull, but not as uninterrupted connections and especially not as a safe index of the antiquity of the specimens that show such characters," Doctor Hrdlicka wrote in a report on the skull for the American Journal of Physical Anthropology.

FIGHTS FOR AAA

The newly organized League for Economic Equality, with headquarters at Sioux City, Iowa, which hopes to raise $100,000 among farmers in the Middle West to carry on a court fight for the AAA, has elected as their head, Alvern S. Wendel, prominent Woodbury county, Iowa, farmer. The league is fighting to retain benefits for farmers under provisions of AAA.

Great Britain Prevents Sale of Spies' Secrets

London.—Secrets of Great Britain's espionage network in the days of the Napoleonic wars are believed to have narowly escaped being revealed for the first time in Sotheby's sale rooms in London.

Their probable publication was prevented when the foreign office unexpectedly gave warning that the document in which the secrets are believed to be contained would be liable to confiscation under the official secrets act. As a result, there is considerable likelihood that they may be taken to the United States for sale.

The documents are a part of the papers of Lord Stuart de Rothesay, British ambassador in Paris early in the Ninteenth century, and belong to the earl of Abingdon, who was offering the entire lot for auction.

They include a series of 52 letters from the duke of Wellington to Stuart de Rothesay between 1814 and 1830, chiefly dealing with France after the fall of Napoleon; correspondence of great importance between Stuart and Admiral Lord Berkeley, chief commander on the Portuguese coast from 1810 to 1812; "official letters and dispatches from Portugal, 1810-'13," and dispatches from Lord Nelson and the duke of Wellington.

President Roosevelt appointed as chairman of the social security board John G. Winant, former Republican governor of New Hampshire. He is to serve six years and his annual salary will be $10,000.

"Hermit of the Platte" Is Alone for 69 Years

Tekamah, Neb.—The dean of Nebraska hermits is Fremont "Old Monte" Haswell, seventy-six years old, "Hermit of the Platte," who lives near the Missouri river, northeast of here. Except for two short intervals he has lived 69 years with only chickens and cats for companions on a tract homesteaded by his father in 1866.

Dog Adopts Two Rabbits

Greensboro, N. C.—A dog owned by W. M. Davis has adopted two young rabbits. The dog caught the rabbits in a field, brought them to its bed under Davis' home, and watches them carefully whenever they venture out to play.

Fish Bite, Bell Rings

Damariscotta, Maine.—Wilder Robinson has put fishing on a scientific basis. After casting at Biscay lake, he leaves his pole on a landing. When he gets a bite, a bell rings, and he hauls in the catch.

Huey Long Is Dead
Power in Personality
A Ship of Horror
Bathtub Danger

Huey Long is dead at forty-two years of age.

Arthur Brisbane

The world says: "How young, how pitiful, to die without full opportunity!"

Everything is comparative, Alexander the Great, who died at thirty-two, was ruler of half the world at twenty-five; Keats died at twenty-six; Shelley at thirty. Today, men do not develop as rapidly as in old days, when Napoleon thought of suicide because he had done nothing at an age that found Alexander ruler of the world.

The death of Huey Long, regretted throughout a nation that loathes cowardly assassination, is important not alone because of Senator Long's powerful personality, but also because of its possible effect on the national election of 1936.

Senator Long is gone; his power ceases, as though he had never lived. Others will pick up the reins of power, in New Orleans and Louisiana; another will take his place in the senate. Efforts, futile, will be made to find "another Huey Long."

There is nothing left but the memory of a powerful man, again emphasizing Goethe's definition of "personality," "as the highest good fortune of earth's children."

France discourages crime, and really discourages it. The dreaded prison ship, La Martiniere, is on her way to the criminal colony in French Guiana with 773 convicts locked in eight strong iron cages in the hold, with iron bars, cement floors, wooden benches, hammocks, and overhead a criss-cross of pipes that would fill the cages with deadly live steam if mutiny broke out.

No parole board sits in French Guiana. Each man ordered to the ship receives a new suit of clothes, a blanket, an extra pair of wooden shoes. That, with perhaps a few books and packages of chocolate from relatives, constitutes his wealth as, wrists chained, the convicts march, single file, up the gangplank, between rows of bayonets.

They go to prison, to stay in prison. It is a hard system, but being murdered on the American plan is also a hard system.

Within a few days two women, one past sixty, the other seventy years old, have been found dead in their bathtubs, apparently drowned. The slippery surface of a porcelain tub is dangerous for older persons. They should observe the greatest care; a slip, the head striking the edge of the tub, can easily cause unconsciousness, followed by drowning.

Rubber factories should make and extensively advertise rubber mats for the bottom of bathtubs, with a suction arrangement to prevent slipping.

While the League of Nations talks peace and arbitration Mussolini recalls his consuls from various places in Ethiopia, reminding you of the clergyman who had a call to a large city. His little daughter said, "Papa is in his library, praying for light, and mamma is upstairs packing."

The Douglas airliner, called the "Flying Laboratory," has just flown from Kansas City to Newark, N. J., through the "sub-stratosphere," which means about 20,000 feet up. At that height very "thin" air, with engine supercharged and propellers properly "tilted," makes high speed possible. The flight was 1,125 miles, nonstop; passengers wore oxygen masks.

Mr. Max Baer, of the Jewish race, will fight on September 24 Mr. Joe Louis, of the African negro race, and already $300,000 worth of the tickets have been sold. The price for a good seat is $25.

Mr. Baer, who gave a pitiful exhibition, not long ago, when he permitted his "heavyweight championship of the world" to wriggle off of the hook, now promises to "chase that boy (Joe Louis) out of the ring in two rounds."

Publicly Mr. Joe Louis gives an imitation of "Br'er Rabbit," and says little.

Maneuvers demonstrating French war power, as it stands today, convince European experts that France possesses "the strongest military machine in the world." She possesses, also, men willing to fight, as shown at Verdun and elsewhere.

The government, floating five hundred million dollars more of interest-bearing notes, rejoices because they are snapped up "in a day." Of course they are "snapped up" under prevailing conditions. Men with money are as glad to hide it away in government notes and bonds as men in a cyclone country are glad, temporarily, to hide away in cyclone cellars.

Little Lights on LIVING

POWER AND LIGHT

EMBLAZONED across the sky at night, sometimes far distant, one can see when approaching a town, the great bright letters of an electric sign, bearing the words, POWER AND LIGHT SERVICE.

What an eternal truth and spiritual message our public utilities are writing across our skies—that power and light brings service! Dean Inge of London has said that as man's love for light progressively increases his need for government progressively decreases. Light is truth, and education is the process of determining truth. Knowledge is power but wisdom is light. Education must include both, that is why true education builds character. Power with light is character and character manifests itself through service, that great vital force of the human heart. Light is truth, where there is no light there is no truth. The Master said, "I am the way, the truth, and the light."

Power without light is a blind unguided force, while power with light builds the human race. As the human family receives more light through education and culture, it will also receive more spiritual guidance to manipulate those powerful forces which science has discovered in our mechanical age and it will learn to use them for the benefit, and not for the destruction of mankind. Light comes through education and acts of the human heart much as brakes check speed on a high powered car.

War for instance, is power without light, for its goal is selfishness, not service. High powered explosives are made to kill. Chemistry in the hands of a militarist kills, in the hands of a physician, cures. What is the difference? One is power without light—selfishness, the other is power with light—service.

A European scientist was once working in his laboratory on a God-like experiment, hoping to eradicate much of the disease of the world through his discoveries. Suddenly one day without warning he was commanded by his government to come into its laboratories, to discover gases for the next war. His laboratory was power with light, the other power without light; his was for human service, the other for human slaughter.

What would become of our modern methods of living if this public utility-power and light—service were to be removed? And what would become of the human race if this spiritual truth—service from power and light were removed? Perhaps we should better ask, what could not the potentiality of the human race really be if this truth were put into practice in men's hearts?

SYMMETRY IN LIVING

THERE are two symmetries in life which each individual must master, if he would adapt himself to the fine art of fine living. The first one lies within himself, which gives him perfect equilibrium of spirit. This comes from a deep assurance and certainty that his life is built securely on the fundamentals of right living.

I regret for our youth today, that our older generation has failed to pass on to them this sense of security and beauty of symmetry in our modern expressions of living, such as our unexplainable modern art, some of our dissonant music, and our silver screen distortions of sex, love, and home life. Our barren current literature, too, has had its part in taking away what little security might be left to youth by featuring such phrases as "Time of Great Moral Uncertainty," "Morals in a Day of Relativity," "The Changing Moral Trend," and "An Unmoored Age and the New Morality." Mathew Arnold said—"Culture is contact with the best that has been thought and said."

The love of beauty in the ancient Greeks caused their time to be called the Classic age, because it has endured throughout the ages. Standing on the Acropolis one full moon night, I say the silvered Parthenon, I should rather say I felt it in my heart. That was only symmetry in cold stone, how far greater when found in human life. Plato's matchless words bespeak it thus: "Culture is that thing that brings to body and soul all the beauty, all the perfection of which they are capable."

Four avenues we have for self-realization, which must precede our self-expression, if we would have symmetry in living. They are, "work, play, emotional control and spiritual nutrition." Our inner symmetry must balance all of these. If we be weak in any one, we are only as strong as our weakest point. It is not what we do but what we are that brings us to our highest level. "We are so busy doing, that we haven't time to be," and yet the symmetry of life is found in Personality. The second of the two necessary symmetries of fine living lies with the world outside. Enrichment of life is useful only when shared, then others catch its radiance. This must be passed on to youth if our race is to continue to improve, for it isn't "What life is made of, but what life is made for," that counts. Eternal love of beauty that comes from the depth of a human heart to the world outside, brings symmetry in living.

HUNTING LAWS BEING PRINTED

Numerous request for printed copies of the game laws prompts the Conservation Commission to make the following explanation of the delay.

The squirrel and rabbit open seasons and bag limits have not been changed from 1934. An early bulletin explained this. However, pheasant, quail and waterfowl seasons are set at a later date because it is necessary to determine certain factors before declaring open seasons to prevent the shooting of seed stock. It is necessary to wait until a proper consus can be made and this cannot be done until late in the summer or early fall. This has been done and public hearings have have been held in acordance with the law to obtain additional evidence and to obtain the public's views on the tentative seasons as proposed by the Commission as the result of their study and findings. The last of the hearings was held on September 20th. The result now goes to the Commission for final adoption and procedure to make the regulations have the effect of law. As soon as they are adopted they will be printed in pamphlet form and distributed to hunters and interested persons These will be distributed well in advance of the next open season which will be October 21st for waterfowl if the Commission adopts the Federal regulations in this respect. Until that time there are no other seasons open except squirrel and rabbit and as stated before there have been no changes made in these and they will remain the same until such time when new rules are adopted.

The pamphlet containing the new hunting regulations will also contain the trapping regulations and rules for taking fur bearing animals.

Very few states now distribute books containing all laws, rules and regulations because it is almost impossibe to set open seasons and bag limits a year in advance. The number of States that are delegating the authority to their Commissions to establish open seasons, bag and possession limits and rules for taking fish and game is increasing because it is realized that to determine the stock of game first and then declaring open or closed seasons, is important.

Books containing all statutes, rules and regulaions are confusing to those only wanting to know on what days they can hunt certain game and are extremely expensive to print. This year many changes have been made in the statutes that affect all phases of conservation and also this year all laws of the State are recodified. It will be necessary to wait until Section and Chapter number are assigned to all laws before they can be printed.

Becoming Sports Frock With Jabot Is "The Top"

PATTERN 2341

It is not easy to find a sports frock that plays No Favorites when it comes to showing up the imperfect figure. But here's one that flatters regardless, by the very simple device of a rippling jabot collar. But notice that our designer has not sacrificed one whit of the tailored chic and easy freedom the sports frock needs. The pleated sleeve for arm action—pleats in back bodice and skirt for freedom. Here is just the most perfect model for one of the lovely new printed satins that are being shown in such delicious pastel shades. A tie silk would be lovely and any number of cottons are available for a simpler version. Accent with matching buttons.

Pattern 2341 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3⅞ yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth St., New York City.

Smiles

AND THAT'S THAT

Husband—Will you miss me when I am away.

Wife—I guess I will. You've always been too good a dodger at home.

Camouflage

"How did you get away from the traffic cop who was after you for speeding? Did you fool him?"

"Well, not exactly, but we did manage to throw dust in his eyes."

A Sure Sign

Johnny—We're going to move soon.

Tommy—How do you know?

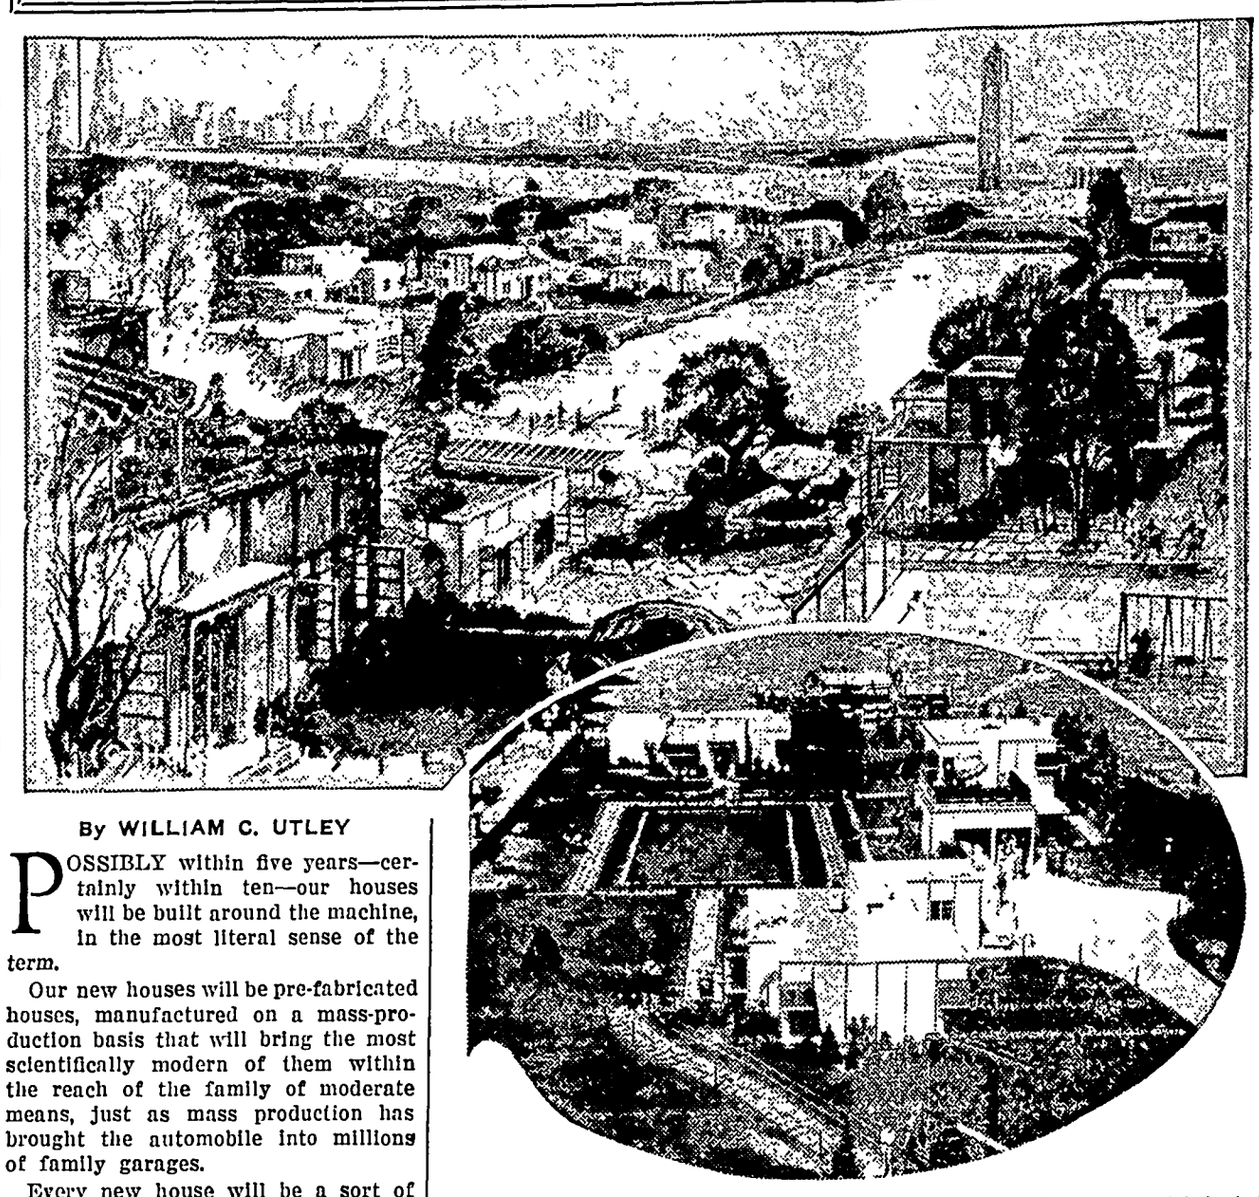
Johnny—I broke one of our windows and muvver never said a word. —Fredericton Gleaner.

No Such Motor

Mother (doing a cross-word puzzle)—Give me the name of a motor that starts with "T."

Father (fed up)—Aw, don't be silly. They all use gas.

Motorized "Zipper" Houses of Future



The above rather elaborate conception of a colony of the new pre-fabricated, motorized houses, drawn by Hugh Ferriss, has been offered Purdue university for study in its new housing course. Inset: Part of the colony of motorized homes which is being visited by 1,000 persons an hour at Cambridge, Mass.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

POSSIBLY within five years—certainly within ten—our houses will be built around the machine, in the most literal sense of the term.

Our new houses will be pre-fabricated houses, manufactured on a mass-production basis that will bring the most scientifically modern of them within the reach of the family of moderate means, just as mass production has brought the automobile into millions of family garages.

Every new house will be a sort of "zipper" house whose parts can be "buttoned" together and "unbuttoned" again with the greatest of ease. All houses will be of a pleasing simplicity of design. All will have flat roofs that will be so much more "living surface" in pleasant weather. All houses will be air-conditioned in all kinds of weather.

In the center of every house will be a compact, electrically driven motor unit which will furnish power for the hundreds of tasks which make housekeeping a chore today, will heat the house in winter and cool it in summer.

These are not idealistic fancies, framed in fragile smoke rings from the dream pipes of impractical social planning bugs. They are facts.

For such houses already exist, both individually and in communities. Their manufacture and design is being fostered by some of the biggest and most progressive industrial giants of the day.

Houses for Low Incomes.

For the principal strides in developing houses of this sort the credit must go to Owen D. Young, head of General Electric company and to Foster Gunnison, president of Houses, Inc. Houses, Inc., has been formed not to build houses, but to conduct research for the entire building trade "through which new ideas in home building will be tested and cleared and also to culture, assist in the management of, or help finance any worthy project designed to produce modern homes that will be within easy financial reach of those with low incomes."

Houses, Inc., has been subsidized by General Electric. Mr. Gunnison has been one of the leaders in the pre-fabricated housing movement. Motorized, pre-fabricated houses, already past the experimental stage, have been assembled at White Plains, N. Y., Garden City, L. I., New York city, Boston and Philadelphia. At Boston there is a whole colony of such houses which is visited by thousands of persons daily.

Purdue university, at Lafayette, Ind., for the administration of its new course, "The New Science of Better Living," is preparing to start a whole modern community to use as a gargantuan laboratory for the study of tomorrow's scientific housing.

David Ross, chairman of the board of trustees of the university, has donated 143 acres of land where the new village will be assembled. Here every house will be subjected to extreme temperatures and weather conditions and even man-made earthquakes and cyclones. In thirty days it will go through the same rigors that the ordinary house suffers in the course of twenty years.

What interesting possibilities these new houses offer!

Suppose Jack Edwards of Chicago and Mrs. Edwards have just finished paying for their new house. At last, after long saving and struggle their ambition to "own their own home" has become a glorious and happy reality. Then, suddenly, Jack's firm decides to transfer him to New Orleans. Must they give up the lovely dwelling they have worked so hard to own?

House-Moving Is Easy.

No, indeed. Jack simply calls the movers. They take screw-drivers and unbutton the little house, lift it aboard their truck and soon it is rolling gaily along to Dixie. Only a new cement foundation need be built. That is a simple matter that should take no more than a couple of weeks.

Should the new climate suggest a different way of laying out the rooms, why that is a simple matter, too. They can be buttoned together again in whatever arrangement its owners desire. And if the young couple would like to have a guest room to make it more convenient for his or her folks to visit them in New Orleans next winter, a couple of new panels can be bought, buttoned on and made into a new room. When the Edwardses feel affluent enough to own something more on the scale of a southern mansion, they can add a whole new story just as easily.

Fresh air fiends and those of us who like to feed poetic souls by flinging windows open to the balmy breezes of spring are likely to be a little chagrined with the new type of house. Here the spring breeze is not a pleasant zephyr, but an annoying draft. For this is an air-conditioned house, remember. The motor unit draws in the outside air with a central fan, washes it, purifies it and heats it or cools it. For that reason complete insulation from the outside temperatures is essential. The air supplied by the motor unit is in reality fresher and better to breathe than the outside air, no matter what the weather.

Roofs of the new houses can be flat for sun decks and play areas because these buildings, even though they be only one story high, are built like skyscrapers. So complete will be the insulation from heat and cold, you can invite friends over whenever you want to for a weiner roast—with the bonfire built on the roof! The houses will also be lightning-proof, cyclone-proof and even earthquake-proof.

The pre-fabricated walls are proof against sound and termites. They are made of steel, with panels of pressed asbestos and cement. They are practically indestructible. They feel like stucco and yet nails can be driven into them.

Modernists Make Concession.

Only the front door will be made of wood—a true concession on the part of the designers to allow for some little shred of the home-maker's sentiment to remain. Mr. Gunnison explains it:

"We don't want to be too modernistic. The housewife wants the 'feel' of wood on the door as she enters. It's more domestic—not so mechanical, somehow. Everything in the house has been done from her point of view."

It is easy to suppose that the housewife will really be more interested in the "feel" of machinery at her fingertips, ready to do most of her work for her. From that standard, certainly the house has been designed with her in mind. Despite the fact that it may be located in the remotest suburb or on a farm, the house is more like an efficient metropolitan apartment, set off by itself and a roof placed over it.

Everything is easy to do. Walls are of washable fabric. Closets are cedar lined. Floors are made of compressed hardwood panels. Windows are of the steel casement type, which open with a little crank, like those in an automobile. There are metal storm windows and screens.

There are no cellars in this house. There is nothing to go into the cellar. All the heating, plumbing and domestic mechanical equipment is contained in the motor unit on the first floor. This mechanical nerve center of the home has been called one of the most important scientific contributions to the building industry in years.

Machines Do It All.

A steel cabinet, hardly larger than a pantry, contains the motor unit. If there are two floors, this "core" extends also to the second floor to serve additional baths there. The front of the unit forms one wall of the kitchen. Along this wall is the kitchen "workbench." It is a single, streamlined unit of monel metal and enamel, which contains a range, an electric refrigerator, electric clock, mechanical dishwasher and dryer, shadowless indirect lighting unit, basin and work table with drawers and cupboards scientifically arranged to save steps for the housewife. There are no cooking odors in this kitchen, for, in addition to the air-conditioning, there is an exhaust fan.

On the other side of the kitchen wall, inside the unit, is all the heavier equipment—the water heater, air-conditioning machine and the furnace (which is much smaller than furnaces we are accustomed to today), all of them automatic, of course.

Next to the kitchen is the bathroom, and, this, too, has one wall facing the motor unit. From this wall come the bathtub with shower attachment, an electric heater for the extra warmth that is sometimes desirable in the bath on chilly mornings, and a lavatory big enough to bathe the baby in. The toilet also projects from this wall; it does not touch the floor, leaving plenty of room for brush and mop.
